

Contributors

Fabio Berton is Assistant Professor of Economic Policy at the University of Turin and Senior Research Fellow at the LABORatorio R. Revelli – Centre for Employment Studies in Turin.

Marius R. Busemeyer is a Professor of Political Science at the University of Konstanz in Germany. Busemeyer studied political science, economics, public administration and law at the University of Heidelberg and the Harvard Kennedy School of Government. He holds a doctorate in political science from the University of Heidelberg and worked as a Senior Researcher with Wolfgang Streeck and Kathleen Thelen at the Max Planck Institute for the Study of Societies in Cologne before coming to Konstanz.

Heejung Chung is a Senior Lecturer in Sociology and Social Policy at the University of Kent's School of Social Policy, Sociology and Social Research. Her research interests are broadly around cross-national comparative analysis of welfare states and their labour markets.

Martina Dieckhoff is a Senior Research Fellow at the WZB Berlin Social Science Centre. Her research interests are in comparative labour market and life course research. Specifically, she works on the demographic distribution of atypical employment and unemployment, the consequences of unemployment and the determinants of and returns to labour market education and training.

Werner Eichhorst studied sociology, political science, psychology and public policy and administration at the universities of Tuebingen and Konstanz where he graduated in 1995. From 1996 to 1999 he was Doctoral and Post-Doctoral Fellow at the Max Planck Institute for the Study of Societies in Cologne. In autumn 1998 he received his Doctoral degree from the University of Konstanz. From 1999 to 2004 he was project director at the Bertelsmann Foundation, a private think-tank in Germany, where he was responsible for comparative analyses of the German labour market and related policy areas. After working with the Institute for Employment

Research, IAB, from 2004 to 2005, he joined IZA as Research Associate in July 2005, became Senior Research Associate in February 2006, Deputy Director of Labor Policy in April 2007 and Director of Labor Policy Europe in January 2014.

Baptiste Françon is an Assistant Professor in Economics at Bureau d'Économie Théorique et Appliquée (BETA), University of Lorraine. He received his M.Sc. from Paris School of Economics in 2009 and Ph.D. from University Paris 1 in 2013. He previously worked on the political economy of labour market reforms, in a comparative perspective (France and Germany).

Vanessa Gash is a Senior Lecturer in Sociology and Associate Fellow of the Centre for Comparative Social Surveys (CCSS), City University London. She is responsible for the development, management and delivery of core and optional modules and research methods for students in sociology and related disciplines. In addition, she oversees the supervision and assessment of Master's and Ph.D.'s in sociology and related disciplines. She is Head of International Studies, responsible for liaison with partner universities and Junior Year Abroad, Study Abroad and Exchange students.

Anne C. Gielen is Assistant Professor in Economics at the Erasmus University Rotterdam and Senior Research Associate at IZA. She holds a Ph.D. from Tilburg University and her main research interests are labour economics, health economics, and other applied microeconometrics topics.

Maarten Keune is Professor at the University of Amsterdam where he holds the Chair in Social Security and Labour Relations and Director of the Amsterdam Institute for Advanced Labour Studies (AIAS). He holds a Ph.D. in political and social sciences from the European University Institute in Florence. Previously he held various positions at the International Labour Organization and the European Trade Union Institute.

Alison Koslowski is a Senior Lecturer in Social Policy at the University of Edinburgh. Her research interests focus on the comparative analysis of labour markets and gender equality. She is a partner of the Families and Societies collaborative grant (FP7, 2013–2017).

Janine Leschke is Associate Professor at the Department of Business and Politics (DBP) at Copenhagen Business School. She is responsible for coordinating and teaching courses in the B.Sc. programmes International Business and Politics and Business Administration and Sociology. She is Ph.D. coordinator for DBP in the Doctoral School of Organisation and Management Studies (OMS). Prior to her current position she was Senior Researcher at the European Trade Union Institute (ETUI) in Brussels and Ph.D. Fellow in the labour market and employment unit at the Social Science Research Centre Berlin (WZB).

Pedro López-Roldán is Associate Professor at the Department of Sociology Universitat Autònoma de Barcelona, Institut d'Estudis del Treball-IET, Spain.

Per K. Madsen is Professor in Labour Market Research at the Department of Political Science, Aalborg University, Denmark. He graduated in Economics in 1973 from the University of Copenhagen. Until 2005, he was Assistant and later Associate Professor in the Department of Political Science, University of Copenhagen. Since 1997 he has been the Danish correspondent to the European Employment Observatory of the European Commission. In 2006 he was elected Chairman of the Economic Council of the Labour Movement. Over the years he has been responsible for several larger research projects, most recently his research has focused on the interface between welfare states and labour markets, including the issue of 'flexicurity'.

Paul Marx is an Associate Professor in the Political Science Department at the University of Southern Denmark. He studied political sciences and economics at the Free University of Berlin, Marburg University and Warsaw School of Economics. He joined IZA in October 2008 as a Resident Research Affiliate under the IZA Scholarship Programme and became a Research Associate in July 2011. After moving to Denmark in December 2011, he remains affiliated with IZA as a Research Fellow. His research interests are related to comparative labour market and welfare state analysis, employment protection legislation and non-standard employment.

Caitlin McLean is a doctoral candidate in Social Policy at the University of Edinburgh. Her research interests include comparative labour market and family policies and their relation to gender inequalities in work and family life, including differences in non-standard employment.

Antje Mertens is an economist and has been a Professor at the Berlin School of Economics and Law since 2005. She studied at the TU

Berlin and the University of Sussex in England. She holds a M.A. in International Economics and was awarded her doctorate and habilitation in Economics by the Humboldt University of Berlin. Between 1998 and 2005 she worked as a Scientific Assistant at the Max Planck Institute for Human Development in Berlin.

Oscar Molina lectures at the Institute for Labour Studies (IET), Universitat Autònoma de Barcelona. He holds a degree in Economics from Pompeu Fabra University and a Ph.D. in Political and Social Sciences from the European University Institute, Florence, Italy. In 2005–2007 he was IRCHSS Research Fellow at the Industrial Relations and Human Resources Group, University College Dublin and then Junior ICREA Researcher in the Centre d'Estudis Sociològics sobre la Vida Quotidiana i el Treball (QUIT), UAB.

Ruud Muffels is Professor of Socio-Economics (labour market and social security studies) at the Department of Sociology at Tilburg University. He is also Research Fellow at Research Institute on Flexicurity, Labour Market Dynamics and Social Cohesion at Tilburg University, the Network for Research on Ageing at the Economic Faculty, DIW-Berlin, and IZA-Bonn.

Maira Nelson is an Assistant Professor in Political Science at Lund University. She conducts research on the nature and determinants of welfare state change and recent work focuses on the politics of human capital investment and the role of voters in governments' reform strategies.

Matteo Richiardi is Assistant Professor of Economics at the University of Turin, Senior Research Fellow at the LABORatorio R. Revelli – Centre for Employment Studies, and an Affiliate of the Collegio Carlo Alberto of Turin. His research interests are labour economics and microsimulation.

Laura Romeu-Gordo completed her Ph.D. in Economics at the Technical University of Berlin and German Institute for Economic Research (DIW). She has worked in the past at the Max Planck Institute for Human Development in Berlin and at the Institute for Employment Research (IAB) in Nürnberg. Currently, she holds a position at the German Centre of Gerontology (DZA).

Stefano Sacchi is Assistant Professor of Political Science at the University of Milan and an Affiliate of the Collegio Carlo Alberto of Turin, where he coordinates the Master's in Public Policy and Social Change (MAPS).

His recent scholarship has focused on labour market and social protection reforms in advanced economies.

Trudie Schils works as an Education Economist at the Maastricht University School of Business and Economics. Recently she initiated a regional programme in which academic research is conducted in strong cooperation with policy-makers and practitioners in the field of education. Her current research focuses on the analysis of both student and school performance, in particular on the role and limitations of tests to measure such performance.

Kathleen Thelen is Ford Professor of Political Science at MIT and a permanent external member of the Max Planck Institut für Gesellschaftsforschung in Cologne, Germany. Thelen has served as President of the Comparative Politics Section of the American Political Science Association, and as Chair of the Council for European Studies. She currently co-chairs the 'Seminar on the State and Capitalism Since 1800' with Peter A. Hall at the Center for European Studies at Harvard.

Verena Tobsch studied Business Administration at the Otto-von-Guericke University Magdeburg and Free University Berlin. From 1998 to 2001 she worked as Research Associate at the German Institute for Economic Research (DIW Berlin) and Europa-University Viadrina at Frankfurt (Oder). Tobsch gained experience in research and lecturing during her employment as a Research Associate at the International Institute for Management at University of Flensburg (2006–2008) and at the Institute for HRM and Labour at the Helmut-Schmidt-University in Hamburg (2008–2012). In summer 2014 she received her Doctoral degree from Hamburg University and joined IZA as a Research Assistant (July).