

Acknowledgments

This book would not have been possible without the effort of a number of people and the financial support of several organizations. The editors would like to thank Sebastian Schich and Angelique Servin from the Secretariat for the Committee on Financial Markets (CMF) at the OECD. Financial support for the Symposium was provided by the Warwick Legal Research Institute; the Centre for Commercial Law and Financial Regulation, University of Reading Law School; the Centre for Financial & Management Studies and the School of Oriental and African Studies (SOAS), University of London; and, Patterson & LaBrosse Financial Consultants Ltd.

The chapters were drawn from papers delivered at the Third Banking Law Symposium. We are grateful and thank all of the speakers, presenters and discussants for their contributions and participation. The moderators did a superb job and the observations and questions from the attendees at the Symposium helped to improve the focus of our work.

We also acknowledge the efforts of Ben Booth, our commissioning editor, from Edward Elgar Law and the administrative team behind our institutions who helped us in the organisation and development of the event, including among others Anna Denby, Anne Perkins, Rahima Begun and Jane Savory.

John Raymond LaBrosse would like to thank his mother, Frances, and Gail, Scott, Kendra and Conrad for their patience, love and support. He would also like to thank his long-time friend and colleague Jim McCollum for his help beyond the call of duty in acting as the Rapporteur to the Third Banking Law Symposium and for his assistance in preparing the preface and several chapters of this book. Thanks as well to my fellow members of the Great Beaver Society of New York who helped me throughout my career in learning more about the functioning of Wall Street

Rodrigo Olivares-Caminal would like to thank Teresa and Felipe for their love and support; his co-organisers for their help and collaboration in making another Symposium possible; Lee Buchheit, Mitu Gulati and Joseph J. Norton for their support; and, Rosa Lastra for her friendship.

Dalvinder Singh would like to thank Sarbjit, Amaryn and Arvind for their love and support.
