
Contributors

John Mill Ackerman is a Professor at the Institute for Legal Research of the National Autonomous University of Mexico (IIJ-UNAM), Editor-in-Chief of the Mexican Law Review and Vice President of the International Association of Administrative Law. He received his M.A. and Ph.D. in Political Sociology from the University of California, Santa Cruz and is an expert on Latin American politics, U.S.-Mexico relations, constitutional law, democratic transitions, public accountability and citizen participation. In 2012, he was the recipient of the UNAM's award for the leading young scholar in the social sciences. Professor Ackerman coordinates the research program on "Democracy and Institutional Effectiveness of the Mexican State" at the IIJ-UNAM and is a member of the National System of Researchers of Mexico's National Science and Technology Council, Level II. Some of his most important scholarly publications include: Autenticidad y nulidad: por un derecho electoral al servicio de la democracia (IIJ-UNAM, 2012), Organismos Autónomos y Democracia: El Caso de México (IIJ-UNAM/Siglo XXI Editores, 2007), "The Global Explosion of Freedom of Information Laws", Administrative Law Review (58:1, 2006), and "Co-Governance for Accountability: Beyond "Exit" and "Voice", World Development (32:3, 2004). Contact: johnackblog@gmail.com

Padideh Ala'i is a Professor of Law and the Director of the Humphrey Fellowship Program at American University, Washington College of Law (WCL) in Washington DC where she specializes in international economic law and comparative legal traditions. She teaches the law of the World Trade Organization (WTO), and writes in the areas of trade history and free trade, international efforts to combat corruption, transparency and good governance, and comparative law. Professor Ala'i received her J.D. from Harvard Law School in 1988 and was in private legal practice primarily representing developing country governments from 1991–1997. Her other publications include: Civil Consequences of Corruption in International Commercial Transactions (US Country Report) (American Journal of Comparative Law (2014)); Trade as Guarantor of Peace, Liberty and Security? Critical, Historical and Empirical Perspectives, 37 Studies in Transnational Legal Policy (ASIL-2006) (Co-Edited with Colin Picker and Tomer Broude); "Leopold & Morel: A Story of "Free Trade" and "Native Rights" in the Congo Free State" in Trade as Guarantor of Peace, Liberty and Security (see above); "Transparency and the Multilateral Trading System”, in Trends in World Trade: Essays in Honor of Sylvia Ostry, edited by Alan Alexandroff (Carolina Academic Press 2007); “The WTO and the Anti-Corruption Movement”, 6 Loyola University of Chicago Law Review (259–278) (2008); “From the Periphery to the Center? The Evolving WTO Jurisprudence on Transparency and Good Governance”, Journal of International Economic Law Vol. II, No. 4 (2008); “The Legacy of Geographical Morality and Colonialism: A Historical Assessment of the Current Crusade Against Corruption”, 33 Vanderbilt Journal of Transnational Law 4 (October 2000).

A. J. Brown is professor of public policy and law, and program leader, Public Integrity and Anti-Corruption in the Centre for Governance and Public Policy, Griffith University, Australia. He is a former senior investigator for Australia’s Commonwealth Ombudsman, and has worked in all branches and at all levels of government in Australia. He is a member of the board of directors of Transparency International Australia. He has been project leader on two major national and international studies into whistleblowing, and was editor and co-author of Whistleblowing in the Australian Public Sector (2008) and Whistling While They Work (2011), each published by the Australia & New Zealand School of Government and ANU E-Press. He is also lead editor of the International Whistleblowing Research Handbook (Edward Elgar, forthcoming).

Kathleen Clark practices law in Washington, DC and is a Professor of Law at Washington University in St. Louis. Her articles on whistleblowing and ethics have been cited in hundreds of books and articles, and she is the Associate Reporter for the American Law Institute’s Principles of Government Ethics. Her research formed the basis for the Administrative Conference of the United States and ABA House of Delegates recommendations to regulate contractor ethics, and in 2011 the federal government imposed ethics restrictions on some contractor personnel. Professor Clark has worked on anti-corruption issues in Bosnia, Canada, the Netherlands, Nigeria, Poland, Russia and the United States. She served as Special Counsel to the Attorney General of the District of Columbia, writing an Ethics Manual for 32,000 employees.

Matthew D’Orsi graduated in 2014 from American University Washington College of Law (WCL). He served as a law clerk with the Department of Commerce’s Office of the Chief Counsel for Trade Enforcement and Compliance, a recent member of American University’s ELSA WTO Moot Court Team, a policy intern with the Office of the Western Hemisphere at the Office of the U.S. Trade Representative (USTR). During law school, his article entitled “Heated Skirmishes in the Solar Sector: Do Solar-PV Feed-in Tariffs Constitute Trade-Related Investment Measures and Subsidies Prohibited under the WTO Regime?” was published by the American University International Law Review.

Suelette Dreyfus is a Research Fellow at the Department of Computing and Information Systems at the University of Melbourne. Her research interests include the impact of digital technologies on whistleblowing, institutional accountability, and the role of the media. She also works in the e-health and e-education areas, where her work has appeared in academic journals such as Nursing Outlook and Emergency Medicine Australasia. Prior to working as an academic researcher, she worked as a professional journalist for Australia’s largest-selling daily newspaper, where she trained and worked as a staff reporter. She is the author of a well known book about computer hacking, Underground, which has been translated into seven other languages and made into two films.

Cheryl Embree specializes in government ethics and FOIA appeals as an attorney for the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. In June 2013, she served as an expert panelist at a White House Best Practices Seminar on Public Private Partnerships. She started her career as part of HUD’s Legal Honors class of 2008 after earning a J.D. from the Ohio State University with the help of a Moritz Merit Scholarship. She is afraid to admit that she can cite from memory the Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch and she knows that 5 CFR 2635.807(b)(2) requires her to disclaim: The views expressed in this chapter do not necessarily represent the views of the agency or the United States.

Elizabeth Fisher is Reader in Environmental Law, Faculty of Law and Corpus Christi College, University of Oxford. Her research is primarily in the area of comparative environmental and administrative law, with a particular focus on the role of science and information. She is General Editor of the Journal of Environmental Law, and her book Risk Regulation and Administrative Constitutionalism won the Society of Legal Scholars Peter Birks Prize for Outstanding Legal Scholarship in 2008.

H. Patrick Glenn is the Peter M. Laing Professor of Law at McGill University and a former Director of the McGill Institute of Comparative Law. He received his legal education at the Universities of Queen’s (Ontario), Harvard and Strasbourg. A Member of the International Academy of Comparative Law and Fellow of the Royal Society of Canada, he has also been a Bora Laskin National Fellow in Human Rights Research and a Killam Research Fellow. In 2006, he received the Prix Leon-Gérin from the Government of Quebec for his contribution to the social sciences. His book Legal Traditions of the World (5th ed., OUP, 2014) received the Grand Prize of the International Academy of Comparative Law. He has also recently published On Common Laws (OUP, 2005) and The Cosmopolitan State (OUP, 2013).

Haider Ala Hamoudi is an Associate Professor of Law at the University of Pittsburgh School of Law. He holds a JD and a JSD from Columbia Law School, and a B.Sc. from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. His research focuses primarily on Islamic law and Middle Eastern law, and on the relationship of the shari'a to the legal orders of the various nation states of the Middle East. He has just finished a book on Iraq entitled Negotiating in Civil Conflict: Constitutional Construction and Imperfect Bargaining in Iraq, published by the University of Chicago Press (2013).

John W. Head is the Robert W. Wagstaff Distinguished Professor of Law at the University of Kansas, where he has been a faculty member since 1990. Before beginning an academic career, Professor Head practiced law in the Washington, DC office of Cleary, Gottlieb, Steen and Hamilton, and served as legal counsel for both the Asian Development Bank and the International Monetary Fund. Both his teaching and his published works concentrate in the areas of international law, international business, and comparative law, with a special focus on Chinese law. His most recent books in the area of international law are Global Legal Regimes to Protect the World's Grasslands (2012), Global Business Law (3rd ed. 2012), and Losing the Global Development War: A Contemporary Critique of the IMF, The World Bank, and the WTO (2008). In comparative law, his most recent publications include Great Legal Traditions: Civil Law, Common Law, and Chinese Law in Historical and Operational Perspective (2011). Professor Head has been awarded Fulbright teaching fellowships to China and Italy, has taught in Austria, Hong Kong, Jordan, Mexico, Mongolia, Turkey, and the United Kingdom, and has undertaken special assignments in numerous locations for international financial institutions and development agencies.

David B. Hunter is Professor of Law, Director of the International Legal Studies Program and Director of the Program on International and Comparative Environmental Law at American University's Washington College of Law. Professor Hunter was the former Executive Director of the Center for International Environmental Law, a non-governmental organization dedicated to protecting the global environment through the use of international law.

He currently serves on the Boards of Directors of the Bank Information Center, Environmental Law Alliance Worldwide-US, EarthRights International, and the Project on Government Oversight (chair), and is a Board Member and Member Scholar of the Center for Progressive Reform. He is also a member of the Organization of American States' Expert Group on Environmental Law, the Steering Committee of the IUCN World Commission on Environmental Law, and the Strategic Advisors Group for the International Finance Corporation's Compliance Advisor/Ombudsman's Office.

Professor Hunter has nearly twenty years' experience in researching and developing transparency and accountability in international law. He has been a consultant to the Asian Development Bank, the United Nations Development Programme, the Adaptation Fund and the Overseas Private Investment Corporation, among others on issues relating to transparency and accountability.

He is a 1983 graduate of the University of Michigan and a 1986 graduate of the Harvard Law School. Professor Hunter is author of many articles on international environmental law, and is co-author of a leading textbook in the field: International Environmental Law and Policy (Foundation Press, 2006).

Wenjing Liu is Professor of Law at the Law School of Jinan University, Guangzhou, China, and was a Fulbright Visiting Scholar at American University Washington College of Law (2008–2009). Professor Liu received all her degrees from Beijing University (B. Phil, 1987; M. Phil, 1990, and S.J.D, 2003). Her current research focuses on government transparency, local legislation, and comparative administrative law. Her recent publications in English include “Government Information Sharing: Principles, Practice, and Problems — An International Perspective”, Government Information Quarterly, Volume 28(3), 2011; and “Approaching Democracy through Transparency: A Comparative Law Study on Chinese Open Government Information”, American University International Professor Law Review, Volume 26(4), 2011. Besides her teaching and research work, Professor Liu has also participated in local legislation and as counsel to several local agencies since 2003. She is also a member of the Legal Council of the City Government of Guangzhou Municipality (since May 2013).

Jeffrey S. Lubbers was appointed Professor of Practice of Administrative Law at American University Washington College of Law in 2009, after being a Fellow in Law and Government since 1996. He specializes in Administrative Law and related courses. He has also taught at the University of Miami School of Law, and has been a Visiting Professor at Washington and Lee University School of Law, the Georgetown University Law Center, Melbourne University, Ritsumeikan University Law School in Japan, the University of Ottawa, and the Australian National University. He has an A.B. degree from Cornell University and a

J.D. from the University of Chicago Law School, and is a member of the bars of the State of Maryland and the District of Columbia.

Prior to joining American University, he served in various positions with the Administrative Conference of the United States (ACUS), the U.S. Government's advisory agency on procedural improvements in federal programs until its closure by the 104th Congress in 1995. From 1982–1995 he was ACUS' Research Director — a position in the Senior Executive Service. Upon its reopening in 2010, he was appointed as a Special Counsel. He served as Team Leader for Vice President Gore's National Performance Review team on Improving Regulatory Systems in 1993. He is the author of the ABA's Guide to Federal Agency Rulemaking (5th ed. 2012), has co-authored the Administrative Procedure Sourcebook (4th ed. 2008), and serves as the editor of the ABA's annual Developments in Administrative Law and Regulatory Practice (14 volumes from 1998–2012).

Daniel J. Metcalfe joined the faculty of American University Washington College of Law (WCL) in 2007 as a Faculty Fellow in Law and Government upon retiring from a career in government service that began at the United States Department of Justice more than forty-three years ago. He now is both an adjunct professor at WCL and Executive Director of the school's Collaboration on Government Secrecy (<http://www.wcl.american.edu/lawandgov/cgs/>), the first such academic center established at any law school worldwide. He is a 1976 honors graduate of the National Law Center at George Washington University, where he was a law review editor and attended on a full academic scholarship. In 1981, after a federal judicial clerkship and serving for four years as a Justice Department trial attorney, he was appointed to the position of founding director of the Justice Department's Office of Information and Privacy (OIP), where he served as the U.S. Government's principal expert on transparency matters and related litigation for more than a quarter century. From 2010–2012, he was a member of the World Bank's Access to Information Appeals Board, an independent tribunal empowered to make final decisions on appeals taken under the World Bank's newly established information disclosure policy.

Shonali Routray is the Legal Director of Public Concern at Work, an NGO and legal advice centre in the UK which campaigns and advises on whistleblowing issues. After completing her undergraduate degree in Philosophy, Politics and Economics at St Hilda's College, University of Oxford, Shonali qualified as a barrister called to the Bar in 2005 and is a member of the Honorable Society of the Middle Temple. She has worked in family and civil law. As Legal Director of Public Concern at Work, she oversees the legal advice line, which provides support and advice to workers in the UK who witness wrongdoing in the workplace. She works on policy and parliamentary advocacy and is leading the work on the Whistleblowing Commission: www.pcaw.org.uk/whistleblowing-commission. In her spare time she works with two not-for-profit organisations, Witness Confident and the Peel Institute.

Irma Eréndira Sandoval is a Professor at the Institute for Social Research of the National Autonomous University of Mexico (UNAM) and an award-winning international expert on public administration, political economy, transparency and corruption control. She is Director of the Laboratory for the Documentation and Analysis of Corruption and Transparency of the UNAM (www.corrupcion.unam.mx). She has served as a Fellow at the Edmund J. Safra Center for Ethics at Harvard University and as a Reagan-Fascell Democracy Fellow at the NED's International Forum for Democratic Studies in Washington, DC. She has also been a Visiting Professor at American University and at the University of California, Santa Cruz. Professor Sandoval is a member of Mexico's National System of Researchers and was the recipient of the prestigious 2009 Manuel Espinosa Yglesias award for her academic work in political economy.

She holds an MA and PhD in Political Science from the University of California, Santa Cruz as well as an MA in Latin American Studies from the UNAM. She has two BAs, one in Economics from the UNAM and the other in Sociology from the Autonomous Metropolitan University in Mexico City (UAM). She teaches advanced graduate and undergraduate seminars on accountability, institutional reform and social theory and has directed over a dozen student theses. She has also worked as a senior consultant to the World Bank, UNDP, Global Integrity, the Open Society Institute and the Budget Accountability Project.

A prolific writer, her most recent books are: Contemporary Debates on Corruption & Transparency: Rethinking State, Market & Society, IIS-UNAM/World Bank, Mexico City/Washington, DC 2011 and Crisis, Rentismo e Intervencionismo Neoliberal en la Banca: México (1982–1999), Centro de Estudios Espinosa Yglesias, Mexico City, 2011. She has published over two dozen book chapters and journal articles in peer-reviewed journals, including the Administrative Law Review, Revista Mexicana de Sociología, Revista Argumentos, Perfiles Latinoamericanos and Fondo de Cultura Económica. She also frequently publishes opinion pieces in leading newspapers both in Mexico and the United States, including the Los Angeles Times, Chicago Times, La Jornada, Proceso, and Reforma.

Wim Vandekerckhove is Senior Lecturer in Organizational Behavior at the University of Greenwich Business School. He is the coordinator of the special interest group on Teaching Business Ethics within the European Business Ethics Network. He has published widely on whistleblowing, business ethics, and global ethics.

Robert G. Vaughn is A. Allen King Scholar and Professor of Law at American University Washington College of Law. He has written extensively on whistleblower protection, freedom of information laws, public employment law, including conflicts of interest, the right to disobey illegal orders, ethics in government, and the role of public employment law in the transition to democracy. His most recent book is The Successes and Failures of Whistleblower Laws. He teaches courses on torts, judicial procedure, whistleblowing, freedom of information, and the jury in civil litigation.