Contributors

Sara Bradley has a BA (Hons) from Oxford University and PhD in Social Gerontology from the University of Aberdeen. Her main area of interest is ageing and older people. Sara has worked mainly in the voluntary sector in employment, disability and health, as well as older people’s issues. She is also a Research Fellow at the Centre for Rural Health (University of the Highlands and Islands).

Jane Farmer is Professor of Rural Health Management & Policy and Head of the La Trobe University Rural Health School (Australia) and was previously Co-Director of the Centre for Rural Health (University of the Highlands and Islands, UK). Jane has researched health and social services delivery in rural areas for 15 years, moving from studies that considered the role of diverse health and social care professionals in rural teams to the role of communities in designing and providing services, shaping and forcing change.

Carol Hill is a Senior Lecturer in Health and Social Policy at the University of Glasgow School of Interdisciplinary Studies, and Director of the Crichton Centre for Research in Health and Social Issues. Her overarching interest is in the complex relationship between ideology, the economy, health and social policy, and the policy process, and their impact on the delivery of agendas for health with links to current discourse on the (contested) rights and responsibilities of citizenship.

Sarah-Anne Muñoz is a Geographer based at the Centre for Rural Health (University of the Highlands and Islands, UK) where she is a Research Fellow. Her research interests are in health and place, as well as third sector service delivery and the role of community activities in health and wellbeing outcomes. She is currently funded by the Arts and Humanities Research Council and Scottish Funding Council to look at the health benefits of hospital grounds green space.

Katy Radford is a Social Anthropologist working with communities in areas of social justice and inclusion. She is a Research Associate with the Institute for Conflict Research in Northern Ireland (UK) and an advisor to the Commission for Victims and Survivors. She is currently working on issues of commemoration and memorialisation for the Community Relations Council and the Heritage Lottery Fund.

Sally Shortall is a Reader in Sociology at Queen’s University Belfast (UK). She has published on rural development theory and practice, community and stakeholder engagement in policy processes, and the position of women in the farming industry. Following a year in the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development as a Research Fellow of the Economic and Social Research Council, she is currently writing on the social construction of rural policy priorities.

Sarah Skerratt is a Senior Researcher and Team Leader at the Scottish Agricultural College (SAC) (UK). She has 24 years’ experience in analysing the differences between policy vision and experience-on-the-ground in rural areas and communities, with a particular focus on rural community development policies and strategies, and initiatives led by communities. She is Editor of SAC’s Rural Scotland in Focus Reports, and convenor of the Round Table Debate Series bringing together stakeholders from across the private, public and third sectors.

Artur Steinerowski is a Researcher in the Rural Society Team at the Scottish Agricultural College (UK). His research focuses on improving quality of life and sustainability of rural communities. Artur is currently investigating aspects of rural social entrepreneurship and social enterprises and has an interest in operational aspects of innovative forms of businesses/entrepreneurship that bring social outcomes and societal development.

Kate Stephen was the Project Manager for the O4O Project in Highland, Scotland (UK). Her background is in community development and community care; she has a BSc in Rural Development and is currently engaged in doctoral research in the area of rural health.

Sandy Whitelaw is a Lecturer in Health and Social Studies within the School of Interdisciplinary Studies (University of Glasgow, Dumfries Campus, UK). He has worked within the field of public health in both the UK National Health Service and various Higher Education institutions. Sandy has experience in project work, lecturing and research in various public health areas.