Contributors

Gabriel M. Ahlfeldt is a lecturer in Urban Economics and Land Development at the London School of Economics and Political Sciences, UK. His quantitative research covers the fields of applied urban and regional economics. He is interested in the spatial dimension of the urban and regional distribution of economic activity, and the spatial interaction between economic agents at various geographic levels. He has published in several journals, including the Journal of the Royal Statistical Society A, Economics Letters, Journal of Economic Geography and Regional Science and Urban Economics.

Robert Baumann is Associate Professor in the Department of Economics at the College of the Holy Cross, Worcester, Massachusetts, USA. His research fields deal with labour economics and sports economics. He has published several papers in specialized journals, including the Journal of Sports Economics, the Southern Economic Journal and Urban Studies.

David J. Berri is a sports economist and an Associate Professor of Applied Economics at Southern Utah University, USA, known for his sometimes-controversial analysis of NBA basketball. He is a member of the editorial board of the Journal of Sports Economics.

Rodney Fort is Professor of Sport Management at University of Michigan, USA. He is the author of the book Sports Economics and co-author, with James Quirk, of the books Pay Dirt: The Business of Professional Team Sports and Hard Ball: The Abuse of Power in Pro Team Sports. He was, alongside James Quirk, the first author to publish a paper about sports economics in the Journal of Economic Literature. He is co-editor with John Fizel of the books International Sports Economics Comparisons and Economics of College Sports.

Bernd Frick is Professor of Organizational and Media Economics in the Department of Management and Vice President of the University of Paderborn, Germany with the responsibility for strategy, finance and international relations. His research interests are in labour and personnel economics, and organizational economics, as well as in sports economics. He has published about fifty refereed papers in peer-reviewed journals and is currently working on a monograph entitled Calcio, Football, Soccer: The Economics of the World’s Greatest Team Sport.

William Greene is Professor of Economics, Toyota Motor Corp. Professor of Economics and Faculty Fellow of Entertainment, Media and Technology at Stern School of Business, New York University, USA. He has published numerous papers in specialized journals, including the Journal of Transport Economics and Policy, Journal of Econometrics and the American Economic Review.

Brad R. Humphreys is Professor in the Department of Economics at the University of Alberta, Canada, where he holds the Chair in the Economics of Gaming. He belongs to several editorial boards and has published articles in the Southern Economic Journal, Applied Economics, Journal of Sport Management, Journal of Sports Economics and Contemporary Economic Policy.

Leo Kahane is Professor of Economics at Providence College, USA. His research has been published in the Atlantic Economic Journal, Economica, Economic Inquiry, Public Choice, Applied Economics, the American Journal of Economics and Sociology and the Review of Economics and Statistics. He is the co-founder and editor-in-chief of the Journal of Sports Economics. His teaching interests include international trade, sports economics and econometrics.

Georgios Kavetsos is an economist at the Department of Social Policy at the London School of Economics, UK. There are two main themes to his work. The first looks at individuals’ revealed preferences to value regional policy interventions; the second uses subjective wellbeing data to value non-market goods. He is currently conducting research on the intangible benefits of the London 2012 Olympic Games.

Young Hoon Lee is Professor of Economics at Sogang University, South Korea, and has a PhD in Economics from Michigan State University, USA. He is an expert in econometrics and sports economics and has published various papers in specialized journals, including Journal of Econometrics, Economic Inquiry, Journal of Productivity Analysis and Journal of Sports Economics. He has also been a member of the editorial board of the International Journal of Sport Finance since 2006.

Neil Longley is Professor of Economics at the Isenberg School of Management, University of Massachusetts Amherst, USA. His research interests are sports economics and sport finance. He has published in several journals, including the Journal of Sports Economics and the Atlantic Economic Journal.

Victor A. Matheson is a Professor of Economics at the College of the Holy Cross, Worcester, Massachusetts, USA. He is an expert in sports economics, especially, in the analysis of great sports events’ impact, public finance and gaming economics. He has collaborated as an expert in magazines, including Forbes, ESPN Magazine and The New York Times.
Contributors

Roger G. Noll is Professor of Economics Emeritus at Stanford University and a Senior Fellow at the Stanford Institute for Economic Policy Research, USA, where he directs the Program in Regulatory Policy. He is the author or co-author of 12 books and over 300 articles and reviews. Noll’s primary research interests include economics of sports and entertainment, among others.

Plácido Rodríguez is Professor EU of Economics in the Department of Economics at Oviedo University, Spain. He is co-editor of the books Sports Economics after Fifty Years: Essays in Honour of Simon Rottenberg, Governance and Competition in Professional Sports Leagues, Threats to Sports and Sports Participation and Social Responsibility and Sustainability in Sports. He was President of Real Sporting de Gijon Football Club, and is the current Director of the Sports Economics Observatory Foundation and the President of International Association of Sports Economists (IASE).

Robert Simmons is Senior Lecturer in Economics at the Management School, Lancaster University, UK. An expert in labour economics and sports economics, he has been consultant to the International Labour Organization. He is Editor in Chief of the International Journal of Sport Finance.

Stefan Szymanski is the Stephen J. Galetti Professor of Sport Management in the School of Kinesiology at the University of Michigan, USA. He is the author of numerous books and articles on sports economics. His areas of study are sports management and economics; sport history, culture and society; European sport and the internationalization of sport; international sports federations and the governance of sport.

John Vrooman is a Lecturer in Economics at Vanderbilt University in Tennessee, USA. He has a PhD in Economics from the University of Texas. He is the author of several papers on competitive balance, (‘Competitive balance in monopoly sports leagues’) and players’ labour market of the baseball league (‘Unified theory of capital and labor markets in Major League Baseball’).