Contributors

Damon Alexander is a Research Fellow in the School of Social and Political Sciences at the University of Melbourne, Australia.

Rhys Andrews is a Reader in Public Management at Cardiff Business School, Wales.

Sue Baines is a Reader at Manchester Metropolitan University, England, where she works on issues of the mixed economy of welfare and social care and its effects on service users, carers, households and organisations.

James Barlow holds a Chair in Technology and Innovation Management at Imperial College Business School, England, specialising in healthcare services and infrastructure.

Cathy Barton-Sweeney is a Researcher and Honorary Lecturer in the Centre for Primary Care and Public Health, Barts and the London School of Medicine and Dentistry, England.

Victor Bekkers is Professor of Public Administration and Public Policy at Erasmus University Rotterdam, The Netherlands.

George A. Boyne is Professor of Public Sector Management and Dean of Cardiff Business School, Cardiff University, Wales.

Kerry Brown holds the Mulpha Chair in Tourism Asset Management and is the Director of the Research Centre for Tourism, Leisure and Work at Southern Cross University, Australia.

John M. Bryson is McKnight Presidential Professor of Planning and Public Affairs in the Hubert H. Humphrey School of Public Affairs at the University of Minnesota, USA.

Mike Carter has extensive experience at senior management level in the private and public sectors and is a Fellow at the Universities of Bath and Exeter. He is also the former Director of Executive Development, the Centre for Leadership Studies, University of Exeter Business School, and has taught leadership, sensemaking and organizational change on a variety of MBA and executive development programmes.

Celine Chew is Senior Lecturer at Cardiff University, Wales, and Associate of the Centre for Business Responsibility Accountability, Sustainability and Society (BRASS) funded by the Economic and Social Research Council (ESRC), UK. She is an editorial board member of Public Management Review and Marketing Intelligence and Planning.

Ian Colville is Senior Lecturer in the School of Management, University of Bath, UK where he is also Director of the Change Management Forum. The purpose of the forum is to provide a place which brings practitioners and academics together, such that organisational change theory meets organisational practice to their mutual benefit. He is an editorial board member of Human Relations and Organization Studies.
Mark Considine is Professor and Dean of the Faculty of Arts at the University of Melbourne, Australia.

Barbara C. Crosby is an Associate Professor specialising in leadership studies in the Hubert H. Humphrey School of Public Affairs at the University of Minnesota, USA.

Paul Cunningham is Director and Senior Research Fellow in the Manchester Institute of Innovation Research at the University of Manchester. He has over 25 years’ experience in the study of the governance and impact of Science, Technology and Innovation policies, both in the UK and internationally.

Jakob Edler is Professor of Innovation Policy and Strategy and Executive Director of the Manchester Institute of Innovation Research, MBS, University of Manchester, England. His main research areas in recent years have been demand-side innovation policy and the role of public procurement to spur innovation; governance of science and innovation with a focus on internationalisation; and the development of evaluation concepts for policy and programmes.

Michelle Farr is a Research Officer and Teaching Fellow in the Department of Social and Policy Sciences at the University of Bath, England.

Shaun Goldfinch is an Associate Professor at Nottingham University Business School, England.

Trisha Greenhalgh is a London GP and Professor of Primary Health Care, Queen Mary University of London, England.

Jean Hartley is Professor of Organisational Analysis at Warwick Business School, England, with research interests in innovation and organisational change, and in public leadership.

Gill Harvey is Reader in Health Management at Manchester Business School, England. She has a professional background in nursing and previously worked for the Royal College of Nursing, England, where she was Director of the Quality Improvement Programme. She has researched and published widely on the implementation of evidence and facilitating quality improvement in practice.

Brian W. Head is Professorial Research Fellow, Institute for Social Science Research, University of Queensland, Australia. His research interests include collaboration to address major social issues, early intervention approaches, evidence-based policy capacities, service delivery, community consultation and governance issues.

Birgit Jæger is Professor of Science Technology and Society at Roskilde University Department of Society and Globalisation, Denmark. She is currently working on a study on ‘Collaborative Innovation in the Public Sector’.

Andrew Johnston is currently Principal Lecturer in International Business at Sheffield Business School, Sheffield Hallam University, England. His research interests focus primarily on the regional economic development process, specifically innovation and entrepreneurship in both public and private sector contexts, university–industry collaboration, knowledge flows and inter-organisational networks.
Paul Joyce is Director of Liverpool Business School at Liverpool John Moores University, England. He has worked on various projects in the UK and internationally on strategic management, innovation and reform in the public services.

Robyn Keast is an Associate Professor in the School of Management, Queensland University of Technology, Australia. Her research focus centres on the structural and micro-processes of networks and collaborative arrangements providing public and voluntary sector service delivery and innovation.

Tony Kinder is Senior Lecturer in Management and works on service innovation in the Business School at the University of Edinburgh, Scotland.

Jenny M. Lewis is Professor of Public Administration and Public Policy at Roskilde University, Denmark and the University of Melbourne, Australia.

Carrick Longley is an active duty Marine Corps Captain and doctoral student in Information Sciences at the Naval Postgraduate School in Monterey, USA.

Laurence E. Lynn, Jr. is Sid Richardson Research Professor at the Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs, University of Texas at Austin, USA.

Fergus Lyon is Professor of Enterprise and Organisations in the Centre for Enterprise and Economic Development Research, Middlesex University, England. He is currently Associate Director (Social Enterprise) of the ESRC-funded Third Sector Research Centre.

Michael Macaulay is Professor in Public Management at Teesside University, England, and has published extensively in the fields of public ethics, integrity and anti-corruption, particularly within the context of local government.

Fraser Macfarlane is a Senior Research Fellow in the Centre for Primary Care and Public Health, Barts and the London School of Medicine and Dentistry, England.

Kate McLaughlin was Senior Lecturer in Public Management in INLOGOV at the University of Birmingham, England. She has now retired.

Myrna P. Mandell is Professor Emeritus at California State University, USA and an Adjunct Faculty at Southern Cross University, Australia, and is recognised as a scholar and researcher in the field of networks and network management.

Mike Martin is a Visiting Professor at Newcastle University, England. His research interests are in issues of information sharing and the information economy.

Valentina Mele is Assistant Professor in the Department of Policy Analysis and Public Management, Bocconi University, Italy.

Ian Miles is Professor of Technological Innovation and Social Change at Manchester Institute of Innovation Research, Manchester Business School, England, and also Head of the Laboratory of Economics of Innovation at ISSEK, Higher School of Economics, Russia. In addition to research on service innovation and knowledge-intensive business services, his work has encompassed foresight and futures studies, information technology innovation and social indicators.
Hannah Noke is an Associate Professor in Entrepreneurship and Innovation at Nottingham University Business School, England. Her research focuses on the transformation of organisations through the implementation of innovation, particularly within the public sector context.

David Norris is Senior Lecturer in Marketing at Teesside University Business School, England. His research interests lie in the field of innovation, particularly looking at how innovation can be used to enhance organisations.

Zoe Radnor is a Professor of Operations Management at Cardiff Business School, Wales. Her area of interest is in performance and process improvement and management in public services. She has led research projects for the Scottish Executive, HM Revenue and Customs, HM Court Services, HealthCare, and Local Government and Higher Education organisations which have evaluated how ‘lean’ techniques are and could be used in the public sector.

Mary Lee Rhodes is an Assistant Professor of Public Management at Trinity College, Republic of Ireland.

Nancy C. Roberts is a Professor of Defense Analysis in the School of Operational and Information Sciences at the Naval Postgraduate School in Monterey, USA.

Kirsty Strokosch is a Research Associate of the Centre for Public Services Research at the University of Edinburgh Business School, Scotland. She is interested in the co-production of public services at the individual and organisational levels.

James H. Svara is Professor of Public Affairs and Director of the Center for Urban Innovation at Arizona State University, USA.

Jacob Torfing is a Professor in Politics and Institutions at the Department of Society and Globalisation, Roskilde University, Denmark, and Director of the Centre for Democratic Network Governance, Roskilde University, Denmark.

Elvira Uyarra is a Research Fellow at the Manchester Institute of Innovation Research, University of Manchester, England. Her current research interests centre on the areas of regional science and innovation policy; the geography of knowledge and innovation; evolutionary approaches to public policy; and the innovation impact of public procurement.

Richard M. Walker is Professor of Public Management and Policy in the Department of Public and Social Administration at City University of Hong Kong, Hong Kong, SAR. His research examines performance in public organisations and questions of innovation, strategic management, red tape and so on, together with sustainable development.

Joe Wallis is a Professor and Head of the Department of Management at the American University of Sharjah, United Arab Emirates. His research interests mainly focus on the political economy of reform, leadership and public sector economics. He has co-authored five books, including the International Handbook of Public Management Reform, and has written over 70 articles, including some that have appeared in Public Administration, Public Management Review, Public Money and Management, Governance, World Development and the Australian Journal of Public Administration.
Contributors

Jennifer Waterhouse is a Senior Lecturer in the Newcastle Business School at the University of Newcastle, Australia.

Rob Wilson is a Senior Lecturer at Newcastle University, England, where he works in the Business School. His research interests are in the exploration of the challenges of information and innovation in the mixed economy of public services.

Paul Windrum is Associate Professor in Strategy at University of Nottingham Business School, England, and Visiting Professor at Max Plank Institute for Economics, Germany. He is an expert on innovation in public and private sector services. Publications include Innovation in Public Services: Entrepreneurship, Creativity and Management.