

Index

- Aalborg wireless communication case study 12, 91
- clusters with specific knowledge
 - competition, influence of 95–6
 - corporate spinoffs, advantages for 98, 100–103
 - employee mobility and knowledge diffusion 97–8, 101–3
 - financial crisis, role of 95–6
 - influence on other sectors 97–100, 103, 130–31
 - and regional development 92–5
- decline, reasons for 92, 94–7
- early spinoff activities 93–5
- Huge Lawn Software spinoff 98, 100–103
- Motorola closure, impact of 96–7, 103
- Motorola spinoffs 97–103
- academic spinoffs
 - background 2, 34–5
 - collaborative strategies/networks
 - cross-boundary partnerships 139–44
 - role in 9, 34–5, 39–41, 45–6
- ECG T-shirt case study 14, 135
 - company background 136–7
 - cross-boundary partnerships 139–44
 - product development 137–42
 - and intellectual property ownership 177–8, 180, 184
- Measurement, case study 41–4, 46
 - establishment phase 42–3
 - market entry phase 43–4
- RayPos case study 46
 - collaborative networks, importance of 39–41
 - corporate background 38–9
 - research relationships 34–5, 174, 177–82
 - resources, access to 9, 34–5
- advertising see digital advertising case study
- Alpha Composites case study 10
 - business development strategy 65–8
 - company background 62–6
 - corporate strategic assets 63
 - environmental sustainability 66
 - international expansion, into China
 - adaptation strategies, influence on 63, 70–71, 73
 - business environment 62, 68–71
 - challenges and tensions 69–71
 - establishing local customer base 69–70
 - initial development 68–9
 - intellectual property protection 70–71, 73
 - location choice, reasons for 68–9, 72–3
 - managerial resources, limitations 62–3
 - managing market segment differences 67–8
 - market identification and development 64–5
- Big Data case study 16–17, 202–3
 - bioinformatic sequencing
 - opportunities 16–17, 189–93, 196–7, 199–200
 - business model development 192–3, 197–202
 - challenges 197–202
 - collaborative research 199–200
 - competitors 200–201
 - corporate background 190–91, 193–4

- corporate expansion 194–6
- financing activities 196–200
- genetic testing mechanisms 198–9
- organizational forms and
 - entrepreneurial patterns 16–17, 190–91, 196–7
- bioinformatics case study see Big Data case study
- Bolliger & Mabillard 129–30
- business models
 - definition 189–90
 - unsuitability for KIEs 50–52, 59–61
- case studies, generally 1
 - see also* human health care and food; lifestyle technology; transversal technologies, engineering and software
 - analysis challenges 6
 - anonymity in 7
 - key aspects of 5
 - and KIE conceptual model 3–6
 - selection criteria 2, 6–7
- challenges and tensions, for KIEs
 - business planning models, unsuitability of 50–52, 59–61
 - between different knowledge bases 27–30, 32
 - during downswing/adaptation phase 54–9
 - during establishment phase 22–6, 32
 - exploration vs. exploitation 21, 24–6, 32–3
 - external vs. internal tensions 24–6, 184–5
 - during focus phase 50–52, 59–60
 - funding and financing 26–7, 32, 95–6, 180–81, 184–7, 197–8
 - growth and development 119–20
 - influences on 9–10, 32–3, 50–52, 59–61
 - and market uncertainty 9–10, 54–5, 60–61
 - technology development vs. market development 21, 30–32, 182–4, 199–202
- HR strategy 27–30
- international expansion 69–71, 197–202
- opportunity/idea recognition 22–4, 32
- partnerships and acquisitions, role of 55–8, 60
- during spinoff phase 24–6, 42–4
- strategic orientation 52–3
- during upswing/expansion phase 52–4, 180–84
- China
 - Big Data case study 16–17, 202–3
 - bioinformatic sequencing
 - opportunities 16–17, 189–93, 196–7, 199–200
 - business model development 192–3, 197–202
 - challenges 197–202
 - collaborative research 199–200
 - competitors 200–201
 - corporate background 190–91, 193–4
 - corporate expansion 194–6
 - financing activities 196–200
 - genetic testing mechanisms 198–9
 - organizational forms and entrepreneurial patterns 16–17, 190–91, 196–7
 - location choice, influences on 72–3
 - science and technology expenditure, proposed 190–91
- collaborative research 186–7, 199–200
- and academic spinoffs 34–5, 174, 178–9
- funding and financing 164–6
- knowledge and technology transfer 168–9
- and network developments 169–70
- and public policy interaction 160, 165–6, 171
- and technological/methodological developments 166–7
- collaborative strategies see also networks
 - in academic spinoffs 9
 - advantages of 39–41, 45–6
 - research relationships 34–5, 174, 177–82

- in corporate spinoffs 15, 146–58
 - advantages of 155–7
 - establishment phase 146–7
- competition, influence on corporate spinoffs 95–6
- composite materials manufacturers see Alpha Composites
- corporate spinoffs see also academic spinoffs
 - Aalborg wireless communication case study 12, 91
 - competition, influence of 95–6
 - corporate spinoffs, advantages for 98, 100–103
 - decline, reasons for 92, 94–7
 - early spinoff activities 93–5
 - employee mobility and knowledge diffusion 97–8, 101–3
 - financial crisis, role of 95–6
 - Huge Lawn Software spinoff 98, 100–103
 - Motorola closure, impact of 96–7, 103
 - Motorola spinoffs 97–103
 - and regional development 92–5
 - clusters with specific knowledge 98, 100–103
- collaborative networks 15, 146–58
 - advantages 155–7
 - establishment phase 146–7
 - relationship types 150–54
- generally 2
- geographical influences on 91–2
- market entry 121, 129–30
- Otocare Ltd case study 15, 146
 - academic relationships 151–2, 156–7
 - advantages 155–7
 - collaborative networking 150–55
 - corporate background 147–9
 - customer relationships 150
 - financial backing 148–9
 - license agreements 155
 - medical practitioner relationships 151–2
 - product development 147–8
 - researcher relationships 154
 - spinoff arrangements 154–5
 - supplier relationships 152–3
- regional industrial development, influences on 91–2
- success trends 91–2
- creative destruction
 - definition 106–7
 - exploitation of 12–13, 105–18
- cross-boundary innovation
 - and cross-boundary partnerships 139–44
 - knowledge cross-fertilization 135–45, 207
- CubeSat technology see NanoSpace Inc.
- Dentia 146–9
- digital advertising case study 12–13
 - ambiguity of knowledge 105–7, 116–17
- corporate development
 - background 106, 108–10
 - characterization 115–17
 - and creative destruction 110–12, 115–17
 - and dot.com bubble 112–13, 116
 - funding and financing 114–15, 117
 - Grandmother, establishment and growth of 113–17
 - influences on 112–17
 - and Internet 107–8, 110–13, 115–17
 - management and development phase 108–10
 - sector development 107–12
 - and uncertain knowledge 12–13, 105–7
- Drucker, P.F. 189–90
- ECG T-shirt case study 14, 135
 - company background 136–7
 - cross-boundary partnerships 139–44
 - product development 137–42
- educational background, of
 - entrepreneurs, relevance 27–9, 84–6
- electromagnetic radiation measurement
 - equipment companies see Measurement

- engineering centers case studies
 - background 38
 - collaborative networks, role of 39–41, 45–6
 - employment structures 38
 - funding arrangements 36
 - KIE interaction with 36–41, 44–6
 - Measurement case study 41–4, 46
 - RayPos case study 38–41, 46
- entrepreneurs
 - definition 1–2
 - educational background, relevance 27–9, 84–6
- financial crisis, influence of 95–6
- financing see funding and financing
- food innovation collaborative research
 - case study 15–16
 - advantages of 160–62, 165–6
 - funding relationships 164–6
 - KIE ventures resulting from 165–6
 - knowledge and technology transfer 168–9
 - network developments 169–70
 - product development 162–4
 - public policy interaction 160, 165–6, 171
 - research projects 160–61
 - technological/methodological developments from 166–7
- founders
 - definition 1–2
 - educational background, relevance 27–9, 84–6
- funding and financing
 - challenges and tensions 26–7, 32, 95–6
 - and collaborative research 164–6
 - corporate development, influences on 114–15, 117
 - engineering center arrangements 36
 - financial crisis, influence on 95–6
 - independence from parent,
 - advantages and disadvantages 26–7
 - public/private, links between 174–80, 182, 184–6
 - pure investment money vs. knowledge money 26–7
 - strategies for 49–50, 53–4, 58–60, 148–9, 196–200
- GE Healthcare 200
- Giovanola 130
- Grandmother see under digital advertising case study
- health care see human health care and food case studies
- hearing aid case study see Otocare Ltd
- Huge Lawn Software spinoff 98, 100–103
- human health care and food case studies
 - Big Data 16–17, 202–3
 - bioinformatic sequencing opportunities 16–17, 189–93, 196–7, 199–200
 - business model development 192–3, 197–202
 - challenges 197–202
 - collaborative research 199–200
 - competitors 200–201
 - corporate background 190–91, 193–4
 - corporate expansion 194–6
 - financing activities 196–200
 - genetic testing mechanisms 198–9
 - organizational forms and entrepreneurial patterns 16–17, 190–91, 196–7
 - characteristics 13–14
 - corporate spinoffs 15, 146
 - academic relationships 151–2, 156–7
 - advantages 155–7
 - collaborative networking 150–55
 - customer relationships 150
 - financial backing 148–9
 - license agreements 155
 - medical practitioner relationships 151–2
 - product development 147–8
 - researcher relationships 154
 - spinoff arrangements 154–5
 - supplier relationships 152–3

- ECG T-shirt 14, 135
 - company background 136–7
 - cross-boundary partnerships 139–44
 - product development 137–42
- food innovation collaborative
 - research 15–16
 - advantages of 160–62, 165–6
 - funding relationships 164–6
 - KIE ventures resulting from 165–6
 - knowledge and technology transfer 168–9
 - network developments 169–70
 - product development 162–4
 - public policy interaction 160, 165–6, 171
 - research projects 160–61
 - technological/methodological developments from 166–7
- generally 13–17
- Otocare Ltd 15, 146–58
 - academic relationships 151–2, 156–7
 - collaborative networking 150–55
 - corporate background 147–9
 - corporate spinoff advantages 155–7
 - corporate spinoff arrangements 154–5
 - customer relationships 150
 - financial backing 148–9
 - license agreements 155
 - medical practitioner relationships 151–2
 - product development 147–8
 - researcher relationships 154
 - supplier relationships 152–3
- ProSci proteonomics 16, 173, 188
 - academic spinoff relationships 174, 177–8, 180–82, 185–7
 - challenges 180–84, 186–7
 - commercial collaborative research 178–9, 186–7
- Cooperative Research Centres (CRC) programme 177
 - corporate background 174, 176–8
 - corporate vision 173–4, 184, 186
 - intellectual property ownership 177–8, 180, 184
 - product and operations development phase 177–80, 187
 - public/private financing, links between 174–80, 182, 184–7
 - trends 13
- IJK case study 9–10, 48–61
 - challenges and tensions
 - business planning models, unsuitability of 50–52, 59–61
 - during downswing/adaptation phase 54–9
 - during focus phase 50–52, 59–60
 - growth processes, influences on 9–10, 50–52, 59–61
 - managing growth and balancing marketing uncertainties 9–10, 54–5, 60–61
 - partnerships and acquisitions, role of 55–8, 60
 - strategic orientation 52–3
 - during upswing/expansion phase 52–4
 - company background 48–50
 - financing strategies 49–50, 53–4, 58–60
 - ownership structure 49–51, 59–60
 - intellectual property ownership and academic spinoffs 177–8, 180, 184
 - and international expansion 70–71, 73
- international expansion
 - adaptation strategies, influence on 63, 70–71, 73
 - business environment 62, 68–9, 70–71
 - challenges and tensions 69–71
 - establishing local customer base 69–70
 - intellectual property protection 70–71, 73
 - location choice, reasons for 68–9, 72–3

- managerial resources, limitations 62–3
- Internet
 - development, influences on 107–8, 110–13
 - entrepreneurial opportunities from 115–17
- KIE (knowledge intensive entrepreneurship), generally
 - challenges of 119–20
 - characteristics of 75, 119
 - and firm-specific knowledge 73
 - independence from parent, advantages and disadvantages 26–7
 - influences on 1
 - long term effects of, analysis 207
 - research opportunities 207–8
- KIE conceptual model 2
 - and case study design 3–6, 205–6
 - phases 3–5
- KIE ventures, generally see also
 - academic spinoffs; corporate spinoffs
 - definition 1–2
 - management differences, size-related 206
 - networks, advantages of 2, 7, 38–41, 45–6
 - resources, limitations on 37
 - skills and human resources, relevance of 27–9, 84–6, 206–7
- knowledge
 - clusters
 - competition, influence of 95–6
 - corporate spinoffs, advantages for 98, 100–103
 - employee mobility and knowledge diffusion, relevance to 97–8, 101–3
 - financial crisis, role of 95–6
 - influence on other sectors 97–100, 103, 130–31
 - and regional development 92–5
 - diffusion
 - and employee mobility 97–8, 101–3
 - generally
 - ambiguity of 105–7, 116–17
 - cross-fertilization 139–44, 207
 - separation from other aspects of expertise 105
 - and technology transfer 168–9
 - knowledge money vs. pure investment money 26–7
 - pre-entry knowledge
 - research into 119–20
 - role of 13, 128–31
 - uncertain, influences of 12–13, 105–7
 - knowledge intensive entrepreneurship see KIE
- lifestyle technology case studies
 - Aalborg wireless communication 12, 91
 - clusters with specific knowledge 91–8, 100–103, 130–31
 - competition, influence of 95–6
 - corporate spinoffs, advantages for 98, 100–103
 - decline, reasons for 92, 94–7
 - early spinoff activities 93–5
 - employee mobility and knowledge diffusion 97–8, 101–3
 - financial crisis, role of 95–6
 - Huge Lawn Software spinoff 98, 100–103
 - influence on other sectors 97–100, 103, 130–31
 - Motorola closure, impact of 96–7, 103
 - Motorola spinoffs 97–103
 - and regional development 92–5
 - digital advertising case study 12–13
 - ambiguity of knowledge 105–7, 116–17
 - corporate background 106, 108–10
 - corporate characterization 115–17
 - and creative destruction 110–12, 115–17
 - and dot.com bubble 112–13, 116
 - funding and financing 114–15, 117
 - Grandmother, establishment and growth of 113–17
 - influences on 112–17

- and Internet 107–8, 110–13, 115–17
- management and development phase 108–10
- sector development 107–12
- and uncertain knowledge 12–13, 105–7
- generally 11–13
- pre-entry knowledge, role of 13, 119–20, 128–31
- roller coaster industry 121–32
 - industry history and background 121–3
 - manufacturing firms 123–6
 - technology, influence of 121–2
- market entry
 - diversified entry with market experience 126–7
 - diversified entry with technological experience 128–31
 - entrepreneurial spinoffs 121, 129–30
 - forms of 119–21, 125–6
 - pre-entry knowledge, role of 13, 119–20, 128–31
- managing and developing KIE ventures (phase 2)
 - generally 3–5
 - international expansion
 - adaptation strategies, influence on 63, 70–71, 73
 - business environment 62, 68–9, 70–71
 - challenges and tensions 69–71
 - establishing local customer base 69–70
 - influences on 72, 208
 - intellectual property protection 70–71, 73
 - location choice, reasons for 68–9, 72–3
 - managerial resources, limitations 62–3
- market entry
 - corporate spinoffs 121, 129–30
 - advantages 98, 100–103
 - influence on other sectors 97–100, 103, 130–31
 - diversified entry 120
 - with market experience 126–7
 - with technological experience 128–31
 - forms of 119–21
 - pre-entry knowledge 13, 128–31
 - research into 119–20
- markets
 - analysis, importance of 8
 - identification and development 64–5
 - market segment differences, managing 67–8
 - market stability, influences on 80–81
- Measurement, academic spinoff case study 46
 - advantages of university relationship 42–4
 - background 41
 - market entry phase 43–4
 - pre-founding phase 42
 - venture founding phase 42–3
- medical clinical equipment companies
 - see* RayPos
- Motorola see Aalborg wireless communication case study
- NanoSpace Inc. 10–11, 75–87
 - company background 76–8
 - competitors, comparison with 78–80
 - corporate strategy 77–8
 - founder characteristics 84–6
 - growth trends 81
 - markets 78–9
 - stability, influences on 80–81
 - networks
 - interrelationships and influences 82–7
 - market entry, role in 78–9
 - network value chains 79–81
 - technology developments 76–7
- networks, collaborative
 - advantages 155–7, 207
 - corporate spinoffs, role in 15, 146–58
 - advantages 155–7
 - and corporate strategy 77–8

- in engineering/university-industry research centers 39–41, 45–6, 146–7
- establishment phase, role during 146–7
- interrelationships and influences of 82–7
- market entry, role in 78–9
- market stability, influences on 80–81
- network value chains 79–81
- research role in developing 169–70
- opportunity recognition, challenges and tensions 22–4, 32
- Otocare Ltd case study 15, 146–58
 - academic relationships 151–2, 156–7
 - collaborative networking 150–55
 - corporate background 147–9
 - corporate spinoff
 - advantages 155–7
 - arrangements 154–5
 - customer relationships 150
 - financial backing 148–9
 - license agreements 155
 - medical practitioner relationships 151–2
 - product development 147–8
 - researcher relationships 154, 156–7
 - supplier relationships 152–3
- Pinfari 126–7
- ProSci proteonomics case study 16, 173, 188
 - academic spinoff relationships 174, 177–8, 180–82, 185–7
 - challenges 180–84, 186–7
 - commercial collaborative research 178–9, 186–7
- Cooperative Research Centres (CRC) programme 177
 - corporate background 174, 176–8
 - corporate vision 173–4, 184, 186
 - intellectual property ownership 177–8, 180, 184
 - product and operations development phase 177–80, 187
 - public/private financing, links between 174–80, 182, 184–7
- public policy interaction and collaborative research 160, 165–6, 171
- RayPos case study 46
 - collaborative networks, importance of 39–41
 - corporate background 38–9
- R&D
 - balancing transition to market-oriented business 21–33
- roller coaster industry case study 121–32
 - industry history and background 121–3
 - manufacturing firms 123–6
 - technology, influence of 121–2
- market entry
 - diversified entry with market experience 126–7
 - diversified entry with technological experience 128–31
 - entrepreneurial spinoffs 121, 129–30
 - forms of 119–21, 125–6
 - pre-entry knowledge, role of 13, 119–20, 128–31
- satellite development companies see NanoSpace Inc.
- Schwarzkopf, A. 126–7
- Sensor Inc case study 8–9
 - challenges and tensions between different knowledge bases 27–30, 32
 - during establishment phase 22–6, 32
 - exploration vs. exploitation 21, 24–6, 32–3
 - external vs. internal tensions 24–6
 - funding 26–7, 32
 - HR strategy 27–30
 - influences on KIE development 32–3
 - opportunity/idea recognition 22–4, 32
 - during spinoff phase 24–6

- technology development vs.
 - market development 21, 30–32
- transition to market-oriented
 - business 21, 30–32
- company background 22, 24–5
- focus, developmental changes in 29–30
- founders' educational background, relevance 27–9
- independence from parent,
 - advantages and disadvantages 25–6
- key business areas 24–5
- management structure changes 29–30
- smart T-shirt see ECG T-shirt case study
- software consultancy companies see IJK
- spinoffs see academic spinoffs; corporate spinoffs; market entry
- transversal technologies, engineering and software case studies
 - Alpha Composites 10
 - business development strategy 65–8
 - company background 62–6
 - corporate strategic assets 63
 - environmental sustainability 66
 - international expansion, into China
 - business environment 62, 68–71
 - challenges and tensions 69–71
 - establishing local customer base 69–70
 - initial development 68–9
 - managing market segment differences 67–8
 - market identification and development 64–5
 - engineering/university-industry research centers 9, 34–46
 - generally 7–11
 - classification of technology 7–8
 - decision-making interrelationships 8
 - focus 7–8
 - users and markets, importance of analysis of 8
 - IJK 9–10
 - business planning models, unsuitability of 50–52, 59–61
 - company background 48–50
 - downswing/adaptation phase 54–9
 - expansion phase 52–4
 - financing strategies 49–50, 53–4, 58–60
 - focus phase 50–52, 59–60
 - growth processes, influences on 9–10, 50–52, 59–61
 - ownership structure 49–51, 59–60
 - partnerships and acquisitions, role of 55–8, 60
 - strategic orientation 52–3
 - Measurement, academic spinoff 41
 - advantages of university relationship 42–4
 - background 41
 - market entry phase 43–4
 - pre-founding phase 42
 - venture founding phase 42–3
 - NanoSpace Inc. 10–11, 75
 - company background 76–8
 - competitors, comparison with 78–80
 - corporate strategy 77–8
 - CubeSat
 - market 78–9
 - technology 76–7
 - founder characteristics 84–6
 - growth trends 81
 - market stability, influences on 80–81
 - networks
 - interrelationships and influences 82–7
 - market entry, role in 78–9
 - network value chains 79–81
 - RayPos 46
 - collaborative networks, importance of 39–41
 - corporate background 38–9
 - Sensor Inc 8–9
 - company background 22, 24–5
 - different knowledge bases, tensions between 27–30, 32
 - establishment phase 22–6, 32

- exploration vs. exploitation
 - challenges 21, 24–6, 32–3
- external vs. internal tensions 24–6
- focus, developmental changes in 29–30
- founders' educational background, relevance 27–9
- funding 26–7, 32
- HR strategy 27–30
- independence from parent, advantages and disadvantages 25–6
- influences on KIE development 32–3
- key business areas 24–5
- management structure changes 29–30
- opportunity/idea recognition 22–4, 32
- spinoff phase 24–6
- technology development vs. market development 21, 30–32
- transition to market-oriented business 21, 30–32
- university-industry research centers
 - case studies 36–46
 - background 38
 - collaborative networks, role of 39–41, 45–6
 - establishment phase 146–7
 - employment structures 38
 - funding arrangements 36
 - KIE interaction with 36–41, 44–6
 - Measurement case study 41–4, 46
 - RayPos case study 38–41, 46
- Vekoma 128–30
- Wellcome Trust 200
- wireless communications see Aalborg wireless communication