Working on the second edition of the Handbook of Research Methods on Trust we have been fortunate once again to be supported by a large number of our friends and colleagues in the community of trust researchers. While many of these are represented in this volume, there are others, too many to mention by name, to whom we are also extremely grateful. On behalf of our contributors we would like to thank all students, colleagues and collaborators who have commented on and critiqued the methods in this volume during their development and who have given us valuable feedback on the first edition. We are also most grateful to the countless research participants who shared their time and experiences with us thereby enabling us all to research this fascinating social phenomenon in the first place.

Our work on this second edition was supported with much patience and good advice by the people at Edward Elgar Publishing, especially Francine O'Sullivan, Aisha Bushby, Benedict Hill and Rebecca Hastie. We are also particularly grateful to Pamela Macaulay of Middlesex University, UK, for her assistance in managing the editing process.

Ellen Dederichs has kindly given us permission to use her painting B. A. Urbano – Calle Comercial II (2009) for a new variant of the cover design. The blurred features of people and buildings represent very well the uncertainty encountered by trustors and trust researchers alike.

As we put the final touches on this second edition, we were devastated to learn that our colleague and friend Graham Dietz passed away at the age of 45 after a heart attack. His contributions to the conceptualization and measurement of trust were outstanding and we will sorely miss his inspiring insights.

We dedicate this book to Graham.
