Extended contents

List of contributors	xvii
Preface	xix

Introduction: taking stock of the societal and legal interplay between human rights and investment Yannick Radi	1
--	---

1. Introduction	1
2. Human rights and investment in a globalised world	1
2.1 The globalisation of the economy	2
2.2 The globalisation of human rights	3
3. Human rights and investment in international law	4
3.1 The tension between human rights and investment	5
3.2 The integration of human rights and investment	7
4. The organisation of this Research Handbook	9
4.1 Part I: views from international law regimes	9
4.2 Part II: accountability for MNCs' human rights violations	10
4.3 Part III: sectorial and regional case studies	11

PART I VIEWS FROM INTERNATIONAL LAW REGIMES

1. Human rights and international investment law Ursula Kriebaum	13
1. Introduction	13
2. General remarks	14
3. Constellation 1: the human rights of the investor	18
4. The human rights of the host State population	22
4.1 Constellation 2: the investor's actions violate the human rights of the host State population	22
4.2 Constellation 3: the host state amends its legislation to better comply with human rights obligations	29
4.3 Constellation 4: human rights are invoked to derogate from investment protection provisions during economic crises	33
5. Conclusion	39

2. Investment arbitration and human rights cases in Latin America	41
Rodrigo Polanco Lazo and Rodrigo Mella
1. Introduction: the relationship between investment law and human rights law	41
2. Foreign investment and human rights in Latin America: a shifting sailboat	43
3. La Oroya and Renco cases against Peru	48
3.1 The La Oroya complex	48
3.2 The harmful effects of the La Oroya complex	51
3.3 Legal actions against Doe Run in Peruvian and US courts	52
3.4 The human rights case of the La Oroya community against the Republic of Peru	53
3.5 The ISDS case against Peru	55
4. The Chevron/Texaco case and related human rights cases against Ecuador	57
4.1 Texaco oil operations and Ecuadorian indigenous communities	57
4.2 Litigation before US and Ecuadorian courts	58
4.3 Related human rights cases against Ecuador	63
4.3.1 Bameno v The Republic of Ecuador	63
4.3.2 The Kichwa Peoples of the Sarayaku Community and its Members v Ecuador	64
4.4 ISDS against Ecuador	67
5. The Yukos cases	72
5.1 The investment cases	73
5.2 The human rights cases	75
5.3 Relationship between the investment and human rights cases	78
6. Human rights and investment protection: a necessary dialogue	84
7. Conclusion	91
3. The shared territory of the ECHR and international investment law	93
Maria Fanou and Vassilis P. Tzevelekos
1. Introduction	93
2. Key differences between the ECHR and IIL	95

3.	Drawing a parallel: the ECHR and IIL	102
3.1	Protection of property under the ECHR	102
3.1.1	The general framework in a nutshell	103
3.1.2	ECtHR case law on FDI	111
3.2	The standards of protection under IIL: analogies with the ECHR	117
3.2.1	Protection from expropriation	117
3.2.2	FET	121
3.2.3	FPS	126
4.	Setting limits to investment rights	128
5.	Conclusion	134
4.	Human rights, international investment law and transparency Laurence Boisson de Chazournes and Rukia Baruti	137
1.	Introduction	137
2.	Transparency in human rights law	138
2.1	The right to information as the key to good governance	138
2.2	Ensuring the right to be heard	143
2.2.1	Transparency in human rights decision-making	143
2.2.2	Amicus curiae submissions in human rights cases	146
3.	Transparency in international investment law	148
3.1	An incremental right to information	148
3.2	Towards inclusive participation	153
3.2.1	Transparency in investment rule-making	153
3.2.2	Amicus curiae submissions in investment arbitration	154
4.	Conclusion	156
5.	Human rights and investments at the WTO Valentina Vadi	158
1.	Introduction	158
2.	International trade and human rights	161
3.	Trade and investment	165
4.	Trade, investment and human rights in theory	171
5.	Trade, investment and human rights in practice	175
5.1	Cultural disputes in a strict sense	177
5.2	Cultural disputes in a broad sense	180
6.	Conclusion	184

6. Human rights at the World Bank Group	186
Gwen Lehane
1. Introduction	186
2. The Bank's legal relationship to international human rights law	187
2.1 Mandate of the World Bank	188
2.1.1 Changing interpretations of the Bank's mandate	189
2.1.2 Criticisms	194
2.2 Human rights obligations on the World Bank as an international organisation	196
2.3 Human rights obligations of the member states	198
3. Substantive human rights protections	200
3.1 Operational Policies	200
3.1.1 Safeguard Policies	200
3.1.2 Shortcomings	201
3.1.3 New Environmental and Social Framework	203
3.1.4 Criticisms	205
3.2 Engagement with human rights bodies	206
3.3 Internal policies	206
4. Institutional issues	207
4.1 Inspection Panel	208
4.1.1 Early resolutions	210
4.1.2 Under the new ESF	211
4.1.3 Shortcomings	212
4.2 Public participation	214
4.2.1 Participation in practice	216
4.3 Information disclosure policy	217
5. Conclusion	219
 PART II ACCOUNTABILITY FOR MNCs' HUMAN RIGHTS VIOLATIONS
7. Corporate responsibility and human rights: navigating between international, domestic and self-regulation	221
Eric De Brabandere and Maryse Hazelzet
1. Introduction	221
2. Human rights and international corporations: the 'classic' or 'traditional' approach	224
3. Human rights obligations of corporations: tensions between state centrism and direct international corporate responsibility	226

4.	Human rights and international corporations: attempts of regulation	230
4.1	Domestic jurisdictional mechanisms for corporate responsibility	231
4.2	Direct corporate responsibility under international law	235
4.3	The trend towards binding domestic due diligence obligations for corporations	238
5.	Conclusion	242
8.	MNCs' obligations in their 'sphere of influence'	244
	Gilles Lhuillier
1.	Introduction	244
1.1	The stage: the transnational area in which MNCs easily escape human rights regulations	247
1.2	Act I: MNCs create new directly binding obligations to respect human rights in order to supplement this loophole between national and international law	248
1.3	Act II: States give a mandatory effect to the MNC obligations to respect human rights	251
2.	The creation by MNCs' policy of the due diligence obligation to respect human rights	252
2.1	MNCs' 'charters', 'codes of ethics', 'executive agreements', 'principles', 'covenants' and 'professional standards'	253
2.1.1	Corporate policies	253
2.1.2	Professional organizations' standards	255
2.1.3	The principles and non-binding 'covenants' of international organizations	255
2.2	Contracts, obligation to negotiate and the law of the investment contract	257
2.2.1	Collective contracts	257
2.2.2	'Bargaining obligations'	258
2.2.3	The law of contract	260
3.	The reception by States of the MNCs' due diligence to respect human rights	262
3.1	Courts and the duty of care of the MNCs in their 'sphere of influence'	263
3.1.1	The example of Canadian jurisprudence: the case of Choc v Hudbay Minerals Inc and the duty of care	263

3.1.2	The English example: the case of Chandler v Cape Plc of 2012 and the ‘neighborhood principle’	266
3.2	Legislators and the MNCs’ diligence in their ‘sphere of influence’	268
3.2.1	The example of US law: the Dodd-Frank Act and the California Transparency Act in Supply	268
3.2.2	The example of French law: the bill relating to the due diligence of parent companies and the order of donor companies	269
4.	Conclusion	271
9.	International criminal responsibilities for MNCs’ violations of human rights Joanna Kyriakakis	273
1.	Mapping the terrain: MNCs, investment and international crimes	276
2.	Individual business representatives and responsibility under international criminal law	285
3.	Corporate criminal responsibility for international crimes	295
4.	Conclusion	302
10.	Extraterritorial responsibility of the home States for MNCs’ violations of human rights Antal Berkes	304
1.	Due diligence duties with respect to MNCs operating within the State’s territory	312
1.1	Substantive obligations to regulate and control corporate activities	314
1.2	Procedural obligations to protect human rights through ensuring an informed decision-making process	315
1.3	Obligations in law enforcement and judicial processes related to corporate violations of human rights	316
2.	Extraterritorial due diligence duties with respect to MNCs operating abroad	317
2.1	The home State’s truly extraterritorial jurisdiction	323
2.2	The home State’s territorial jurisdiction with extraterritorial effects	325

2.2.1	Due diligence duties prescribed by international law on international crimes	325
2.2.2	Procedural due diligence duties triggered by voluntarily adopted acts	327
2.2.3	Due diligence duties triggered by the MNC's nationality	330
3.	Conclusion	342

PART III SECTORIAL AND REGIONAL CASE STUDIES

11.	Extractive industry investments and human rights Jacky Mandelbaum and Jennifer Loutit	345
1.	Introduction	345
1.1	Overview: investment in extractive industries	345
1.2	Differences between mining and petroleum projects	347
1.3	Human rights impacts	348
1.4	Addressing human rights impacts in extractive industry investments	350
2.	Governance in the extractive industries sector	353
2.1	Background: the resource curse	353
2.2	Moves to increase transparency	354
2.2.1	Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative	354
2.2.2	United States mandatory disclosure requirements	356
2.2.3	European Union mandatory disclosure rules	357
2.2.4	Canadian mandatory disclosure rules	357
2.2.5	Towards a global transparency regime	358
2.3	Gaps in legal frameworks to regulate investment	359
2.3.1	Lack of government resources leads to weak regulation	359
2.3.2	The problem of stabilisation clauses	360
3.	Human rights issues in extractive industry contexts	362
3.1	Artisanal and small-scale mining and investments	362
3.1.1	Context: artisanal and small-scale mining and foreign investments	362
3.1.2	The relationship between ASM and LSM	363
3.1.3	The way forward: engaging with ASM	366
3.2	Resettlement	368
3.2.1	Context: resettlement in the extractive industry	368
3.2.2	Resettlement and its impact on human rights	369

3.2.3	Case study: human rights affected by extractive industry resettlement	371
3.2.4	Initiatives to protect human rights in the resettlement context	372
3.3	Labour	375
3.3.1	Context: labour rights triggers in the extractive industries	375
3.3.2	International labour rights framework	376
3.3.3	Four rights illustrations of labour issues in extractive industries	377
3.4	Security	380
3.4.1	Context: security in the extractive industry	380
3.4.2	Security and human rights	381
3.4.3	International initiatives to protect human rights in the security context	382
4.	Reducing human rights impacts through engagement	384
4.1	Context: company-community conflict in the extractive industries	384
4.2	Background: community engagement to protect human rights	386
4.3	Mechanisms for engagement in the extractive industries	389
4.3.1	Impact assessments	389
4.3.2	Company-community agreements	394
4.3.3	Non-judicial grievance mechanisms to remedy human rights impacts	400
4.3.4	Ensuring participation of vulnerable groups to minimise human rights risks	402
5.	Conclusion: looking forward	406
	Appendix: guidelines for stakeholder engagement	409
12.	Investments and human rights in the agricultural sector	414
	Kaitlin Cordes
1.	Investment in the agricultural sector: an introduction	415
1.1	Do we need agricultural investments?	415
1.2	Sources and models of investment in agriculture	417
2.	Relevant international legal frameworks	421
3.	Human rights and agricultural investments	425
3.1	General human rights concerns in the agricultural sector	425
3.1.1	Rights of workers	426

3.1.2	Rights of local communities	429
3.1.3	Rights of future generations	430
3.2	Human rights implications of large-scale land acquisitions and inclusive business models	431
3.2.1	Large-scale land acquisitions	432
3.2.2	Inclusive business models	444
4.	Moving forward: stakeholder roles in promoting rights-supportive outcomes	446
13.	Assessing human rights issues in the fashion industry: challenges for investors	452
	Dorothee Baumann-Pauly and Sarah Margaretha Jastram
1.	Introduction	452
2.	Human rights challenges in the fashion industry	455
3.	Governance approaches to human rights issues in the fashion industry	457
4.	Human rights benchmarks to compare the human rights performance of companies in the fashion industry	459
5.	Metrics for investors: a critical discussion	461
6.	Human rights indicators for the apparel industry	464
7.	Conclusion: process must meet performance	466
14.	Private investments and the human right to water	468
	Mara Tignino
1.	The nexus between States and private corporations in safeguarding the right to water	472
1.1	Private investments and the right to water of indigenous peoples	473
1.2	Private investment, public participation rights and anti-corruption measures	476
1.3	Environmental obligations and the human right to water in domestic courts	479
2.	The right to water in soft law instruments	482
2.1	The concept of water stewardship	482
2.2	The International Standard of the Alliance for Water Stewardship	485
2.3	The UN Global Compact, the CEO Water Mandate and the Global Reporting Initiative	486
2.4	Self-regulatory initiatives and international certification	490

2.5 The right to water and the OECD National Contact Points	493
3. Conclusion	496
15. Investments and human rights in Asia Delphia Lim	499
1. Introduction	499
2. Dynamics in South and Southeast Asia	501
2.1 Where social divides run deep	501
2.1.1 The surrounding context	502
2.1.2 The project's disempowering impact	503
2.1.3 The interplay between existing socio-political tensions and the investment project	505
2.1.4 The investor's failure to appreciate the social and political context	508
2.2 Where the legal system is unfamiliar to society	509
2.2.1 The influence of context on how laws work in practice	510
2.2.2 The influence of context on how citizens exercise their legal rights	512
3. North India's tea plantations: seeing through the verdant green	516
3.1 The investment: empowerment through employee ownership	517
3.2 The investment's impact	519
3.2.1 Employee share ownership scheme	520
3.2.2 Labour conditions	522
3.2.3 Living conditions	523
3.2.4 Job sustainability	523
3.3 The relationship between context and investment impact	524
3.3.1 The influence of local power inequalities	524
3.3.2 The effect of gaps in local governance	525
3.4 The relationship between context and remedy	527
3.4.1 Local institutional avenues for recourse	528
3.4.2 Social context	531
3.5 What should have been done	532
4. Conclusion	533
Index	535