Acknowledgements

This volume originated from a series of moments. In particular, the Institute for Global Law and Policy under the vision of David Kennedy, and the International University College of Turin spearheaded by Ugo Mattei, were instrumental in generating a critical mass of scholars experiencing similar anxieties and hopes – and I am deeply grateful to have had the opportunity to be part of these communities. Many of the authors in this volume participated in events and projects related to these institutions. The amount of sheer energy and time the authors dedicated to this collection is humbling, and it has been such an intellectually stimulating and personally gratifying experience to work together. My family, as always, was also very supportive. B.S. Chimni raised the original idea for this collection, and the continued encouragement and intellectual insights from Dan Danielsen, Jessica Fish, Richard Haskell, David Kennedy, Boris Mamlyuk, Ugo Mattei, Umut Özsü, Nikolas Rajkovic, and Akbar Rasulov made this collection actually come to life. Perhaps more than anyone else, the copy editors spent countless hours ensuring the materials were ready for publication, and I cannot sufficiently express my gratitude to the lead copy editor Jessica Fish, and assistant copy editors Shauncey Hunter, Jessica Setzer, and Justin Woolsey. The publishers at Edward Elgar, especially Ben Booth, Laura Mann, and Elizabeth Clack, were infinitely encouraging and patient throughout this process. Books often have dedications, and to the extent that such a thing matters, this collection to me would be a testament to the collective energy of the community that brought the collection together and the colleagues and students that keep making it all matter.

John D. Haskell