Acknowledgements

The publication of this book represents the labors of many people, but primarily Andy Yu working closely with his dissertation chair, Tom Lumpkin, to develop the research design and carry out the four studies included in the paper entitled “The landscape of family business outcomes: A summary and numerical taxonomy of dependent variables.” Ritch Sorenson and Keith Brigham actively participated in that research effort and joined Andy and Tom in developing the paper.

We were encouraged when this original landscape paper received a “best paper” award at the 2009 Academy of Management Conference. So, we continued to develop the paper and ultimately submitted it to the 25th Anniversary Edition of Family Business Review. Pramodita Sharma, James Chrisman, and Kelin Gersick, editors for 25th anniversary edition, provided especially helpful developmental feedback.

Other scholars who provided evaluation and feedback that ultimately produced the Landscape Map included Elaine Allen, Ray Bagby, Isabel Botero, Sharon Danes, Alan Carsrud, Gibb Dyer, Tomasz Fediuk, Frank Hoy, Franz Kellermanns, Michael Lubatkin, Jeffrey Pollack, Ernesto Poza, Carol Sánchez, William Schulze, Tom Schwartz, Manisha Singal, David Sirmon, Alex Stewart, Karen Vinton and John Ward.

We appreciate the insights provided by the family business owners, advisors, and scholars at a conference dedicated to the Landscape Map. The names of those participants are listed in Appendix C. The conference was sponsored by the Family Business Center at the University of St. Thomas in Minneapolis. We acknowledge the help of Sara McGinley, Director of the Family Business Center at St. Thomas, in managing the conference. Others who provided support for the conference were Kathy Sauro, Daniel Vevang, and Trina Smith.

We also acknowledge Grace Noyes who provided editorial feedback for manuscripts. Later, Joseph Grodahl Biever helped to prepare the final manuscript for submission to the publisher.

We express special appreciation to Jackie Milbrandt, Managing Editor for the book. Jackie has a Master’s Degree in Teaching English and that, together with experience in supporting family business research for over three years, uniquely prepared her for the role. As a Managing Editor, Jackie corresponded with authors, organized and arranged content, obtained and edited biographies, consulted with the editors about the organization development of this book, and reviewed articles for content to develop the Outcome Categories by Chapter Table. Jackie’s academic training enabled her to provide editorial and developmental feedback, organize content, and prepare the manuscript for the publisher. She has worked tirelessly on the book and deserves much credit for its completion.

Finally, we express special appreciation to the authors, listed in the table of contents, who have contributed chapters to this book. Many hours of writing and revising are represented in their writing. Their reward will be moving forward our understanding of family business.
