Contributors

Nikitas Aliprantis is Professor of Law at the Democritus University of Thrace. He is also a member of the European Committee of Social Rights. He is the author of numerous publications, including Les droits sociaux dans les instruments européens et internationaux: Défis à l’échelle mondiale (2009).

Catherine Barnard is Professor of European Union Law and Employment Law and Co-Director of the Centre for European Legal Studies at the University of Cambridge, and Fellow of Trinity College Cambridge. She is the author of EC Employment Law (2006) and The Substantive Law of the EU. The Four Freedoms (2010).

Mark Bell is Professor of Law at the University of Leicester. He conducts research in the areas of national and European anti-discrimination law and labour law. He is the author of Racism and Equality in the European Union (2008) and Anti-discrimination Law and the European Union (2002). From 2004 to 2010, he was a member of the European Commission’s Network of Legal Experts in the Non-Discrimination Field. He is also a member of the Executive Committee of the Society of Legal Scholars. His current research focuses on EU law and precarious work, such as part-time, fixed-term and agency work.

Simon Deakin is Professor of Law at the University of Cambridge, specialising in labour law, private law, company law, law and economics and EU law. He is a programme director in the Cambridge Centre for Business Research, and an associate Faculty member of the Judge Business School. His books include Tort Law (with Basil Markesinis and Angus Johnston), Labour Law (with Gillian S. Morris) and The Law of the Labour Market: Industrialization, Employment, and Legal Evolution (with Frank Wilkinson). He is a member of the editorial boards of the British Journal of Industrial Relations, the Industrial Law Journal (UK) and the Cambridge Journal of Economics.
Filip Dorsement is Professor of Labour Law at the Université Catholique de Louvain. He was an academic assistant at Antwerp University (1993–2002) and Lecturer at Antwerp University (2002–2004) and Utrecht University (2002–2008). He was Guest Professor at the Université Robert Schumann de Strasbourg (2001); Cassino University (2002) and Universita Statale di Milano (2008–2010) teaching Community Labour Law.

Anna-Maria Konsta is an Adjunct Professor in European Politics and Law at the American College of Thessaloniki, a Lecturer at the Hellenic National Center of Public Administration and a Thessaloniki Bar Association lawyer. She has been a research fellow at the Boalt Hall School of Law at the University of California at Berkeley, and she has worked both for the European Commission in Brussels and the Council of Europe in Strasbourg. She is the author of the book Working Time Law in Japan and the European Union: A Comparative Approach in the Context of Legal Culture, and she has published in the field of European and Comparative Social Law. Her current research project deals with gender and migration in the EU.

Haris Kountouros completed his PhD in the field of European labour law at King’s College London (University of London) where he also worked as a Visiting Lecturer in European Law from 1999 to 2004. He has also taught Legal Theory at London Metropolitan University and has given a number of lectures on themes related to European employment law and social policy in other universities as well as conferences. His published work concentrates on EU law, labour law, equality and non-discrimination. He currently works at the European Parliament’s Legislative Dialogue Unit in the Directorate for Relations with National Parliaments.

Sylvaine Laulom is Professor of labour law, community social law, comparative law and British labour law at Université Jean Monnet in Saint-Etienne. She is a member of Université de Saint-Etienne’s critical law research centre (Centre de recherches critiques sur le droit) and has collaborated on a number of European Commission reports, including Studies on the Implementation of Labour Law Directives in the Enlarged European Union, Transnational Collective Bargaining: Past, Present and Future and Impact et perspectives des normes sociales européennes.

Antonio Lo Faro is Professor of Labour Law at the University of Catania and Director of the PhD programme in ‘Theory and Praxis of Social Regulation in the EU’. His research activity is mainly devoted to the study of comparative and EU labour law. Within this perspective, specific attention has been given to issues related to occupational health and safety, European collective bargaining, the judicial dialogue between the ECJ and national jurisdictions, immigration law, part-time, transnational mobility of workers and fundamental social rights. His publications include Funzioni e finzioni della contrattazione collettiva comunitaria. La contrattazione collettiva come risorsa dell’ordinamento giuridico comunitario (1999) and Regulating Social Europe. Myths and Reality of European Collective Bargaining in the EC legal system (2000). He is a Member of the editorial board of European Journal of Social Law.

Piera Loi is Professor of Labour Law at the University of Cagliari. She has also taught at the University of Rey Juan Carlos in Madrid and has collaborated with the Universities of Riga and Skopje.

Jonas Malmberg is Professor of Private Law, particularly Labour Law, at the Faculty of Law, Uppsala University. He is founding fellow of Uppsala Center for Labor Studies and member of the Regulating Labour and Markets Programme (ReMarkLab), Stockholm University. He has published many books and articles on Nordic and European labour law, including Effective Enforcement of EC Labour Law (2003) and Stability and Change in Nordic Labour Law (2002). He is an expert advisor to the Swedish government and the European Commission.

Claire Marzo is Lecturer of Public Law at the University of Paris Est. She previously held a British academy post-doctoral fellowship in the London School of Economics and Political Science. She also participated in several research projects, including a European project sponsored by the European Commission on the management of restructuring. Her research interests include European citizenship, European social law, social rights, European Union law, legal theory, integration of citizens and non-citizens in Europe and minority and migration in Europe.

Marie-Ange Moreau is Professor of Social Law at the EUI and, from 2011, Professor at the Institut d’Études du Travail de Lyon (IETL) at the University Lyon 2. She is also a member of Inter-University Research Centre on Globalization and Work (CRIMT) in Montréal and of the Centre for International and Community Studies and Research at Université d’Aix-Marseille III. Between 2005 and 2008, she was the scientific coordinator of the European research project AgirE. She has written a number of works including Normes sociales, droit du travail et mondialisation (2006).
Ulrich Mückenberger is Professor Emeritus of labour law, European law and globalisation at the University of Hamburg; at present, he is a Fellow of the Centre of European Law and Politics at the University of Bremen. He has conducted research during terms as a Visiting Professor at the University of Illinois in Chicago, the University of Antalya in Turkey, the East China Normal University in Shanghai, the EUI and the Universities of Nantes, Bremen and Bari.

Jean Jacques Paris has been a researcher at the EUI in Florence and administrator at the Directorate-General for Employment, Social Affairs and Equal Opportunities of the European Commission. He is currently consultant at Alpha Group (France) working mainly with representatives of the employees, in a European dimension.

Bernard Ryan is Professor in Law at the University of Kent, where he teaches and researches British, EU and international migration law. He recently co-edited the collection Extraterritorial Immigration Control: Legal Challenges (2010).

Alain Supiot is Professor at the University of Nantes, Director of the Institute of Advanced Studies of Nantes and Member of the Institut Universitaire de France. He authored numerous books focusing on labour law and social security law (among others, Critique du droit du travail) and participated in various collective works (among others Le travail en perspective, Servir l’intérêt general and Beyond Employment. Changes in Work and the Future of Labour Law in Europe.

Daniel Vaughan-Whitehead has worked with the International Labour Office Team for Central and Eastern Europe based in Budapest and for the European Commission (Directorate General for Employment and Social Affairs). He is also President of the International Association for the Economics of Workers’ Participation (IAFEP). He has published various books and articles on transition economies of Central and Eastern European countries, and industrial relations and social dumping in both EU and EU accession countries. His most recent book is EU Enlargement versus Social Europe? The Uncertain Future of the European Social Model.

Christophe Vigneau obtained his PhD from the European University Institute in Florence. He is now Senior lecturer at the University of Paris I Panthéon Sorbonne. He teaches labour law, European labour law and comparative labour law.
Lisa Waddington is Professor of Law at the University of Maastricht. In 2000, she received an ASPASIA award from the NWO (Netherlands Organisation for Scientific Research) for the enhancement of the number of women in higher academic positions. She is co-editor of the European Yearbook of Disability Law and Cases, Materials and Text on National, Supranational and International Non-Discrimination Law (2007). She is the disability coordinator of the European Commission Network of Legal Experts in the Non-Discrimination Field and has published widely on European disability law and European non-discrimination law.