

Contributors

Undala Alam is a lecturer in the School of Politics, International Studies and Philosophy at the Queen's University, Belfast. She worked previously at Cranfield University and as a water resources specialist for the United Nations and the World Bank.

Awn S. Al-Khasawneh is the former Prime Minister of Jordan. Before taking up this office, he was a judge and former Vice-President of the International Court of Justice (2000–11) and prior to that a member of the International Law Commission (1986–99). He held senior legal posts in the Jordanian Ministry of Foreign Affairs. Later, he was Adviser to the King and Adviser of the State in International Law and Chief of the Royal Hashemite Court.

Laurence Boisson de Chazournes is Professor of International Law and International Organization at the University of Geneva and the Director of the Platform for International Water Law. She worked previously as Senior Counsel to the World Bank (1995–99) and is an adviser to various international organizations and governments, and has held international assignments as counsel, expert and arbitrator before the International Court of Justice and other judicial fora.

Lucius Caflisch is a member of the International Law Commission (UN). He was formerly a judge at the European Court of Human Rights and is Professor Emeritus at the Graduate Institute of International Studies in Geneva.

Marius Claassen is an aquatic ecologist, with broad experience in the fields of water resource assessment, risk assessment and decision support systems. As Principal Scientist, Dr. Claassen manages the water governance research portfolio at the Council for Scientific and Industrial Research (CSIR), South Africa.

Catarina de Albuquerque is the first UN Special Rapporteur on the human right to safe drinking water and sanitation since 2008 (formerly Independent Expert). She is also Professor at the Law Faculties of the Universities of Braga and Coimbra and of American University's Washington College of Law and is a Senior Legal Adviser at the Office for Documentation and Comparative Law, an independent institution under the Prosecutor General's Office of Portugal. She was awarded the Human Rights Golden Medal by the Portuguese Parliament in 2009. Her work in human rights was also honored by the Portuguese President of the Republic with the Order of Merit.

Lilian del Castillo-Laborde is Professor of International Law at the School of Law at the University of Buenos Aires. She has been appointed member of the Argentinean Academy of Environmental Science.

Gabriel de los Cobos is a hydro-geologist in GESDEC (service of geology, soil and waste), Department of Security, Police and Environment of the Canton of Geneva. He is responsible for the management of groundwater resources in the canton.

Dustin Garrick is a researcher (economic geography) at the University of Oxford in the School of Geography and the Environment. He specializes in comparative water policy and economic analysis with a focus on water allocation and climate adaptation in transboundary rivers. Before joining Oxford, Dr. Garrick was a Fulbright Scholar in Australia, where he maintains an active research program as a research associate of Australian National University.

Jakob Granit is Centre Director at the Stockholm Environment Institute (SEI) and the International Waters Panel Member on the Scientific and Technical Advisory Panel (STAP) of the Global Environment Facility (GEF). Previously, he was a Director, Knowledge Services, at the Stockholm International Water Institute (SIWI). He has 20 years of experience working with transboundary freshwater resources management and development for the World Bank as a senior water resources management specialist and the Swedish International Development Cooperation Agency (Sida). His research focuses on how to achieve collective action on shared water systems, regional integration and the water and energy nexus.

David Grey is visiting professor of water policy at the University of Oxford (Centre for the Environment) and honorary visiting professor at the University of Exeter (College of Social Science and International Studies). He was the Senior Water Adviser of the World Bank, where he worked for 27 years and was responsible for managing the bank's support for initiatives on major river basins, including the Nile, Zambezi, Indus, Ganges-Brahmaputra and the 'Rivers of the Greater Himalayas'. He serves on several international panels and acts as adviser on the Mekong, Tigris-Euphrates, Ganges, and Nile Rivers.

Ellen Hey is Professor and Head of the Department of Public International Law at the Erasmus School of Law at Erasmus University Rotterdam. She is a member of the Aarhus Compliance Committee (UNECE) and of the Advisory Commission on Legal Aspects of Water Management and Public Works of the Netherlands Ministry of Transport, Public Works and Water Management. In that capacity she represented the Netherlands in negotiations regarding European rivers and in the first rounds of negotiations for the UNECE Helsinki Convention on International Rivers and Lakes. She also worked as a consultant on water law for various international institutions.

Valerie Hughes is Director of the Legal Affairs Division at the World Trade Organization (WTO) in Geneva. Previously, she was Director of the WTO Appellate Body Secretariat. Before moving to Geneva, Ms. Hughes spent 19 years with the Government of Canada, during which she held various positions in public and private international law. She also worked in private practice for two years.

Marcelo Kohen is Professor of International Law at the Graduate Institute of International and Development Studies, Geneva. He is an associate member of the Institut de droit international and acts as legal counsel and advocate for a number of States before the International Court of Justice.

Christina Leb is an associate member of the Platform for International Law at the Faculty of Law of the University of Geneva. Her research focuses on the topic of cooperation in transboundary water law. Dr. Leb frequently works as a consultant to international organizations, primarily on collaborative water resources management in the Nile Basin and the South Asia region.

Gabrielle Marceau works as Counselor at the Legal Affairs Division of the WTO and is Associate Professor at the Faculty of Law, University of Geneva. She was previously one of the adviser members of the cabinet of Pascal Lamy, Director-General of the WTO.

Makane Moïse Mbengue is an Associate Professor at the Faculty of Law of the University of Geneva. He is a Visiting Professor at Sciences Po Paris (School of Law). He is also a member of the Platform for International Water Law.

Stephen C. McCaffrey is Distinguished Professor of International Law at the McGeorge School of Law at the University of the Pacific. He is the former Special Rapporteur on the law of the non-navigational uses of international watercourses at the International Law Commission (UN). He acts as legal counsel and advocate for various governments in disputes brought before the International Court of Justice and other international tribunals.

Owen McIntyre is Senior Lecturer in environmental law at the Faculty of Law, University College Cork, a constituent college of the National University of Ireland. Since 2004, he has served as a panel member of the Project Complaint Mechanism (PCM) of the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development (EBRD). He is a member of the scientific committee of the European Environment Agency.

Salman M.A. Salman is an academic researcher and consultant on water law and policy. Until December 2009 he worked as Lead Counsel and Adviser on Water Law and the Safeguard Policies with the World Bank. Prior to that, he was a Legal Officer with the International Fund for Agricultural Development of the United Nations (IFAD), in Rome, Italy, and a law lecturer at the University of Khartoum in Sudan. He obtained his LL.B. from University of Khartoum, and holds an LL.M. and J.S.D. from Yale Law School.

Dinah Shelton is the Manatt/Ahn Professor of Law (emeritus) at the Law School at George Washington University. She is the former president of the Inter-American Human Rights Commission. She also served as a legal consultant to the United Nations Environment Programme, UNITAR, World Health Organization, European Union, Council of Europe, and Organization of American States.

Attila Tanzi is Professor of International Law at the University of Bologna and Chairman of the Legal Board of the 1992 UNECE Water Convention (2005–present). He was the Chairman of the Compliance Committee of the UNECE 1999 Protocol on Water and Health (2007–10) and a consultant to the Italian Ministry for Foreign Affairs (1987–2001). He has served as counsel and arbitrator in several inter-State arbitrations.

Mara Tignino is a Senior Researcher at the Platform for International Water Law at the Faculty of Law of the University of Geneva. She also serves as a consultant to governments, international organizations, NGOs, and the private sector. Dr. Tignino received a Ph.D in International Law from the Graduate Institute of International and Development Studies in Geneva. She has been a Visiting Scholar at the George Washington University School of Law in Washington, D.C.

Bahakal Abate Yimer is a practitioner and part-time lecturer (at Addis Ababa University School of Law) from Ethiopia focusing on investment law, dispute settlement and transnational corporate law matters. He holds an LL.M. in International Dispute Settlement from the MIDS-Geneva joint program, and an LL.M. in International Economic and Business Law from the University of Groningen.