

Tables and Figures

---

Tables

1.1	Freedom ratings of post-communist countries 1996–97	3
2.1	Relevant parties and their main ethnic bases	21
2.2	The breakdown of democracy	26
2.3	Socioeconomic indicators for Central and Eastern Europe	39
2.4	Ratings of ethnic homogeneity	47
3.1	Differences between Estonians and non-Estonians in Estonia	74
4.1	The Russophone vote in the 1995 Saeima election	101
4.2	The ethnic Latvian vote in the 1995 Saeima election	101
5.1	Elections to the pre-war Lithuanian Seimas	126
5.2	'Left–right' placement of five relevant parties	129
5.3	The contents of the left/right divide in Lithuanian politics	131
5.4	Five attitude items by party affiliation	132
5.5	Most urgent problems to be solved, by party	133
5.6	Most important motivation factors behind party preference	135
5.7	Distinction between government and opposition in 1992–96 Seimas	136
5.8	Satisfaction with democracy in Central and East European countries	137
5.9	Attitudes towards the system of government at three points in time	138
5.10	Trust in political and societal institutions in Lithuania	139
6.1	Composition of the Sejm in 1989–91	161
7.1	Evaluations of Czech–Slovak relationship	194
7.2	Satisfaction with development	196
7.3	Evaluations of economic reforms	197
7.4	Evaluation of the economic transformation in 1993–96	197
7.5	Satisfaction with the development of democracy in the Czech Republic	197

7.6	Evaluation of human rights situation	197
7.7	Preferred economic system	199
7.8	Preferred form of state	199
7.9	Evaluation of the current situation and the pre-1989 regime	201
7.10	Evaluation of the current situation and the pre-1989 regime based on voters' party preferences	201
7.11	Left-right self-placement of Czech voters 1991-97	201
7.12	Attitudes in the Czech Republic towards EU and NATO membership applications, by party preference	203
7.13	Confidence of Czech citizens in constitutional institutions	203
7.14	Satisfaction with the current political situation	205
7.15	Satisfaction with the standard of living in the Czech Republic	205
7.16	General political satisfaction	208
7.17	Satisfaction with economic reforms	208
7.18	Satisfaction with the development of democracy	209
7.19	Evaluation of human rights situation	209
7.20	Attitudes towards the collapse of the Czechoslovak federation	211
7.21	Attitudes towards EU and NATO membership	213
7.22	Development of party preferences in Slovakia in 1995-97	214
7.23	Credibility of top political institutions in Slovakia	215
8.1	Satisfaction with the development of democracy	233
8.2	Impact of attitudes towards the market, the EU and NATO on party preferences in November 1995	236
8.3	Mean position of seven parties vis-à-vis other parties as perceived by a panel of party activists	254
8.4	Principal component analysis of the issue variables in Table 8.3	254
8.5	Logistic regression analyses of the determinants of party preferences in five CEU surveys	258
9.1	Share of votes of party families	280
9.2	Legislative output of the Slovene National Assembly 1990-96	284
9.3	Number of parliamentary committees and committee membership	286
9.4	Suspensive vetoes in National Council	286
10.1	Political attitudes and party confidence	303
10.2	Political attitudes and social structure	305
10.3	Proximity of party support	306
10.4	Confidence in political parties by social category	309
10.5	Support for presidential candidates by social category	310
10.6	Basic attitudes: legislators, party supporters, and non-supporters	311
12.1	Patterns of cleavage types in Eastern Europe based on parties represented in national parliaments after 1989	373

Figures

2.1	The main historical religious cleavage lines in Eastern Europe	15
2.2	Ethnic cleansing and resettlement, 1945–49	33
2.3	Democratic survival: a classification of European countries in inter-war Europe	45
2.4	Three dimensions of continuity and their impact on the cleavage structure	52
3.1	Three concepts of Estonian politics: a conceptual scheme	56
3.2	Main patterns of party developments in Estonia	70
4.1	Party positions on the national and socioeconomic cleavages	92
9.1	Political cleavages and party competition	282
10.1	Attitudes towards property in Romania	313
10.2	Attitudes towards minorities in Romania	314
10.3	Issue distance between Romanian legislators and party supporters	314
10.4	Issue distance between Romanian legislators and party non-supporters on the issues of property and minorities	315
10.5	Issue positions of Romanian legislators and party supporters	316
11.1	Attitudes on political confrontation	345
11.2	Attitude to privatization by party affiliation	347
11.3	Attitude to private initiative by party affiliation	347
11.4	Nationalist attitudes by party affiliation	348
11.5	Attitudes towards MRF	349
11.6	Views on Islam as a threat to national security	349
11.7	Attitude towards joining NATO by party affiliation	350
11.8	General public's attitude towards joining NATO, November 1996	351
11.9	Main parties' electorate by age	352
11.10	Affinity with the BSP	353
11.11	Affinity with UDF	353
12.1	Cleavage typologies and their origins	368

