Contributors

Ruth V. Aguilera is a Visiting Professor at ESADE Business School in Barcelona, Spain, although her permanent appointment is as an Associate Professor and a Fellow at the Center for Professional Responsibility for Business and Society at the College of Business at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. She received a Graduate Diploma in Business Analysis from the University of Lancaster, a Licenciatura in Economics from the University of Barcelona, and M.A. and Ph.D. degrees in Sociology from Harvard University. Her research interests fall at the intersection of economic sociology and international business, specifically in the fields of comparative corporate governance and corporate social responsibility.

Allan Bird (PhD, University of Oregon) is the Darla and Frederick Brodsky Trustee Professor in Global Business at Northeastern University’s College of Business Administration. With more than 90 articles and book chapters, his work has appeared in the Academy of Management Journal, Strategic Management Journal, Journal of Organizational Behavior, Journal of International Business Studies and other academic and practitioner journals. He is the author/editor of eight books, including Global Leadership: Research, Practice and Development, The Encyclopedia of Japanese Business and Management, Japanese Multinationals Abroad: Individual and Organizational Learning and An Introduction to Leadership (in Japanese).

Ingmar Björkman is Professor and Dean of Aalto University School of Economics in Finland. His research interests focus on International HRM, knowledge creation and transfer in multinational corporations, and the integration of international mergers & acquisitions. His research has been published in journals like the Journal of International Business Studies, Journal of Management Studies, and Organization Studies. His latest books are Global Challenge: International Human Resource Management (2011, McGraw-Hill), co-authored with Paul Evans and Vladimir Pucik, and Handbook of Research in International Human Resource Management (2012, Edward Elgar), co-edited with Günter Stahl and Shad Morris. Björkman is consulting editor of Management and Organization Review.

Jaime Bonache is Full Professor of Organizations Studies at Carlos III University of Madrid (Spain). Before joining Carlos III, Jaime was
Contributors

Professor of Human Resources at ESADE Business School (Spain) and Cranfield School of Management (England). Jaime holds an MA in Philosophy from Carleton University (Ottawa, Canada), and a PhD in Economics and Business Administration from the Universidad Autónoma de Madrid (Spain). His research interests are in the areas of expatriation and knowledge management. Jaime has also written/edited five books, two of them (Direccion Estrategica de Personas and Direccion de Personas, with Angel Cabrera), have been best-sellers in a number of Spanish-speaking countries. He has been the guest editor for five special issues on trends in international human resources and has published in different journals, including the Journal of Organizational Behaviour, Organization Studies, Human Resource Management, the International Journal of HRM, Journal of Business Research, and HRM Review. Jaime is a frequent speaker at academic and professional conferences.

Chris Brewster researches and teaches international and comparative HRM at Henley Business School, the University of Reading (UK). He has published extensively in the field, recently joint-editing, with Wolfgang Mayrhofer, the Handbook of Research on Comparative Human Resource Management, which is also published by Edward Elgar.

Paula Caligiuri is a Professor in the Human Resource Management Department of Rutgers University (USA) where she teaches courses in career management and global human resources in the School of Management and Labor Relations. Named as one of the most prolific authors in international business for her work in global careers and international HR, she has authored or co-authored several articles and books – including Managing the Global Workforce (Wiley, 2010) and Cultural Agility: Building a Pipeline of Successful Global Professionals (Jossey-Bass, forthcoming). She is also the current HR Area Editor for the Journal of International Business Studies. On issues related to building cultural agility in the workforce, Paula works extensively with leading organizations in the United States, Asia, and Europe. Paula holds a PhD in organizational psychology from Penn State University.

Wayne F. Cascio holds the Robert H. Reynolds Chair in Global Leadership and is a Distinguished University Professor at the University of Colorado, Denver. He has served as president of the Society for Industrial and Organizational Psychology (1992-1993), Chair of the SHRM Foundation (2007), and the HR Division of the Academy of Management (1984), and as a member of the Academy of Management’s Board of Governors (2003-2006). He is a senior editor for the Journal of World Business.
He has authored or edited 27 books on human resource management, including Investing in People (with John Boudreau, 2nd edn, 2011), Managing Human Resources (9th edn, 2013), and Applied Psychology in Human Resource Management (7th edn, with Herman Aguinis, 2011). He is a two-time winner of the best-paper award from the Academy of Management Executive for his research on downsizing and responsible restructuring.

In 1999 he received the Distinguished Career award from the HR Division of the Academy of Management. He also received an honorary doctorate from the University of Geneva (Switzerland) in 2004, and in 2008 he was named by the Journal of Management as one of the most influential scholars in management in the past 25 years.

In 2010 he received the Michael R. Losey Human Resources Research Award from the Society for Human Resource Management. Currently he serves as Chair of the US Technical Advisory Group that is developing international standards for the Human Resources profession, and he represents the United States to the International Organization for Standards.

Dr Cascio earned his BA degree from Holy Cross College, his MA degree from Emory University, and his PhD in industrial/organizational psychology from the University of Rochester.

Celia Wing See Chui is a PhD candidate in Management at the Faculty of Business and Economics, University of Lausanne, Switzerland, with a specialization in Organizational Behaviour. Her main research interests include diversity, interventions against workplace deviant behaviours (i.e. discrimination, harassment, incivility) and cross-cultural management.

David G. Collings is Professor of HRM at Dublin City University Business School, Ireland and Visiting Professor of HRM at King’s College, London. Previously he was on the faculty at the University of Sheffield in the UK and the National University of Ireland, Galway, and a Visiting Research Fellow at Strathclyde Business School. His research interests focus on management in multinational corporations with a particular emphasis on staffing and talent management issues. His work in these areas has been published in outlets such as the Journal of World Business, Journal of Vocational Behavior, Human Resource Management, and Industrial and Labor Relations Review. He has edited six books, most recently Global Talent Management, with Hugh Scullion (Routledge, 2011). He also sits on a number of editorial boards including for the Journal of World Business and is Editor of the Human Resource Management Journal and the Irish Journal of Management.

Alexander Colvin is Associate Professor of Labor Relations and Conflict Resolution at the ILR School, Cornell University, USA. He is also Chair of the Department of Labor Relations, Law, and History and Associate Director of the Scheinman Institute on Conflict Resolution. His research and teaching focuses on employment dispute resolution, with a particular emphasis on procedures in nonunion workplaces and the impact of the legal environment on organizations. His current research projects include an empirical investigation of the outcomes of employment arbitration and a cross-national study of labour and employment law changes in the Anglo-American countries. He has published articles in journals such as the Industrial & Labor Relations Review, Industrial Relations, British Journal of Industrial Relations, Academy of Management Journal, Personnel Psychology, Relations Industrielles, the Journal of Empirical Legal Studies, the Ohio State Journal on Dispute Resolution, and the Cornell Journal of Law & Public Policy. He is also a co-author (with Harry C. Katz and Thomas A. Kochan) of the textbook An Introduction to Collective Bargaining and Industrial Relations (4th edition: Irwin-McGraw-Hill). He received the 2003 Outstanding Young Scholar Award from the Industrial Relations Research Association (IRRA) and the 2000 Best Dissertation Award from the IRRA for his dissertation entitled ‘Citizens and Citadels: Dispute Resolution and the Governance of Employment Relations’. Before joining the faculty of the ILR School in 2008, he taught at Penn State University from 1999-2008.

Owen Darbishire (Said Business School and Pembroke College, Oxford University, UK) has been Rhodes Trust Lecturer in Management at Oxford University since 1996. His research focuses on comparative employment systems, labour markets and industrial relations. Amongst many articles and book chapters, he has co-authored, with Harry C. Katz, Converging Divergences: Worldwide Changes in Employment Systems (2000).

Sue Canney Davison has over twenty years’ experience in international leadership training and coaching, successful international and diverse teams, and implementing innovative organizational change processes. Based on her own research material, Sue has designed and facilitated courses on leading excellent diverse project teams, as well as many strategic planning and implementation activities, large- and small-scale multi-stakeholder consultative workshops and team building for a wide range of CGIAR centers, UN agencies, World Bank, multinationals and private companies and NGOs; first across the USA, Europe and South East Asia, and then in East and Southern Africa for the last sixteen years.

Sue has over twelve years’ experience of consulting with UN agencies, creating courses and resources, as well as co-designing and facilitating training programmes and organizational change roll-outs. For over six years, she was deeply involved with the CGIAR Gender and Diversity programmes, designing and facilitating many face-to-face as well as online training modules and activities.

In order to gain hands-on experience, Sue facilitated a one year, six country, World Bank research team, culminating in a large event in 2008, and is just completing leading a three year, three country, renewable energy PPP project, which involved representing the private sector in Kenyan National Policy development. Sue is now turning her research focus into Leadership in East Africa.

Sue’s PhD from the London Business School, UK, is on multicultural processes in international teams, following an MA from Oxford University, UK, in Philosophy, Psychology and Physiology. She is a member of the International Organizational Network of Global business and IHRM scholars and is on the editorial board of the Journal of Cross-Cultural Management. Having lived in India for six years and Africa for sixteen, Sue speaks English, Hindi, moderate French and some Kiswahili.

Helen De Cieri PhD is a Professor in the Department of Management at Monash University, Australia, and a member of the Australian Centre for Research in Employment and Work (ACREW). Her prior appointments include universities in Australia, China, Hong Kong, Malaysia and the USA. Helen has published widely on topics related to the strategic and international dimensions of human resource management (HRM). Her current research interests are in the areas of international HRM, employee wellbeing, organizational health and performance. Helen is also engaged in activities to promote social inclusion, particularly gender equality in higher education.

John C. Dencker is a visiting professor at ESADE Business School in Barcelona, Spain. He is also an associate professor in the School of Labor and Employment Relations at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. He received his PhD and MA in Sociology from Harvard University, and his BA in Economics and US History from Northwestern University. Professor Dencker’s research examines the effects of corporate restructuring, self-employment public policy initiatives, mergers and acquisitions, and generational dynamics on the employment relationship. His research has been published in scholarly journals such as the Academy of Management Journal, Academy of Management Review, Administrative Science Quarterly, American Sociological Review, Human Resource Management Review, Industrial Relations, International Journal of Human Resource Management, Organization Science, and Research in Personnel and Human Resource Management. He was awarded the IDEA Thought Leader Award from the Entrepreneurship Division of the Academy of Management in 2010 for his research on public policy programmes designed to help the unemployed transition to self-employment. He is also on the editorial board of Administrative Science Quarterly.

Joerg Dietz is a professor and Head of the Department of Organizational Behavior at the Faculty of Business and Economics, University of Lausanne, Switzerland. He has also held academic positions in the United States and Canada and taught in several other European and Asian countries. Prior to his academic career, he worked in the investment banking department of a German bank. Joerg earned his PhD in Organizational Behavior from Tulane University. His research interests include cross-cultural management, workplace diversity and the contextual antecedents of organizational behaviour, and his research has been published in journals such as the Academy of Management Journal, the Journal of Applied Psychology, and Organizational Behavior and Human Decision Processes. He has won numerous research awards including most recently the 2010 Carolyn Dexter Award for best international research paper at the Academy of Management Conference and the 2009 Saroj Parasuraman Award for the outstanding publication of the year in the area of gender and diversity from the GDO division of the Academy of Management.

Peter J. Dowling (PhD, The Flinders University of South Australia) is Professor of International Management & Strategy at La Trobe University, Melbourne, Australia. He has held visiting appointments in the United States at Cornell University and Michigan State University and in Germany at the University of Paderborn and the University of Bayreuth. He has co-authored a number of books including Dowling, Festing & Engle International Human Resource Management (6th edn: Cengage, UK).

Elaine Farndale (Pennsylvania State University, USA/Tilburg University, The Netherlands) is Assistant Professor at the department of Labor Studies and Employment Relations at the Pennsylvania State University, and (part-time) Assistant Professor in the Department of Human Resource Studies at Tilburg University in the Netherlands. She completed her PhD at Cranfield School of Management in the UK in 2004, and worked previously as an HR specialist for several years. Elaine’s research encompasses the field of international human resource management, and she has published widely in both the practitioner and academic press, as well as being Associate Editor for the journal Human Resource Management.

Marion Festing (ESCP Europe, Germany) is Professor of Human Resource Management and Intercultural Leadership at the Berlin...
Campus of ESCP Europe and the former European Associate Dean of Research for this institution. She has gained membership of several editorial boards. Her current research and teaching interests are concerned with International Human Resource Management and Intercultural Management. She has co-authored a number of articles and books including Dowling, Festing & Engle International Human Resource Management: Managing People in a Multinational Context (5th edn: Cengage, UK, 2008).

Paul N. Gooderham is Professor of International Management at NHH-The Norwegian School of Economics. He has published articles in a wide range of journals including the Strategic Management Journal, Journal of International Business Studies, Journal of Management Studies and Administrative Science Quarterly.

Michael Harvey received his PhD at the University of Arizona in 1976. Currently he is Distinguished Chair of Global Business at the University of Mississippi and Professor of Global Management at Bond University, Queensland, Australia. Professor Harvey’s teaching interests are in global business policy and international human resource management. He has published over 350 articles in such academic journals as Sloan Management Review, Journal of International Business Studies, Journal of World Business, International Journal of Human Resource Management, and Human Resource Management among others. Mike also serves on eight editorial review boards. Mike was a faculty member at Southern Methodist University for seventeen years and more recently held the Puterbaugh Chair of American Free Enterprise at the Michael F. Price College of Business at the University of Oklahoma for ten years.

Contributors xvii

of the Routledge Advances in Feminist Studies and Intersectionality book series and Co-Director of the GEXcel, Linköping and Örebro Universities Centre of Gender Excellence.

Karsten Jonsen (Danish) is a Research Fellow in Organizational Behaviour at IMD, Switzerland, and a visiting professor at several European universities. Before coming to IMD in 2002 he held European management positions in the IT-industry. He earned his MSc in Economics from CBS in Copenhagen, his MBA from ESCP-EAP in Paris, France, and a PhD from the University of Geneva. His research interests and publications cover a variety of issues in cross-cultural business, including new generations and work-family balance, team performance, virtual teams, stereotyping, cosmopolitanism, globalization and socio-demographic trends, research methodology, career mobility, cross-cultural communication, and gender and workforce diversity. Dr Jonsen has served as an advisor to large corporations in the field of workforce diversity and is co-winner of the Carolyn Dexter Award for best international research paper at the Academy of Management 2010.

Emmanuelle Patricia Kleinlogel (Faculty of Business and Economics, University of Lausanne, Switzerland) is a PhD candidate in Management with a specialization in Organizational Behaviour. Her main research interests include the expression of prejudice, employment discrimination, moral disengagement, and compliant behaviour.

Mila B. Lazarova is an Associate Professor of International Management at Simon Fraser University, Canada. Her research interests include expatriate management, work/life balance issues related to assignments, global careers, and comparative human resource management. She has published numerous papers in scholarly journals and edited volumes and currently sits on four editorial boards. She is the Associate Director of the Centre for Global Workforce Strategy at SFU.

Cynthia A. Lengnick-Hall is a Professor and PhD Advisor in the Department of Management, University of Texas at San Antonio, USA. Her research in strategic human resource management and corporate entrepreneurship has received international awards. She has co-authored three books and published numerous articles in academic journals and has provided consulting and executive education to managers in private industry and non-profit organizations. Her current research interests include strategic human resource management, organizational resilience, knowledge management strategies, organizational learning, and achieving competitive superiority in high-velocity environments.
Mark L. Lengnick-Hall is a Professor in the Department of Management, University of Texas at San Antonio, USA. His research in strategic human resource management has received international awards. He has co-authored four books and published numerous articles in academic journals and has also provided consulting and executive education to managers in private industry and non-profit organizations. His current research interests include strategic human resource management, managing human resources in nonprofit organizations, and issues related to the employment of people with disabilities.

Wolfgang Mayrhofer is Professor of Business Administration and holds a chair in management and organizational behaviour at WU Vienna, Austria. Previously, he held teaching and research positions at German universities. His research focuses on international comparative research in human resource management, leadership and careers. Wolfgang has co-edited, authored and co-authored 26 books, more than 170 book chapters, and peer reviewed articles, and has received national and international awards for his research. He regularly conducts training for both public and private organizations, especially in the area of outdoor-training (www.championSHIPs.at).

Martha Maznevski (Canadian) is Professor of Organizational Behaviour and International Management and Director of the MBA Programme at the IMD in Lausanne, Switzerland. Her teaching spans a broad range of international organizational behaviour topics, and she has served as a consultant and advisor to public and private organizations in North America, Europe, Asia and Africa on issues of managing people globally. She is a co-author of The Blackwell Handbook of Global Management: A Guide to Managing Complexity (Blackwell, 2004), and the popular textbook International Management Behavior (Wiley), now in its sixth edition. Her current research focuses on the ongoing dynamics of high-performing teams and networks in multinational organizations, and leading people in global complexity.

Mark Mendenhall holds the J. Burton Frierson Chair of Excellence in Business Leadership in the College of Business at the University of Tennessee, Chattanooga. He is past president of the International Management Division of the Academy of Management, and the author of numerous journal articles and books in the areas of global leadership and international human resource management. His forthcoming book is Global Leadership: Research, Practice and Development (Routledge, 2nd edition). He is also a partner in The Kozai Group Inc., a consultancy that specializes in global leadership and expatriate development processes.
Beverly Dawn Metcalfe is an Associate Professor in HRD in the School of Environment and Development, University of Manchester, UK. She specialises in feminist theory and globalization; women’s empowerment and development, specifically the Gulf and Middle East; developing women’s leadership capabilities in a global context, national HRD and international HRM and education planning in the Middle East, Asia and Africa. She has published in many leading international journals including inter alia: Gender, Work and Organization, International HRM, Journal of Business Ethics and International Journal of Management Reviews. She has recently edited Leadership Development in the Middle East with Fouad Mimouni (Edward Elgar Publishing), the first text of its kind to integrate western and Arabic literatures. As well as conducting research and teaching in HRD and gender issues, she has also acted as advisor on national HRD and women’s development to several ME governments.

Miriam Moeller lectures at the University of Queensland’s School of Business, Economics and Law. Dr Moeller received her PhD from the University of Mississippi in 2011. Her research is directed toward SGHRM and related strategic issues. She has also published articles in the Journal of World Business, International Journal of Human Resource Management, Journal of Applied Social Psychology, and Journal of Management History among others.

Shad S. Morris (PhD Cornell University) is Assistant Professor of Management and Human Resources at the Fisher College of Business, Ohio State University. Professor Morris teaches and conducts research in the areas of international business and strategic human resource management, particularly focusing on how global firms create value through people and knowledge. He has worked for the World Bank in Washington, DC, and in the former Republic of Yugoslavia; for Management Systems International in Bulgaria; and for Alcoa, Inc., in the United States. He has also co-authored a book, Managing People and Knowledge in Professional Service Firms, and had articles in the Academy of Management Review, Journal of International Business Studies, Human Resource Management, MIT Sloan Management Review and Harvard Business Review.

Joyce S. Osland (San Jose State University, United States) is the Lucas Endowed Professor of Global Leadership and Executive Director of the Global Leadership Advancement Center. She co-founded the Global Leadership Lab, which assesses and develops global leaders. Dr Osland lived and worked overseas, primarily doing international development work, for fourteen years in seven different countries. She received her PhD in Organizational Behaviour from Case Western Reserve University and Handbook of research in international human resource management has received both teaching and research awards, most recently the Journal of Management Inquiry Outstanding Scholar Award for career achievement in 2010 and the Outstanding Educator Award in the International Management Division of the Academy of Management in 2011. She has published over 80 articles, chapters and cases on international management and experiential teaching. Her books include The Adventure of Working Abroad: Hero Tales from the Global Frontier (Jossey-Bass, 1995), The Organizational Behavior Reader (Prentice-Hall, 2011), and Global Leadership: Research, Practice, and Development (Routledge, 2008, 2012). Current research interests include expert cognition in global leaders, global leadership development, and repatriate knowledge transfer. Dr Osland is also a partner in the Kozai Group which creates global competency assessment instruments.

Jaap Paauwe (1953) is Professor of Human Resource Studies at Tilburg University. Before joining Tilburg University he worked as a full Professor of Organization at Erasmus University Rotterdam, heading the Department of Business and Organization of the School of Economics. At Erasmus University he is still involved in supervising PhD students. Before he started his scientific career, he worked in business for several years (SHV/GTI and CNV).

Apart from having many scientific publications in top academic journals (IJHRM, HRMJ, JMS, HRM), he has written the book HRM and Performance: Achieving a Long Term Viability (Oxford University Press, 2004). For this book he received the Dutch HRM Network Award in 2005. In 2012 a new version of this book will be published, co-authored with Elaine Farndale.

Besides this Paauwe is heading the department’s Human Resource Studies and the Research Programme, ‘HRM and Performance; In search of balance’, and is also a board member for the Advanced Human Resource Programme connected to the Tias Nimbas Business school. In addition, he also gives executive HRM training on the Business programma of Avicenna and University of Groningen/AOG.

He initiated the People Management Centre (PMC), which is the Human Resource Studies Institute for partnerships between industry and academia. The PMC is devoted to HR professionalization in organizations. The PMC’s intention is to build bridges between leading organizations and the Human Resource Studies Department at Tilburg University.

Paauwe is also a founding board member of the Dutch HRM Network. In 2012 a new book will be published (edited together with David Guest and Patrick Wright) on Human Resource Management and Performance: What’s next?
Tuomo Peltonen has a workaday role as Professor of Organizations and Leadership at Finland’s Tampere University of Technology, Department of Industrial Management. Sometimes he can be also identified as Adjunct Professor at Aalto University and the University of Turku. His research interests include international and human resource management, organization theory, ethics, power, subjectivity, narrative, architecture and ethnography (and so on). He is currently on the editorial board for the International Journal of HRM. Tuomo has published in such journals as the Journal of Organizational Change Management, Ethnography and the International Journal of Human Resource Management, and has also edited a special issue for the Academy of Management Review. At the present moment, he is stunned by the philosophical uncertainties surrounding quantum physics.

Rebecca Piekkari is Professor of International Business at Aalto University’s School of Economics (formerly the Helsinki School of Economics, Finland). Her teaching and research focus on managing people in multinational corporations, particularly the challenges associated with control, coordination and communication. Her work on language in international business and management has been published in journals such as the International Business Review, International Journal of Human Resource Management, Management International Review and Journal of International Management. In 2011, she co-edited (with Susanne Tietze) a special issue on language in international management for the Journal of World Business. She also writes actively about qualitative methods, especially the use of case studies, in international business research.

Astrid Reichel is an Assistant Professor at the Department of Management, WU Vienna. Previously she worked as a lecturer at the Department of Business, University of Vienna. Her main research interests are international and comparative HRM, professionalization and status of HRM, and careers.

Randall S. Schuler is Distinguished Professor of Strategic International Human Resource Management. He has authored or edited over 50 books including: Managing Human Resources, 11th edn; International Human Resource Management, 4th edn; Managing Human Resources in Cross-Border Alliances; Strategic Human Resource Management: A Reader, 2nd edn; Cases in Managing Organizations and People, 7th edn.; La gestion de los Recursos Humanos, 4th edn; La gestion des Ressources Humaines au Seuil, 4th edn; Internationales Personalmanagement; and Managing Job Stress. In addition, he has contributed over 60 book chapters and has published over 150 articles in professional journals and academic proceedings. He is a Fellow of the American Psychological Association, a Fellow of the British Academy of Management, a Fellow of the Society for Industrial and Organizational Psychology, and a Fellow of the Academy of Management. Currently he is co-editing a GLOBAL HRM Series for Routledge with P. Sparrow, S. Jackson and M. Poole. It is comprised of more than 20 books and involves more than 300 authors from around the world. He is currently interested in global talent management and global talent challenges and HRM and innovation.

Hugh Scullion is Professor of International Management at NUI Galway, Ireland. He has published in journals such as the Academy of Management Journal, Journal of World Business, Human Resource Management Journal and International Journal of Human Resource Management. He has also published six books including Global Talent Management with David Collings (Routledge, 2011). Hugh has acted as adviser and consultant for a number of leading multinational companies including Rolls Royce, Sun Microsystems, Boots and Telecom Malaysia.

Joshua B. Sears is an international business PhD Candidate at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, USA. His dissertation research focuses on the acquisition of small, technology firms.

Scott Snell is the E. Thayer Bigelow Professor of Business Administration at the University of Virginia’s Darden Graduate School of Business. He teaches courses in leadership, strategic management, and developing organizational capability. His research focuses on the mechanisms by which organizations generate, transfer, and integrate new knowledge for competitive advantage. He is the co-author of four books: Managing People and Knowledge in Professional Service Firms; Management: Leading and Collaborating in a Competitive World; M: Management, and Managing Human Resources. His work has been published in a number of journals such as the Academy of Management Journal, Academy of Management Review, Strategic Management Journal, Journal of Management, Journal of Management Studies, and Human Resource Management, and he was recently listed among the top 150 most-cited authors in the field of management. He has served on the boards of the Human Capital Division of the Strategic Management Society, the Society for Human Resource Management Foundation, the Academy of Management’s Human Resource Division, the Human Resource Management Journal, the Academy of Management Journal and the Academy of Management Review. Scott has worked with companies such as AstraZeneca, Deutsche Telekom, Shell, and United Technologies to align investments in talent and strategic capability. Prior to joining the Darden faculty in 2007,
Scott was professor and director of executive education at Cornell University’s Center for Advanced Human Resource Studies and a professor of management in the Smeal College of Business at Pennsylvania State University. He received a BA in psychology from Miami University, as well as MBA. and PhD degrees in business administration from Michigan State University.

Paul Sparrow is Director of the Centre for Performance-Led HRM and Professor of International Human Resource Management at Lancaster University’s Management School. He has published over 150 books, journal articles and research chapters and has consulted with major multinationals, public sector organizations and inter-governmental agencies. His research covers international and comparative HRM, HR strategy, cognition at work and changes in the employment relationship.

Günter K. Stahl is Professor of International Management at the Vienna University of Economics and Business (WU Vienna) and Adjunct Professor of Organizational Behaviour at INSEAD. Prior to joining WU Vienna, he served for eight years as a full-time faculty member at INSEAD and was based at the school’s campuses in France and Singapore. He was also a member of the faculty at the University of Bayreuth and a visiting professor at the Fuqua School of Business, Duke University, and the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania. His research interests include leadership, ethical decision-making, and the socio-cultural processes in international teams, alliances, mergers and acquisitions, as well as how to manage people and cultures effectively in those contexts.

Philip Stiles is a faculty member of the Cambridge Judge Business School, University of Cambridge, UK. His research work focuses on international human resource management, in particular the nature of performance management within and across borders and the operation and performance of the HR department. He works with a number of major companies worldwide and is currently Co-Director of the Centre for Internal Human Resource Management at the University of Cambridge.

Luigi Stirpe is Assistant Professor at Carlos III University of Madrid (Spain), where he also obtained his PhD in Management in 2009. His primary research interests center mainly on the areas of Strategic Human Resource Management and International Human Resource Management.

Ibraiz Tarique is an Associate Professor of Human Resources Management and Director of Global HRM Programmes at Pace University, New York City Campus. He earned his PhD in Industrial

David C. Thomas, PhD (Australian School of Business, University of New South Wales, Sydney, Australia) is the author of eight books including the best-selling Cultural Intelligence: Living and Working Globally, (2009, Berrett-Koehler Publishers, with Kerr Inkson). His book Cross-Cultural Management Essential Concepts (2008, Sage Publications) was the winner of the R. Wayne Pace Human Resource Development book of the year award for 2008. In addition, he has recently edited (with Peter B. Smith and Mark Peterson) The Handbook of Cross-Cultural Management Research for Sage Publications. His research on cross-cultural interactions in organizational settings has appeared in numerous journals. Dr Thomas is currently the Cross-Cultural Management Area Editor for the Journal of International Business Studies and serves on the editorial boards of the Journal of World Business, Journal of Organizational Behavior, and European Journal of Cross-Cultural Competence and Management. His previous academic postings have included positions at Pennsylvania State University and the University of Auckland, New Zealand, where he was also Director of the Master of International Business Programme, and Simon Fraser University, Canada. He has also held visiting positions at Koç University, Istanbul, Turkey, The Chinese University of Hong Kong, the University of Hawaii, Massey University, New Zealand, and ESCEM, Tours, France.

Susanne Tietze is Professor of Organisation Studies at Sheffield Business School, Sheffield Hallam University, UK and researches the role of languages in the context of work organisations. Most recently, her research has focused on exploring the textual knowledge production process in the management academy, with particular regards to the role of the English language as part of an ongoing process of linguistic hegemony. She has published her work in a variety of academic journals and also written a book, International Management and Language, about this matter.

Patrick M. Wright is the William J. Conaty GE Professor of Strategic Human Resources in the ILR School (Industrial and Labour Relations) at Cornell University. Professor Wright teaches, conducts research, and consults in the area of Strategic Human Resource Management (SHRM), particularly focusing on how firms use people as a source of competitive advantage and the changing nature of the Chief HR Officer role. He has published over 60 research articles in journals as well as over 20 chapters in books and edited volumes. He currently serves as Senior Associate Editor for the Journal of Management and has been named on six other editorial boards.

Bi-Juan Zhong is a doctoral candidate in International Business at Fisher College of Business, the Ohio State University. She conducts research in the areas of knowledge management in multinational corporations and cross-border strategic alliances, with a focus on social and psychological processes. Her key interest is using “micro”-level concepts (i.e. identity/identification, justice, diversity) to study “macro” topics pertinent to organizations (i.e. knowledge seeking, knowledge creation, and inter-organizational cooperation).