This was a huge project and one that breaks from various conventional perspectives on economic theory and behavioural economics. I must thank Matthew Pitman, our publishing editor, for supporting this project and for his helpful advice. Of course, it goes without saying that all contributors devoted so much time and effort towards constructing some enriching and excellent chapters. Thanks for your contributions and support. The meticulous work from the whole Edward Elgar team was invaluable. I also express gratitude to life partner and wife, Louise Lamontagne, for her comments and suggestions. Many thanks as well to our daughter, Hannah Altman, now blossoming into a first-rate economist and health scientist.

To the late Professor Harold (H.R.C.) Wright, brilliant and modest teacher-scholar, my Master's and PHD supervisor, teacher, mentor and friend at McGill University.
