Contributors

Meera Alagaraja is Associate Professor of Human Resource Development (HRD) at the University of Louisville. Her areas of scholarship revolve around foundations of HRD with a specific focus on strategic HRD, performance improvement through lean and employee wellbeing. Relying primarily on qualitative methods, her empirical work is focused on bridging scholar and practitioner interests. She has published in Human Resource Development Review, Human Resource Development International, and Human Resource Development Quarterly as well as the European Journal of Training and Development. She has presented to academic and practitioner audiences on a wide range of topics such as leadership development, strategic HRD and employee well-being in several countries.

Hussain Alhejji, PhD, is Assistant Professor at the Department of Business and Accounting in Muscat College, Oman and a visiting lecturer at the University of Stirling, UK. He completed his PhD in HRD from the University of Limerick, Ireland. His research focuses on cross-cultural dimensions of diversity training, diversity at work from an institutional perspective, and international HRD. He has authored a number of publications on diversity management and international HRD, and lectures on international HRM, HRD, diversity management, cross-cultural management and research methods. He is a member of the editorial board for The European Journal of Training and Development, and a reviewer for a number of international journals and conferences.

Valerie Anderson is Reader in Human Resource Development at Portsmouth Business School, UK. She has extensive HRM and HRD management and consultancy experience in a range of different public and private sector organizations and specializes in research into Business Education as well as HRD; managerial coaching; how professionals (including academic professionals) learn; and organizational issues associated with international and strategic human resource development. Valerie is a committed researcher-practitioner. Until September 2016, she was Director of the Portsmouth Business School Doctorate in Business Administration Programme. She is a co-editor of the leading HRD journal, Human Resource Development Quarterly.

Alexandre Ardichvili, PhD, MBA, is Professor and Hellervik Endowed Chair at the University of Minnesota. He is President of the University Council on Work and Human Resource Education, and past Editor-in-Chief of Human Resource Development International. Alexandre is the recipient of the Academy of Human Resource Development Outstanding HRD Scholar Award. He has published four books and more than 70 peer-reviewed articles and book chapters on international HRD, leadership development, entrepreneurship, business ethics, and knowledge management. Dr Ardichvili has provided consulting and applied research services to Caterpillar, 3M, Honeywell, the Carlson Companies, ADM, ADC, BI Worldwide, Target, and other organizations.

Elisabeth E. Bennett is Associate Teaching Professor in Organizational Leadership Studies at Northeastern University, Boston, MA. Dr Bennett’s research includes virtual human resource development, organizational culture, and informal learning. She co-edited two Advances in Developing Human Resources issues on virtual HRD as well as writing book chapters and articles on the subject. Dr Bennett served on the board of the Academy of Human Resource Development and presently is a member of the editorial boards for Human Resource Development Quarterly, Adult Education Quarterly, Advances in Developing Human Resources, and New Horizons in Adult Education and Human Resource Development.

Andrew Bratton is Associate Lecturer in Human Resource Management at Edinburgh Napier University Business School. He received his PhD in Human Resource Management from the University of Strathclyde, Glasgow. He teaches undergraduate, postgraduate and executive education students in Human Resource Management, Managing the Employment Relationship (delivered in Singapore) and MBA Research Methods. His research interests include sustainable workplaces, change management, and employee participation in environmental sustainability. Andrew’s current research centres on knowledge management and the application of lean and agile practices in SMEs.

Nicholas Clarke is Professor of Organisational Behaviour at EADA Business School, Barcelona. Nicholas teaches and researches in the fields of learning and development and emotional intelligence. He has published extensively in these areas in a number of journals including Human Resource Development International, Management Decision, Journal of Workplace Learning, International Journal of Human Resource Management, Journal of Behavioural Science and International Journal of Training and Development. His research specifically in the areas of emotional intelligence and workplace learning has led to a number of invitations to speak at conferences and public seminars on these topics. He is a visiting professor at Toulouse Business School and the Work and Employment Research Unit at the University of Greenwich.

Norma D’Annunzio-Green is Senior lecturer (HRM) at Edinburgh Napier University. Her research interests focus on performance management and talent management for HRM specialists and line managers. She has over 25 publications in academic journals including Personnel Review, Employee Relations, Human Resource Development International and International Journal of Contemporary Hospitality Management. She co-edited Human Resource Management, International Perspectives in Hospitality and Tourism. Norma has served on the Editorial Board of the International Journal of Contemporary Hospitality Management. Her co-edited special edition of Worldwide Hospitality and Tourism Trends on Talent Management has been awarded a Literati Award for Research Excellence and she is currently guest editing an update to this.

Thomas Garavan is Research Professor of Leadership, specializing in leadership development, HRD and leadership, CSR and leadership, and cross-cultural leadership in Edinburgh Napier University Business School. He is co-editor of the European Journal of Training and Development and Associate Editor of Personnel Review. He is a member of the Editorial Board of Human Resource Management Journal, Human Resource Development Quarterly, Human Resource Development Review, Advances in Developing Human Resources, and Human Resource Development International. He is the recipient of the Academy of Human Resource Development Outstanding HRD Scholar Award 2013. His research interests include CSR and transformational leadership, cross-cultural dimensions of diversity training, tacit knowledge in manufacturing, international human resource management standards, and human resource management in MNCs.

Julie Gedro is Associate Dean and Professor of Business with SUNY Empire State College. Julie holds a BA in Economics and English from the College of William and Mary; an MBA in Information Systems from Kennesaw State University; and a Doctorate of Education in Human Resource Development from the University of Georgia. Julie’s research and teaching includes a focus on critical theory and social justice, and emancipatory non-traditional, accessible, higher education.

Kirsteen Grant is Lecturer in Human Resource Management at Edinburgh Napier University. A Chartered Fellow of the Chartered Institute of Personnel and Development (CIPD), she is programme leader for the MSc HRM (CIPD accredited) programme for KPMG. Kirsteen’s research interests centre mainly on professional, responsible and precarious work, (changing) nature and expectations of work, talent management, workplace skills utilization, and high performance working. Kirsteen’s current research is within the UK aviation industry and public services.

Claire Gubbins is Associate Professor of Organizational Behaviour and HRM at DCU, Director of DCU’s Executive MBA Programme, Associate Editor for Human Resource Development Quarterly (an SSCI listed journal) and Deputy Director of LINK Research Institute (Knowledge and Learning). Awards for her research include: a Fulbright Scholarship, Career Enhancement Award, Government of Ireland Research Scholarship, a University of Limerick Registrars Scholarship, a US Academy of Human Resource Development (AHRD) finalist award for her dissertation; best paper runner-up for the Alan Moon Memorial prize at the International Conference on HRD Research and Practice; and best paper in track at the Irish Academy of Management. She is published in Human Resource Management (US), Organisation Studies, Journal of Management Inquiry, Human Resource Development Quarterly, Advances in Developing Human Resources, Human Resource Development Review and Journal of European Industrial Training, among others.

Michelle Hammond is Assistant Professor of Management at Oakland University. She was previously Senior Lecturer in Organizational Behaviour at the Kemmy Business School at the University of Limerick. She received her MS and PhD in Industrial/Organizational Psychology from Pennsylvania State University. Her research focuses on understanding the influence of leadership on employee well-being at work, including factors such as meaningful work, work–life balance, and creativity and innovation. Additionally her research seeks to understand the process of leadership development across multiple domains. She co-authored an award-winning text on leader development entitled An Integrative Theory of Leader Development: Connecting Adult Development, Identity, and Expertise (Routledge, 2008) and has published in journals including Academy of Management Review, Human Resource Management Review, Journal of Vocational Behavior, and Journal of Managerial Psychology among others.
Junhee Kim (PhD, Texas A&M University) is an Assistant Professor of Organizational Leadership at Indiana University-Purdue University Indianapolis (IUPUI). He worked for multinational companies in Korea for eight years including two years as a human resource manager. His research and teaching interests revolve around the intersection between leadership and other organizational issues in the international/global context, including those such as competency development, learning organization, creative learning transfer, job attitudes, instructional technology, and program evaluation.

Sewon Kim is Associate Professor of Management at State University of New York (SUNY) Empire State, USA. He received his PhD from Texas A&M University. His scholarly work has appeared in leading journals in human resources and organization development-related fields. He is a former recipient of the SUNY Chancellor’s Award for Excellence in Scholarship and Creative Activities as well as dissertation research awards from the ASTD, Academy of HRD, and Emerald/EFMD (highly commended). His teaching and practice interests include global management and leadership development, organizational behavior and change, strategic human capital, coaching and formal mentoring, and research methods.

Yanqing Lai recently completed her PhD in Kingston University London, and is currently a Research Assistant in HRM/Leadership subject group in Edinburgh Napier University. Her research interests mainly lie within strategic human resource management, and strategy and performance in SMEs. She has been published in top-tier journals, including Journal of Business Venturing, International Small Business Journal, and Human Resource Management Review.

Alma McCarthy is Head of the Department of Management and Senior Lecturer in Management at the National University of Ireland Galway. Her research interests include human resource development, leadership and work–life balance. She has published in peer-reviewed journals such as the International Journal of Human Resource Management, Human Resource Management Review, Advances in Developing Human Resources, and the Journal of Managerial Psychology and has authored a range of books and edited books. She recently served as elected Chair of the Irish Academy of Management. She is on the Editorial Board of Human Resource Development Quarterly, European Journal of Training and Development and the Journal of Managerial Psychology.

Anthony McDonnell (PhD, BBS, MCIPD) is Professor of Management at the Cork University Business School, University College Cork, Ireland. Prior to joining UCC, Anthony was Head of the Management Department, Director of the Centre for Irish Business and Economic Performance and Reader in Management at Queen’s University Belfast. Anthony is currently the (Co)Editor-in-Chief of Human Resource Management Journal and Adjunct Senior Research Fellow at the University of South Australia. His primary research interest and area of expertise is in the areas of talent management and international management, and more specifically, the HRM approaches of MNCs across countries.

Gary N. McLean, President, McLean Global Consulting, Inc., teaches in the PhD, HROD, program, NIDA (National Institute for Development Administration) in Thailand and on a master’s program with the Autonomous University of Baja California, Mexico. He was Senior Professor, Texas A&M University, and is Professor Emeritus, University of Minnesota. He taught for six months on the MBA program at the International Islamic University of Malaysia. He was President of the Academy of HRD and the International Management Development Association. He is former editor of several peer-reviewed journals. His research interests focus on organization development and national and international HRD.

Rochell R. McWhorter is an Associate Professor of Human Resource Development in the College of Business and Technology at The University of Texas at Tyler. She received her PhD degree in HRD from Texas A&M University. She edited two special issues of the Advances in Developing Human Resources journal and currently serves on their editorial board. She has published numerous journal articles and chapters on technology-facilitated learning, professional virtual conferences, ePortfolios, professional branding, qualitative methods, virtual human resource development, virtual scenario planning and online service-learning. She is the Member Chair for the Virtual HRD SIG for the Academy of HRD.

Hanna Moon is a Research Fellow at the Korea Research Institute for Vocational Education and Training (KRIVET). She has conducted government-policy related projects that include Industry Skills Councils, National Competency Standards, and Programme for the International Assessment of Adult Competencies in KRIVET. She has published articles on strategic learning capability, sensemaking, decision-making, and woman’s leadership. Hanna received her PhD from the University of Georgia, with an emphasis on Human Resource and Organization Development (HROD). She serves on The Korean Association of Human Resource Development as a committee member.

Ciara T. Nolan is Lecturer in Management, specialising in Human Resource Management, in the College of Business at the Dublin Institute. of Technology (DIT). She is also a Fellow of the Higher Education Academy (UK). Prior to joining DIT, she worked as a Lecturer in HRM in the Department of Management and Leadership, Ulster University and in Dublin City University Business School. Her main research interests focus on the dynamics of human resource development in small and medium-sized enterprises, with a particular emphasis on professional service firms and the hospitality industry. She has presented at numerous conferences and published book chapters and academic journal articles in such journals as The International Journal of Management Reviews, Human Resource Development Quarterly and the Journal of European Industrial Training. Prior to her academic career, Ciara worked as a human resource manager in the retail and hospitality industries, and as a human resource consultant.

Deirdre O'Shea, C.Psychol.Ps.S.I., is a Lecturer (Above the Bar) at the Kemmy Business School, University of Limerick. Her research interests include psychological interventions, self-regulation, work motivation, emotions, proactive behaviour, occupational health psychology, and voice and silence in the workplace, amongst others. Deirdre has published her research in outlets such as The Journal of Occupational Health Psychology, Journal of Occupational and Organizational Psychology, Applied Psychology: An International Review, Personality and Individual Differences, and Journal of Managerial Psychology, amongst others. In 2015, she co-edited a special issue in the Journal of Occupational and Organisational Psychology on the topic of resource-based interventions in the workplace.

Jill Pearson is Lecturer and Course Director for the MSc in Work and Organizational Psychology at the University of Limerick. Jill received her MSc in Human Resource Management from the London School of Economics and her BA in Psychology from the University of Western Ontario, Canada. She has lectured at the London Business School and the London School of Economics. She has also worked as a Consultant to a number of multinationals and as an HR practitioner in both the private and public sectors. Jill was awarded the Government of Ireland Scholarship for her PhD research on “Managerial Career Mobility” which uses event history analysis. Her research interests include objective and subjective career success, student and employee absenteeism, and 360-degree feedback.

Vijay Pereira is Associate Professor at University of Wollongong, Dubai. He has industry, consultancy and academia experience. He has developed subject specialism in Strategic and International Human Resource Management. Dr Pereira has published and presented over 80 papers worldwide in international journals such as HRM, JWB, IJHRM, JBR, SI and IJM and at numerous international conferences including the AOM, AIB, BAM and INDAM. He is currently on the international advisory board for the Routledge journal South Asian History and Culture and the FT listed Production and Operations Management Society (POMS) journal and an elected member of the Indian Academy of Management.

Oranuch (Jued) Pruetipibultham is a full-time faculty member at the Graduate School of Human Resource Development, National Institute of Development Administration (NIDA), Thailand. Her research interest covers topics relevant to change management, cross-cultural management, expatriate development programmes, and organizational culture.

Wendy E.A. Ruona is Associate Professor of Human Resource and Organization Development (HROD) at the University of Georgia. She has been actively working in the field for over 15 years. Wendy's professional and scholarly work have primarily focused on organization change and effectiveness, strategic HR/HRD, performance improvement, theory and practice issues in HRD, and foundations of HRD (history, philosophy, theory). She served as the OD and Change Track Chair for the AHRD 2009 conference and has extensive editing experience, especially during her tenure as the Editor-in-Chief of Advances in Developing Human Resources. Wendy has also served three terms on the AHRD Board of Directors during the past ten years.

Valerie Shanahan is Lecturer in HRM at Dublin City University and is currently on secondment at the Princess Nourah bint Abdulrahman University, Saudi Arabia. Valerie received her MSc in Human Resource Management from the University of Limerick and her Bachelor of Commerce from University College Cork. She has previously taught at the University of Limerick. As well as experience consulting in the areas of management and leadership development, she has almost ten years’ experience lecturing internationally in the area of human resource management/development and organizational management. Her research focuses on how human capital can add value to the organization, especially through learning, training and development initiatives.

Maura Sheehan is Professor of International Management and Director of the International Centre for Management and Governance Research (ICMGR) at Edinburgh Napier University. She specializes in the relationship between HRM, HRD and organizational performance. Her work also examines factors that contribute to innovation in firms. She is an Associate Editor of Human Resource Development Quarterly (HRDQ) and Journal of Organisational Effectiveness: People and Performance.
Claire Valentin is a Senior Lecturer in Human Resource Development at the University of Edinburgh. She is currently Deputy Director for Postgraduate Studies in the Moray House School of Education. Her research and publications focus on the application of critical perspectives to the study and teaching of HRD. This has included HRD and sustainability, discourse perspectives on HRD, employee engagement, and critical pedagogy. She is author of the textbook Enhancing Participant Engagement in the Learning Process (2017, Kogan Page) and editor with John Walton of Human Resource Development: practises and orthodoxies (2014, Palgrave Macmillan).

Jonathan Winterton is Professor of Employment and Executive Dean of the Faculty of Business and Law at Taylor’s University in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia. He has worked extensively on the theory, policy and practice of human capital development, leading the team that developed the competence typology for the European Credit Transfer System for VET. He has also led competence development projects in Turkey, Vietnam and the UK and written a substantial number of academic and policy papers on qualifications and competence. His books include Developing Managerial Competence (Routledge, 1999, with Ruth Winterton) and Trade Union Approaches to Competence Development (Routledge, forthcoming, with Mark Stuart).