

Contents

List of tables and figures	xi
Introduction	1
PART ONE THE RISE OF BRITISH MONETARISM
1. Setting the agenda	13
Money Supply Targeting vs Interest Rate Targeting From an article 'The money supply – more meaningful than interest rates as a policy goal' in The Times, 2 July 1975	14
Money Supply Targets vs Fixed Exchange Rates From an article 'A conflict of objectives in the Government's monetary policy' in The Times, 19 January 1976	18
2. Some key themes	22
Price Stability and the 'Natural' Level of Unemployment Reprinted from an article of the same name in The Times, 22 January 1975	24
Gradual Monetary Deceleration – A Theme in British Monetarism From an article 'Making headway through the gentle therapy of British monetarism' in The Times, 29 April 1975	27
The Importance of Money in Macroeconomic Forecasting – Part 1 From an article 'A lesson from the Treasury on how to be precisely wrong' in The Times, 28 August 1975	30

3. The rationale of the Medium-Term Financial Strategy	36
Monetarism and the Budget Deficit	38
Paper given to the Money Study Group conference at Brasenose College, Oxford, 14 September 1976
A Proposal for a Medium-Term Financial Plan	49
From a memorandum on the Expenditure White Paper Cmnd 7049, submitted to the General Sub-Committee of the Expenditure Committee of the House of Commons in 1978
The Medium-Term Financial Implications of North Sea Oil	55
From the June 1979 issue of Financial Analysis, the quarterly forecast of L. Messel & Co.
The Analytical Foundations of the Medium-Term Financial Strategy	65
From an article of the same name in the May 1984 issue of Fiscal Studies, the journal of the Institute for Fiscal Studies
4. Britain's monetarist experiment – initial setbacks followed by triumph	78
The Need for a Medium-Term Perspective	80
From an article 'When Balogh was wrong' in The Spectator, 14 March 1981
Why did Monetarism have so much Trouble in the Early 1980s?: 1. The Missed Targets	83
From an article 'Why has monetarism failed so far?: 1. The missed targets' in The Banker, March 1982
Why did Monetarism have so much Trouble in the Early 1980s?: 2. The Public Sector Problem	95
From an article 'Why has monetarism failed so far?: 2. The public sector problem' in The Banker, April 1982
The Value of a Long-Term Anti-Inflation Programme	104
From an article 'Winning the economic war' in The Spectator, 29 May 1982

A Confident Forecast of Prosperity in the Mid-1980s 107
*From an article 'Following Friedman' in The Spectator, 28
 May 1983*

A Perspective on a Decade of Progress 111
From an article 'Alternatives galore, but none of them better' in The Times, 28 September 1985

PART TWO THE FALL OF BRITISH MONETARISM

5. Early warnings 117

Is Lawson Heading for Another Barber Bubble? 118
From an article of the same name in The Times, 17 October 1985

Why the European Monetary System Is No Easy Option 121
From an article of the same name in The Times, 22 November 1985

A Forecast of a Lawson 'Mjini-Boom' 123
From an article 'Why Lawson must repent' in The Times, 9 January 1986

Broad Money vs Narrow Money 126
From an article 'Time to take a broader view of money' in the Financial Times, 16 April 1986

6. A typical Tory boom 129

Will the House-Buying Boom Save Thatcher? 130
Reprinted from an article of the same name in The Times, 17 June 1986

Why Lawson should have Re-Introduced a Broad Money Target
 in Late 1986 132
From an article 'Why Lawson must stick to his target' in The Times, 31 October 1986

The Credit Boom and the Case for a More Independent Bank of England	135
From an article 'Mr Lawson's secret inflation' in The Spectator, 27 June 1987
Stop-Go Returns	140
From an article 'The return of stop-go?' in The Times, 20 October 1987
The Lawson Boom in the Light of the Crash	143
From an article of the same name in Economic Affairs, February/March 1988
Even the Housing Boom can Turn to Bust	150
Reprinted from an article of the same name in The Spectator, 14 May 1988
7. I told you so	154
Quick, Quick, Slow, Stop-Go	155
Reprinted from an article of the same name in The Times, 25 July 1988
On Teenage Scribblers and Computerized Sheep	158
From an article 'Scribblers in the stocks' in The Times, 27 September 1988
The Lawson Boom: Not Quite as Bad as the Barber Boom	160
From an article 'Will the Lawson boom cause as much inflation as the Barber boom?' in Economic Affairs, April/May 1989
On Property Speculation and Business Entrepreneurship	164
From an article 'Boxed in by the boom' in The Times, 25 October 1988
8. Some initial theorizing	167
Credit, Broad Money and Economic Activity	171
Reprinted from a paper 'Credit, broad money and the economy' published in Reflections on Money (ed. D. Llewellyn)

The Importance of Money in Macroeconomic Forecasting – Part 2	191
From an article 'A new and compleat economic model for the Chancellor' in The Spectator, 11 March 1989

PART THREE KEYNES AND BRITISH MONETARISM

9. Keynes and British monetarism	197
Are We Really All Keynesians Now?	197
From an article of the same name in Encounter, April 1975
Keynes, British Monetarism and American Monetarism	209
From a paper 'British and American monetarism compared' published in Keynes, Money and Monetarism (ed. R. Hill)
The Exchange Rate in British Monetary Policy – or Where British Economics Went Wrong	234
From an inaugural lecture at Cardiff Business School, November 1990

PART FOUR TWO PERIOD PIECES

10. Two period pieces	259
The Intelligent Radical's Approach to the Balance of Payments	261
Reprinted from an article 'A new approach to the balance of payments' in Lloyds Bank Review, October 1982
Introducing the Concept of 'Equity Withdrawal'	274
From a paper 'The coming boom in housing credit' written in 1982 for the stockbroking firm L. Messel & Co. with Paul Turnbull
Index	289

