The editors would like to thank all of the authors for their contributions, engagement and encouragement throughout this important project. It has been a slower journey to final publication than we might have wanted. That said, rather than diminishing in importance, the issues that this collection raises and engages with are more pressing today. We also especially want to thank the IS Academic Education and Development programme at the University of Amsterdam, the Netherlands – and particularly the support of Dr Mario Novelli. This programme also provided much needed time and space for reading and writing for one of us, Susan Robertson, with a funded four-month Fellowship in 2008. This fed into a symposium titled Public Private Partnerships in Education: New Actors and Modes of Education Governance in a Globalized World in 2009 under the auspices of the IS Academic programme. Many of the papers in this volume were first aired at this event. However, we would like to thank Elsevier for their permission to reprint the chapter by Prachi Srivastava and Su-Ann Oh's titled 'Private foundations, philanthropy, and partnership in education and development: Mapping the terrain' which first appeared in the International Journal of Educational Development, 2010, Volume 30, pp.460–71. We would like to acknowledge the great support from Alex Pettifer and Jennifer Wilcox at Edward Elgar in bringing this project to fruition as a book. Finally, we are deeply grateful to our own institutions for their support.
