The idea for this volume came about at George Mason University, Fairfax, Virginia, USA where I spent a one-year sabbatical in 2011. During my sabbatical in the Office for Research & Economic Development at Mason, I observed Mason's transformation into a more entrepreneurial university. While I worked on knowledge commercialization, the university's technology transfer program transformed from an internally focused 'patent-centric' design to an externally focused 'company-centric' orientation in practice. I attended several meetings and discussions during this transformation process. I would like to express my appreciation and thanks to George Mason University for its inspiring research environment and great hospitality. However, there is one special person who created this inspiring atmosphere and who has been my 'muse' for this volume: Roger R. Stough. His unlimited energy, enthusiasm and excitement provided excellent motivation. I wish to express my sincere gratitude to Roger R. Stough for his support and encouragement.

I would like to thank all of the contributors for their dedication and hard work, which was often done in difficult circumstances. During this project two baby girls were born: one in Sweden and one in the Netherlands. I wish to thank in particular Maria Ljunggren and Patricia van Hemert for their hard work at the final stages of their pregnancies and the very beginning of their motherhood journeys. I would also like to thank the many referees who carefully judged the quality of the contributions. Finally, I wish to thank Matthew Pitman and Laura Seward (Edward Elgar, Cheltenham, UK) for their support and kind cooperation.
