Contributors

Jean-Claude Barbier is sociologist (Centre national de la recherche scientifique) researcher at the Centre d’économie de la Sorbonne. He conducts extensive comparative research on systems of social protection, especially in Europe, and studies European integration in the domain of social policies, culture and language. His research interests also include epistemological and methodological issues of the very practice of comparison. His recent publications include: La flessibilità del lavoro e dell’occupazione, Donzelli, Roma (2003) (with Henri Nadel); Le nouveau système français de protection sociale, La Découverte, Repères, Paris (2010) (with Bruno Théret); and Politiques sociales/Social Policies: Enjeux méthodologiques et épistémologiques des comparaisons internationales/Epistemological and Methodological Issues in Cross National Comparison, Brussels, PIE Pieter Lang (2005) (ed. with Marie Thérèse Letablier). La longue marche vers l’Europe sociale, Paris, PUF (2008) was translated and adapted for Routledge, as The Road to Social Europe, a Contemporary Approach to Diversity and Political Cultures in Europe, 2013.

Iain Begg is a Professorial Research Fellow at the European Institute, London School of Economics and Political Science. His main research work is on the political economy of European integration and EU economic governance. Recent research and publications have included work on EU cohesion policy, the governance reforms associated with the euro crisis and labour market developments in the EU.

Fabrice Colomb is sociologist, Associate Professor at Centre Pierre Naville, Evry-Val-d’Essonne University. He conducts research on employment policies, systems of social protection and European integration. He is currently working on the interaction between social policies and state development. His recent publications include: Les politiques de l’emploi (1960–2000). Sociologie d’une catégorie de politique publique, Presses universitaires de Rennes, 2012; ‘EU Law as Janus bifrons, a sociological approach to “Social Europe”, European Integration Online Papers, Vol. 16 (2012) (with Jean-Claude Barbier); ‘Le succès des incitations. La construction d’une nouvelle orientation des politiques de
The sustainability of the European Social Model

Christine Erhel is Associate Professor in Economics at University Paris 1 Panthéon-Sorbonne and a member of the Centre d’Economie de la Sorbonne. She is currently the Director of a research unit on public policies and employment (including European policies) at the Centre d’Etudes de l’Emploi (French Employment Research Centre). She is doing research in labour economics, especially on European labour markets comparison, labour market policy reforms and adjustments to the financial crisis. Over the last eight years, she has been leading several projects on job quality indicators and trends in Europe.

Jérôme Gautié is Professor of Economics at the University of Paris 1 Panthéon-Sorbonne. He has worked extensively on labour market policies, low wage work and job quality. His publications on these topics include Low Wage Work in the Wealthy Countries (Russell Sage Foundation, NY, 2010), edited with John Schmitt.

Miriam Hartlapp is Professor for Multilevel Governance at Leipzig University. Before joining the University in 2014 she was doctoral and postdoctoral researcher at the Max Planck Institute for the Study of Societies in Cologne, worked at the ILO and the WZB Berlin Social Science Center, and was Professor for Governance and Organizational Studies at the University of Bremen. She is co-author of Complying with Europe: The Impact of EU Minimum Harmonisation and Soft Law in the Member States (CUP, 2005, winner of the EUSA Best Book in EU Studies Prize 2007) and Which Policy for Europe? Power and Conflict inside the European Commission (OUP, 2014). Her research focuses on the EU political system, particularly the European Commission, questions of implementation, (non-)compliance and enforcement, and regulation and governance in multilevel systems, as well as on international, European and comparative economic, employment and social policies.

Maarten Keune is Professor in Social Security and Labour Relations in the Law Department, University of Amsterdam and Co-Director of the Amsterdam Institute for Advanced Labour Studies. His research deals mostly with the interface between the labour market, the welfare state and industrial relations. His most recent books are Deconstructing Flexicurity and Constructing Alternative Approaches: Towards New Concepts and Approaches for Employment and Social Policy (ed. with Amparo Serrano, 2014, Routledge) and Economy and Society in Europe: A Relationship in Crisis (ed. with Luigi Burrone and Guglielmo Meardi, 2012, Edward Elgar Publishing).

Aristea Koukiadaki is Lecturer in Law in the School of Law at the University of Manchester. Her research focuses on the empirical study of law and on applied legal and policy analysis, with particular emphasis on labour market regulation, EU social policy and corporate governance. She has published in a number of law (e.g. Industrial Law Journal) and social science (e.g. Economic and Industrial Democracy) journals as well as in edited book collections.

Paul Marginson is Emeritus Professor of Industrial Relations, University of Warwick, United Kingdom. His research interests are comparative and European industrial relations, including collective bargaining and social dialogue; and employment relations in multinational companies. He has published extensively on these topics, including (with K. Sisson) European Integration and Industrial Relations, Palgrave Macmillan, 2006.

Nuria Ramos Martin took her Degree of Law at the University of Salamanca (1992–1997). Afterwards she followed postgraduate legal studies at the Universities of Bristol and Salamanca. From 1999 to 2003, she worked as a researcher and lecturer at the Labour Law Department, University of Salamanca. In 2004, she visited the University of Amsterdam as a Marie Curie Fellow Researcher. In 2005, she successfully defended her PhD thesis (Cum Laude, European Doctorate Label and Extraordinary Doctorate Prize) on ‘Equal Treatment in EU Social Law’ at the University of Salamanca. Since 2005, she has been affiliated as Assistant Professor to the AIAS/HSI, Law Faculty, University of Amsterdam.

Tomáš Sirovátka is Professor of Social Policy at the Faculty of Social Studies, Masaryk University, closely cooperating with the Research Institute of Labour and Social Affairs. He has carried out a number of national as well as international research projects on social policy and employment policy. He publishes regularly in international journals (including special issues).

Els Sol is sociologist and associate professor at the Faculty of Law, University of Amsterdam. Her main research work is on the evaluation of social policy and governance. Recent research and publications include theory and praxis of re-employment policies, governance reforms and the use of private instruments such as contracts and bonds in the context of public policies.

Mara van der Vos was a student-assistant at the University of Amsterdam, where she completed her Master’s degrees in private law and employment law. Currently she is a lawyer in Amsterdam.