Contributors

Salvatore Finamore is a Doctoral Researcher at the University of Cambridge, Department of Politics and International Studies, and Managing Editor of the Cambridge Review of International Affairs. He holds an MA cum laude from LUISS University, and has conducted further studies at the University of Uppsala and at Renmin University of China. His research focuses on China–Europe relations, and particularly on the nature of engagement as a foreign policy strategy and on foreign policy instruments in the EU’s China policy. He has worked for the European Commission and for the Italian Ministry of Foreign Affairs, and he has presented his research at several international conferences in Europe and North America.

De-Yuan Kao is a PhD candidate in the Department of Political Science at Boston University. His research interests are US foreign policy, US–China–Taiwan relations, security studies, and international regimes. He was a visiting student in the Institute of European and American Studies at the Academia Sinica in Taipei from 2010 to 2011. His recent works include ‘China Policy’ in The Obama Presidency: A Preliminary Assessment (edited by Watson et al., SUNY Press 2012), and “Obama’s Asia Policy” in another forthcoming edited volume.

Grant Marlier is a PhD candidate at Boston University. His dissertation is entitled “Expanding the Circle: The Evolution of Use of Force Norms within the UN Security Council”. Grant lives and works in New York City.

Jing Men has been the InBev-Baillet Latour Chair and Professor of European Union–China Relations since 2008 in the Department of EU International Relations and Diplomacy Studies, College of Europe. She obtained a PhD in Political Science (2004) at the Vrije Universiteit Brussel. Her research and teaching have been focusing on Chinese foreign policy and EU–China relations for more than ten years. She is the founder of the electronic journal EU–China Observer, launched at the beginning of 2009, where she edits and publishes articles on EU–China relations.
Miguel Otero-Iglesias is Assistant Professor in International Political Economy at the ESSCA School of Management in Paris, and Research Associate at the London School of Economics. He is a regular visiting research fellow at the Institute of World Economics and Politics within the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences. His areas of expertise are: European and global monetary governance, the political economy of EU relations with China and Brazil, and theories of money and power. Previously he was an Adjunct Lecturer at the University of Oxford and Associate Lecturer at Oxford Brookes University, where he obtained his PhD degree in International Political Economy.

Ramon Pacheco Pardo is a Lecturer in the Department of European and International Studies at King’s College London, where he is also an Associate of the Lau China Institute. His peer reviewed publications have appeared in International Relations of the Asia Pacific, Asia Europe Journal, Journal of European Integration and East Asia, among others. Dr. Pacheco Pardo’s main areas of research include East Asia’s international relations and political economy, EU foreign and economic policy, and EU–East Asia relations. He is a frequent media contributor, having been interviewed by Al Jazeera English, BBC, Channel NewsAsia and CNN, among others.

Wei Shen is Associate Dean for China and Jean Monnet Chair Professor at the ESSCA School of Management in France. He holds a PhD degree in Geography from Loughborough University. He is an associate at the Institut français des relations internationales (ifri) and Vice-President of the EU–Asia Centre and has taught at Sciences Po de Paris and Institut des Hautes Études Européennes (Strasbourg) and is an academic expert for the EU. Previously he worked at the Council of Europe (Strasbourg), the Asia–Europe Foundation (Singapore), the International Organization for Migration (Geneva), and the United Nations in Hamburg and Rome. Wei Shen has published widely in academic journals and been quoted in international media such as Le Monde, International Herald Tribune and China Daily.

Michael Smith is Professor of European Politics and Jean Monnet Chair in the Department of Politics, History and International Relations at Loughborough University, where he is also co-Director of the Centre for the Study of International Governance. He has published extensively on EU–US and EU–Asia relations and on EU external policies. His recent books include The European Union and the United States: Competition and Convergence in the Global Arena (Palgrave-Macmillan 2008, with Steven McGuire), and International Relations and the European Union.
Contributors

(2nd edition, Oxford University Press 2011, edited with Christopher Hill). He is currently working on the developing diplomatic system of the European Union, and especially on EU diplomacy towards its key 'strategic partners'.

Haibing Zhang is the Executive Director of the Institute for World Economic Studies, Shanghai Institutes for International Studies (SIIS). She received her master's degree from Nankai University (2001) and doctoral degree from Shanghai Academy of Social Sciences (2004). Dr. Zhang is specialized in the study of global economic governance, especially on the official development aid, EU regional integration studies and G20.

Xiaotong Zhang is Associate Professor of the School of Political Science and Public Administration of Wuhan University, China. He was a former trade diplomat. He obtained a PhD degree in Political Science at Université Libre de Bruxelles (ULB) in Belgium.

Suisheng Zhao is Professor and Executive Director of the Center for China–US Cooperation at Josef Korbel School of International Studies, University of Denver, and Senior fellow at Chahar Institute. He is founding editor of the Journal of Contemporary China, a member of the Board of Governors of the US Committee of the Council for Security Cooperation in the Asia Pacific (USCSCAP), a member of National Committee on US–China Relations, and a Research Associate at the Fairbanks Center for East Asian Research in Harvard University. He also teaches at several Chinese universities. He is the author and editor of a dozen of books and his articles appeared in Political Science Quarterly, The Wilson Quarterly, Washington Quarterly, International Politik, The China Quarterly, World Affairs, Asian Survey, Asian Affairs, Journal of Democracy, Pacific Affairs, Communism and Post-Communism Studies, Problems of Post-Communism, and elsewhere.