

Contributors

Alberto Alemanno is Associate Professor of Law at HEC Paris and an attorney-at-law in New York. Previously he worked at the European Court of Justice and taught at St. Gallen University, the Bocconi University, the EDHEC Business School, the Liège Law School, the Lyon Law School, Fribourg University, the Scuola Superiore Sant'Anna of Pisa and Macau Law School. He holds degrees from Bocconi, Harvard and Bruges.

Chris Ansell is Associate Professor of Political Science at the University of California, Berkeley. His recent research interests focus on risk regulation and governance in the area of public health in both Europe and the US. He is also Director of the Travers Program on Ethics and Accountability in government.

Jörg Balsiger is Senior Researcher at the Institute for Environmental Decisions of the Swiss Federal Institute of Technology, Zurich and the University of Geneva's Department of Geography. He has published works on transboundary environmental politics with an emphasis on governance structures, policy networks and policy integration.

Gabrielle Bouleau is a Research Fellow at Cemagref (Agricultural and Environmental Research Institute) in Montpellier, France. She holds degrees in agronomy and environmental engineering. Earlier she was a post-doctorial fellow at the University of California, Berkeley. The focus of her research is the political ecology of freshwater quality.

Chris Busch is the Policy Director at the Center for Resource Solutions, a leading organization in renewable energy policy and environmental commodity certification. Previously Busch was a climate economist in the Climate Program at the Union of Concerned Scientists. He holds a PhD in Environmental Economics and a Master's degree in Public Policy from the University of California, Berkeley.

Bruce E. Cain is the Heller Professor of Political Science and Executive Director of the University of California's Washington Center. He has written on representation and political regulation in the US and advanced democracies, state government, the US Congress, California politics and election law.

Ann E. Carlson is the Shirley Shapiro Professor of Environmental Law and the inaugural Faculty Director of the Emmett Center on Climate Change and the Environment at the University of California, Los Angeles School of Law. Her scholarship focuses on climate change law and policy, federalism and the role social norms play in affecting environmentally cooperative behaviour.

Ian Clark is in charge of the Civil Protection unit – Prevention and Preparedness – at the European Commission. Earlier, he was head of the Research, Science & Innovation unit at the Directorate-General for Environment and worked at the Directorate-General for Regional Policy. In 2008 he was a visiting scholar at the Institute of Governmental Studies at the University of California, Berkeley.

Daniel Farber is the Sho Sato Professor of Law and Chair of the Energy and Resources Group at the University of California, Berkeley. He is also the Faculty Director of the Center for Law, Energy and the Environment. Farber serves on the editorial board of Foundation Press and is a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and of the American Law Institute.

Michael Hanemann is a Professor at the University of California, Berkeley and headed the California Climate Change Center from 2003 to 2008. He will become co-director of the new Climate Policy Institute being established in the Boalt Hall School of Law. He is a frequent speaker on greenhouse gas policy.

Christina G. Hioureas is an Associate at Latham & Watkins, in the Public International Law practice group in London. She completed her Juris Doctorate and her Bachelor of Arts in Political Science at the University of California, Berkeley.

Gal Hochman holds a PhD in Economics from Columbia University. He is at the Faculty of Industrial Engineering and Management at Technion – Israel Institute of Technology and a visiting assistant researcher at the University of California, Berkeley.

Kendra Klein is a PhD candidate at the Department of Environmental Science, Policy and Management at the University of California, Berkeley. Her research centres on the intersection of public health and sustainable agri-food systems.

G. Mathias (Matt) Kondolf is a Fluvial Geomorphologist and Environmental Planner, specializing in environmental river management and restoration. As Professor of Environmental Planning at the University of California, Berkeley, he teaches courses in hydrology, river restoration, environmental science and Mediterranean-climate rivers.

Axel Marx is Research Manager at the Antwerp Management School and was previously affiliated with the Leuven Centre for Global Governance Studies at the University of Leuven. He obtained degrees from the universities of Leuven, Hull and Cambridge. His research focuses on regulation and governance.

Anne C.M. Meuwese is a Senior Lecturer in Constitutional Law at Tilburg Law School. Anne received her doctorate from Leiden University. Before moving to Tilburg she worked as a research fellow at the Department of Politics of the University of Exeter and as a Marie Curie Postdoctoral Fellow at the Law Faculty of the University of Antwerp.

Gordon C. Rausser is the Robert Gordon Sproul Distinguished Professor at the University of California, Berkeley, where he has also served as Dean of the College of Natural Resources. He was Senior Economist at the President's Council of Economic Advisers and Chief Economist at the Agency for International Development in Washington, D.C.

Heddy Riss is Programme Director for the Center on Institutions and Governance at the Institute of Governmental Studies, University of California, Berkeley. Previously she worked as an adviser to the Belgian government and was an academic coordinator for the Institute of European Studies at the University of California, Berkeley. She received an MA in Economics and an MA in Public Sector Management at the Free University of Brussels.

Megan R. Schwarzman is a Research Scientist at the Center for Occupational and Environmental Health, University of California, Berkeley and Associate Director of Health and Environment for the Berkeley Center for Green Chemistry. Schwarzman serves on the Green Ribbon Science Panel (California Environmental Protection Agency) for implementing new laws on chemicals management. She also practises medicine at San Francisco General Hospital.

Johan F.M. Swinnen is Professor of Economics and Director of the LICOS Centre for Institutions and Economic Performance at the University of Leuven and Senior Research Fellow at the Centre for European Policy Studies in Brussels. Earlier he was Lead Economist at the World Bank and Economic Adviser at the European Commission. He is President-elect of the International Association of Agricultural Economists.

David Vogel is the Solomon Lee Distinguished Professor of Business Ethics at the Haas School of Business and Professor at the Department of Political Science at the University of California, Berkeley. Vogel has held the Jean Monnet Chair and the BP Chair in Transatlantic Relations at the European University Institute and has been a visiting professor at INSEAD in Fontainebleau and Singapore.

Michael P. Wilson is a Research Scientist at the Center for Occupational and Environmental Health, University of California, Berkeley, and Associate Director of the Berkeley Center for Green Chemistry. He received his Masters in Public Health and PhD in Environmental Health Sciences from the University of California, Berkeley. He serves on the Green Ribbon Science Panel (California Environmental Protection Agency) and California's Biomonitoring Scientific Guidance Panel.

David E. Winickoff is Associate Professor of Bioethics at the Department of Environmental, Policy and Management at the University of California, Berkeley. His academic and policy work spans biotechnology, university technology transfer, food safety regulation, climate change, the World Trade Organization and human subjects research. Trained at Yale, Cambridge and Harvard Law School, he is also Co-Director of Berkeley's Science, Technology and Society Center.

Jan Wouters is Professor of International Law and International Organizations, Jean Monnet Chair Ad Personam on the EU and Global Governance, and Director of the Leuven Centre for Global Governance Studies and Institute for International Law at the University of Leuven. He is Visiting Professor at the College of Europe, President of the Flemish Foreign Affairs Council and practises law as Of Counsel at Linklaters.

David Zilberman is a Professor in the Agricultural and Resource Economics Department at the University of California, Berkeley. He is a fellow of the American Agricultural Economics Association and the Association of Environmental and Resource Economists. He received his BA in Economics and Statistics from Tel Aviv University and his PhD in Agricultural and Resource Economics from the University of California, Berkeley.