Contributors

Ana M. Bojica, PhD, is Assistant Professor in the Department of Management at the University of Granada, Spain. Her research focuses on the relational capacities and processes that enable value creation in specific entrepreneurship domains such as women’s entrepreneurship, social entrepreneurship and corporate entrepreneurship. She is co-author of several articles and book chapters on this topic.

Susan Coleman is a Professor of Finance at the University of Hartford located in West Hartford, Connecticut, USA. She teaches courses in entrepreneurial and corporate finance at both the undergraduate and graduate levels. Dr Coleman’s research interests include entrepreneurial and small business finance. She has published extensively on the topic of financing women-owned firms and is frequently quoted in the business press. Dr Coleman is currently writing a book (with Alicia Robb) entitled A Rising Tide: Financing Strategies for Women-owned Firms.

Sarah Y. Cooper, PhD, is Senior Lecturer in Entrepreneurship in the University of Edinburgh Business School at the University of Edinburgh, UK. Her research examines technology commercialization, women’s role in entrepreneurship and enterprise education. She is co-author of The Management of Innovation in High Technology Small Firms and New Firms in the Biotechnology Industry: Their Contribution to Innovation and Growth.

Cristina Díaz García, PhD, is Assistant Professor in the Department of Business Administration in the School of Economics and Business at the Albacete Campus of the University of Castilla-La Mancha in Spain. She is author of the book Influencia del género en los recursos y resultados de las pequeñas empresas and publications in scientific journals and international conferences’ proceedings. Her research interests are in gender, entrepreneurship and, recently, innovation.

Caroline Essers, PhD, is an Assistant Professor at the Nijmegen School of Management, Radboud University of Nijmegen, and an Associate Professor at the VU Amsterdam, the Netherlands. She holds a master’s degree in human geography. Her research focuses on the identity construction of female entrepreneurs of Moroccan and Turkish descent. She previously worked for the Department of the Middle East, Radboud University of Nijmegen. Caroline has published her work in various journals, such as Organization Studies, Human Relations, Organization, and Gender, Work and Organization.
Contributors

Majbritt Rostgaard Evald received her PhD from the Faculty of Social Sciences, University of Southern Denmark (SDU). She is currently Associate Professor at the Department of Entrepreneurship and Relationship Management at SDU. Her research is mainly focused on corporate entrepreneurship, with a particular interest in sources of open innovation. She has published some articles and book chapters including a co-authored chapter in International Research Handbook on Successful Women Entrepreneurs. Currently she is co-editing an international textbook on entrepreneurship.

Nicholas C. Fairclough, LLB, MBA (University of Virginia), is a doctoral student in the Department of Strategic Management and Organization at the University of Alberta, Canada. Prior to his current studies he was an English-qualified lawyer for 15 years, working in the banking and private equity sectors in Europe and the Far East. Latterly, he worked as a consultant to Andersen Worldwide in Geneva. His research interests are institutional theory, networks and alliances, and the organization and management of professional service firms.

M. Mar Fuentes-Fuentes, PhD, is Full Professor at the Department of Management at the Faculty of Economics and Business, University of Granada, Spain. Her research interests include women entrepreneurs, academic entrepreneurship, social capital and quality management. She is co-editor of Entrepreneurship: An Approach to the State of the Art.

Patricia G. Greene, PhD, is the President’s Distinguished Professor in Entrepreneurship at Babson College, USA. Her research specializes in the combination of opportunities, resources, and leadership to create value. Her most recent book is the edited volume The Development of University-Based Entrepreneurship Ecosystems: Global Practices (with Fetters, Rice and Butler).

Diana M. Hechavarria is a doctoral candidate in the Department of Management (College of Business) at the University of Cincinnati, USA. Her research and teaching interests address new venture planning, entrepreneurship, innovation and gender. Diana’s research has been published in Journal of Small Business and Entrepreneurship, Small Business Economics and The International Journal of Entrepreneurship and Management.
Contributors

Karen D. Hughes is a Professor in Strategic Management and Organization (Alberta School of Business) and Sociology (Faculty of Arts) at the University of Alberta in Canada. She holds a PhD from the University of Cambridge. Her research focuses on gender, diversity and organizations, with a special interest in women’s entrepreneurship and professional work. She is the author of Female Enterprise in the New Economy and Work, Industry, and Canadian Society (with Harvey Krahn and Graham Lowe). She is co-editor (with Jennifer Jennings) of this volume, as well as a special issue on women’s entrepreneurship for Entrepreneurship Theory and Practice.

Anne Laure Humbert, PhD, is a Senior Lecturer in the Department of Economics and Statistics and Senior Researcher in the Centre for Enterprise and Economic Development Research (CEEDR) at Middlesex University Business School, London, UK. Her main research interests focus on research design, (social) entrepreneurship and gender. Anne Laure has published her work in various journals, such as Community, Work and Family, Equality, Diversity and Inclusion and the International Journal of Gender and Entrepreneurship.

Amy Ingram is an Assistant Professor in the College of Business and Behavioral Science at Clemson University, USA. She received her PhD from the University of Cincinnati, College of Business. Her research focuses on organizational innovation, organizational paradox, strategic cognition, entrepreneurship, and family business.

Albert James, MBA, is a third-year PhD student in the Department of Strategic Management and Organization (School of Business) at the University of Alberta, Canada. Prior to entering the PhD programme he worked extensively with various small entrepreneurial firms. His research interest is in entrepreneurism and non-family members of family businesses.

Jennifer E. Jennings, PhD, is an Associate Professor in the Department of Strategic Management and Organization at the Alberta School of Business, Canada. Her research interests include women entrepreneurs, family enterprise, entrepreneurial passion and storytelling, and work–family issues. In addition to being a co-editor of this volume, she is a field editor at the Journal of Business Venturing and a guest co-editor of an Entrepreneurship Theory and Practice special issue on women’s entrepreneurship research.

P. Devereaux Jennings, PhD, is the Winspear Professor of Business at the Alberta School of Business, Canada, where he teaches strategy and organization theory. Dev is currently pursuing research in three areas:
environmental strategy and regulation, clean and nanotech start-ups, and family business dynamics. He is currently Co-Editor of Strategic Organization and field editor for the Journal of Business Venturing. Dev received his PhD and MA at Stanford University and his BA at Dartmouth College.

Rachida Justo is an Assistant Professor of Entrepreneurship and Social Entrepreneurship at the IE Business School, Spain. Her research focuses on female entrepreneurs and social entrepreneurship and has been published in academic outlets such as the Journal of Business Venturing as well as in several edited books. Rachida holds a PhD from the Universidad Autónoma de Madrid, for which she received the ‘Outstanding Award for Best Doctoral Dissertation’ in 2008.

Kim Klyver, PhD, is a Professor in the Department of Entrepreneurship and Relationship Management at the University of Southern Denmark. Kim has previously held positions at Swinburne University of Technology and Stanford University. His research mainly examines nascent entrepreneurship, entrepreneurial networks, female entrepreneurship, and entrepreneurship policy. He has published a long list of peer-review journal articles and his research has won several awards. Recently, he co-edited and published Handbook of Research on New Venture Creation.

Susan Marlow, PhD, is Professor of Entrepreneurship at the University of Birmingham, and Visiting Professor at Manchester Metropolitan University and the University of Leeds, UK. Her research interests centre upon the influence of gender upon entrepreneuring; she is Editor of the International Small Business Journal, Vice President for Research of the UK Institute of Small Business and Entrepreneurship, an invited Fellow of the Royal Society of Arts and holder of the Queens Award for Enterprise Promotion.

Maura McAdam, PhD, is a Lecturer of Management in Queen’s Management School, at Queen’s University Belfast, UK. Her research explores three complementary themes: female entrepreneurship, high-technology based enterprises and support mechanisms, such as incubators and science parks. She is an invited Fellow of the Royal Society of Arts (FRSA) as well as an Elected Board Member of the ISBE (Institute for Small Business and Entrepreneurship).

Suna Lowe Nielsen received her PhD from Aalborg University, Denmark. She is currently an Assistant Professor at the Department of Entrepreneurship and Relationship Management, University of Southern Denmark. During her PhD studies she worked as a research fellow at the Arthur M. Spiro Center for Entrepreneurial Leadership, Clemson University (USA). Her main research area is the entrepreneurial process from the point of view of women, students and creative designers. She has published several articles, and at present, she is co-editing an international textbook in entrepreneurship.
Contributors

Mary Riebe, PhD, leads a dual career as a business owner and university professor. Her doctorate research pertains to women growing their businesses in the USA, Finland and Ireland. She is founder of two centres for women entrepreneurs at two American universities. She maintains a strategic consulting practice created in 1987. Passionate about advancing women entrepreneurs, she is a frequent motivational speaker and published author on personal and professional challenges facing women globally in business growth.

Alicia Robb is Senior Research Fellow at the Ewing Marion Kauffman Foundation, USA and is the principal investigator on the Kauffman Firm Survey. Previously she was an economist at the Division of Research and Statistics, Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System and an economist at the Office of Economic Research at the US Small Business Administration. The author of Race, Families and Business Success: African-American, Asian-, and White-Owned Businesses published by MIT Press, Dr Robb has authored more than a dozen journal articles. She is currently working on her second book (with Susan Coleman) on financing strategies for women-owned businesses.

Manely Sharifian is a PhD student in the Department of Strategic Management and Organization (School of Business) at the University of Alberta, Canada. Her research interests include natural environment, clean technologies and entrepreneurship. She received her MSc in management and the economics of innovation at Chalmers University in Sweden, and her BSc in industrial engineering at Amirkabir University in Iran.

Siri Terjesen is an Assistant Professor in the Kelley School of Business at Indiana University, USA. Siri’s research has been published in leading journals such as Strategic Management Journal, Strategic Entrepreneurship Journal, Entrepreneurship Theory and Practice, Small Business Economics and Journal of Operations Management. It has been profiled in outlets such as US News & World Report, Christian Science Monitor, Voice of America, The Times (UK) and CNBC Europe. She holds a Master’s degree from Norges Handeløyskole and a PhD from Cranfield University.

Salma C. Zohir, PhD, is a Research Fellow at the Bangladesh Institute of Development Studies. She has worked extensively in the areas of employment, gender and development, and industry, as well as on economic and social issues in Bangladesh. Her most recent work includes co-authored publications SME Development in Bangladesh with Emphasis on Policy Constraints and Financing and An Inventory and Statistics on Violence against Women in Bangladesh: Who Is Doing What and Where.
Contributors