

Contributors

Agustin Barroilhet is Assistant Professor at the University of Chile Law School. He received his JSM at Stanford Law School and is currently pursuing a doctoral degree at Georgetown University Law School.

Camille Cameron is the Dean and Weldon Professor of Law at the Schulich School of Law at Dalhousie University in Halifax, Canada. Prior to joining Dalhousie, Prof. Cameron was Dean of Law at the University of Windsor, Ontario and on the faculty of law at the University of Melbourne, Australia. Her research and teaching focus on civil justice administration and reform, including class actions.

Naomi Creutzfeldt is an ESRC Research Fellow at the Centre for Socio-Legal Studies, Oxford University, England. Dr. Creutzfeldt's research has focused on European civil justice systems and alternative dispute resolution.

Manuel A. Gómez is Associate Professor of Law and Associate Dean of International & Graduate Studies at Florida International University College of Law (United States). Prof. Gomez's research and teaching focuses on comparative civil procedure, complex litigation, international arbitration, law and society, and alternative dispute resolution.

Axel Halfmeier is Professor of Civil Law, Comparative Law and International Private and Procedural Law at Leuphana University Lüneburg (Germany). His research focuses on the enforcement of law in a global setting. In 2009, he was the lead author of the evaluation of the KapMuG ("model case proceeding") that was commissioned by the German Ministry of Justice.

Deborah R. Hensler is the Judge John W. Ford Professor of Dispute Resolution and Associate Dean for Graduate Studies at Stanford Law School (United States), and holds a personal chair in Empirical Studies on Mass Claims Resolution at Tilburg University (Netherlands). Prof. Hensler's research and teaching focuses on complex litigation, including mass torts and class actions. Prior to joining Stanford, she was the director of the RAND Institute for Civil Justice.

Christopher Hodges is Professor of Justice Systems, Fellow of Wolfson College, and Head of the Swiss Re/CMS Research Programme on Civil Justice Systems at the Centre for Socio-Legal Studies, University of Oxford, England.

Kuo-Chang Huang is a member of Taiwan's national congress. At the time he conducted his case studies he was a researcher at Institutum Iurisprudentiae, Academia Sinica and Professor at National Cheng-Chi University in Taiwan. He was the principal investigator of the first nationwide study on access to justice in Taiwan.

Jasminka Kalajdzic is Associate Professor of Law, University of Windsor, Ontario, Canada. Prof. Kalajdzic teaches and writes in the areas of access to justice and class actions. In 2011 she was appointed to the five-member Class Proceedings Committee, which provides funding to class action plaintiffs in Ontario. She is also a member of the Advisory Committee for the Law Commission of Ontario's Class Action Project.

Alon Klement is a Professor at the Buchman Faculty of Law, Tel-Aviv University, Israel. He writes on civil procedure, law and economics and law and social norms. His articles on class actions have been cited numerous times by the Supreme Court of Israel.

Byron Stier is Associate Dean for Research and Professor of Law at Southwestern Law School, Los Angeles, California. He teaches and writes about mass torts and complex litigation and is the founding editor of the mass tort litigation blog, http://lawprofessors.typepad.com/mass_tort_litigation/.

Elizabeth Thornburg is the Richard R. Lee Endowed Professor of Law and Senior Associate Dean for Academic Affairs, SMU Dedman School of Law, Dallas, Texas. Prof. Thornburg teaches and writes in the areas of civil procedure, comparative procedure, online dispute resolution and the intersection of law and culture.

Ianika Tzankova holds the Chair in Mass Claims Dispute Resolution at Tilburg University, the Netherlands and was a Fulbright Visiting Scholar at Stanford in 2012. She was a member of a commission that conducted a fundamental review of Dutch civil procedure law for the Netherlands Ministry of Justice in 2001–2006. She has authored numerous articles on the unique Dutch procedure for resolving mass claims.

Stefaan Voet is an Associate Professor of Law at the University of Leuven (Belgium) and a Visiting Professor at the University of Hasselt. He was a visiting scholar at the University of Houston Law Center

(2010) and Stanford Law School (2014), and a visiting lecturer at various US law schools. He focuses on civil procedure, complex litigation, ADR, ODR and litigation costs.