Contributors

Jack Anderson
Jack Anderson is a Professor of Law at Queen’s University, Belfast, Northern Ireland. Jack has published widely on the topics of sports law including monographs such as The Legality of Boxing (2007) and Modern Sports Law (2010) and an edited collection Landmark Cases in Sports Law (2013). He is currently Editor-in-Chief of the International Sports Law Journal published jointly by the Asser Institute at The Hague and Springer-Verlag. Jack has lectured internationally on the topic of sports law including at the National Sports Law Institute, Marquette University, Milwaukee; the Australian National University, Canberra; the Australian Research Council’s Centre of Excellence in Policing and Security, Brisbane; University of Cambridge; German Sports University, Cologne; and the China University of Political Science and Law, Beijing. He has also delivered papers and workshops relating to sports law for Interpol, FIFA and the International Rugby Board. Jack contributes regularly to the media in Britain and Ireland on sports law matters and, being a Fellow of the Chartered Institute of Arbitrators (FCI Arb), he is also a member of a number of sports dispute resolution tribunals in the UK and Ireland.

Michael Barry
Michael Barry is Professor and Head of the Department of Employment Relations and Human Resources at Griffith University, Australia. Michael’s main research interests are in the areas of employee voice and engagement, international and comparative employment relations, and employer associations. Michael is currently working on a large, funded study of employee–employer relations and workplace challenges in the US, Australia and the UK.

Peter Bouris
Peter Bouris is a PhD student at the University of Toronto’s Centre for Industrial Relations and Human Resources. He originally hails from Buffalo, New York, USA. As a lifelong fan of sport, one of his discipline interests is collective bargaining power dynamics in North America’s major sports leagues. He also is currently doing work involving interest arbitration and labour organizing strategy and strength.
Christine Coupland
Christine Coupland is Professor of Organizational Behaviour at the Loughborough University School of Business and Economics, UK. Her research interests centre on issues of career, identity and language, drawing upon theoretical perspectives from organization studies and constructionist social psychology. Her most recent research focuses on the career paths of elite professional rugby players. She serves on the editorial board of the Journal of Organizational and Occupational Psychology. She is currently Senior Editor for Organization Studies and regularly convenes research streams at the British Academy of Management conference.

Craig A. Depken II
Craig A. Depken II is a Professor of Economics in the Belk College at UNC Charlotte, USA. His research interests include sports economics, industrial organization, real estate economics and finance. He is currently Co-editor of Contemporary Economic Policy.

James B. Dworkin
James B. Dworkin is currently the Chancellor of the Purdue University North Central (PNC), Indiana, USA campus, which is part of the Purdue University system. Prior to coming to PNC, James served as Associate Dean of the School of Management and the Krannert Graduate School of Management on the Purdue West Lafayette Campus. He has been with Purdue since 1976. He received his BA in Economics (with high honours) and MA in Industrial Relations from the University of Cincinnati and his PhD in Industrial Relations from the University of Minnesota. He is a member of the National Academy of Arbitrators. He has taught many courses in industrial relations and negotiations both at the undergraduate and graduate levels. He has written one scholarly book, Owners versus Players: Baseball and Collective Bargaining, as well as 99 professional articles and reviews. His first children’s book, The Dog and the Dolphin, was published in July of 2014. His professional research interests include professional sports and collective bargaining. He continues to serve as an active arbitrator, fact-finder and mediator. James is the recipient of the ‘Sagamore of the Wabash’ award from Indiana Governor Michael Pence. He has received many other awards, including the ‘Special Boilermaker Award’ from the Purdue University Alumni Association, and was recognized by Northwest Indiana Business Quarterly as an Outstanding Community Leader in 2012.

Terry Engelberg
Terry Engelberg is an Associate Professor in the College of Healthcare Sciences at James Cook University, Australia. She has a background in social psychology and in sport science and was a small business owner in the health and fitness sector before entering academia. She has published on topics such as sexual harassment, organizational commitment and doping in sport for leading journals and books. She is also a certified athletics coach and a certified fitness instructor for children and young adolescents. She is a former recipient of an Australian Sports Commission (ASC) Sport Leadership Grant for Women. Terry has previously conducted seven major studies on anti-doping in Australia (six for the Australian Government’s Anti-Doping Research Program, and one for WADA). She is currently undertaking a project on detecting doping, funded by the inaugural International Olympic Committee (IOC) anti-doping fund (with Stephen Moston).

Simon Gardiner

Simon Gardiner is Professor of International Sports Law at Leeds Becket University, UK and has worked at a number of universities in the UK and in Australia including Middlesex University and Griffith University in Queensland. Simon has been an active researcher in the area of sports law for over twenty years and has an international reputation. His particular research interests include sports governance and the regulation of sports-related corruption, racism in sport and the construction of national identity and athlete mobility in sport. He has been involved in funded research projects and consultancy for a range of sports bodies and has worked with the European Union concerning a number of projects. He is lead author and editor of the UK’s principal student-targeted textbook, namely Gardiner et al., Sports Law, that is due to be published in its fifth edition in 2016.

Rafael Gomez

Rafael is a Professor of Employment Relations at the University of Toronto, Canada. In 2015 he assumed the Directorship of the Centre for Industrial Relations and Human Resources, at the University of Toronto. In 2015 he also co-authored the book Small Business and the City: The Transformative Potential of Small Scale Entrepreneurs.

Berndt Keller

Berndt Keller is Professor Emeritus of Employment Relations at the University of Konstanz, Germany. He is the author and editor of several books and numerous articles on German and European employment relations. He was co-editor of Industrielle Beziehungen/The German Journal of Industrial Relations and was a member of the Executive Committee of the International Labor and Employment Relations Association. His present research interests include the consequences of European integration, atypical forms of employment, employment relations in the public sector, and union mergers.

Lisa Pike Masteralexis
Lisa Pike Masteralexis is the Associate Dean of Administration for the Isenberg School of Management at the University of Massachusetts-Amherst, USA. For 17 years she served as Department Head of the Mark H. McCormack Department of Sport Management and an Associate Professor of Sport Law and Labor Relations in Sport. She is an editor of Principles and Practice of Sport Management (5th Ed.) plus author of numerous sport law articles. She holds a JD from Suffolk University School of Law and a BS in Sport Management from the University of Massachusetts-Amherst. She is a member of the Massachusetts and US Supreme Court Bars, a certified player agent with the Major League Baseball Players Association, and a principal in DiaMMond Management Group, an athlete management firm.

Greg Maynes
Greg Maynes is a Lecturer in Economics including Macro-Economics and Development Economics in the School of Economics, Finance and Marketing, RMIT University, Australia. His recent research has included the process of human capital investment and the impact of education on economic development.

Heather Mitchell
Heather Mitchell, PhD, M. App. Sci., B. App. Sci. (Maths), Dip. C.E., graduated with her PhD in Mathematical Statistics in 1997, after which she commenced as a Lecturer in RMIT University’s School of Economics, Finance and Marketing. She retired in 2013 and is now an Honorary Professor in the school. She has over 30 publications in refereed journals including Biometrika and the Journal of Banking and Finance. Before academia she worked as a civil engineer for the Melbourne and Metropolitan Board of Works (MMBW).

Stephen Moston
Stephen Moston has extensive experience in the field of forensic psychology and has conducted major research studies for bodies such as the Royal Commission on Criminal Justice, UK Home Office, Metropolitan Police, and has most recently worked with members of the Queensland Police Service on projects relating to police investigative processes. He has a strong interest in anti-doping issues, particularly in the forensic identification and detection of athletes committing doping violations. He has previously conducted seven major studies on anti-doping in Australia (six for the Australian Government’s Anti-Doping Research Program, and one for WADA). He is currently undertaking a project on detecting doping, funded by the inaugural International Olympic Committee anti-doping fund (with Terry Engelberg).

James A.R. Nafziger
James A.R. Nafziger is the Thomas B. Stoel Professor of Law and Director of International Law Programs, Willamette University College of Law, USA. He also serves as Honorary President of the International Association of Sports Law and is a member of the Board of Advisors of the National Sports Law Institute. His several books and numerous articles on sports law include International Sports Law, the first book in that field; Handbook of International Sports Law (with Stephen F. Ross); and Transnational Sports Law. Professor Nafziger has also taught sports law at Marquette University, as the Boden Visiting Professor, and the University of Barcelona.

Matt Nichol
Matt Nichol is an Assistant Lecturer in the Department of Business Law and Taxation at the Monash Business School, Monash University, Australia. He is currently undertaking a PhD on the regulation of labour in professional baseball in the US, Japan and Australia at the Adelaide Law School, University of Adelaide. Matt has been involved in Australian baseball as a player, coach and administrator for 30 years. Recently he has worked with the Melbourne Aces of the Australian Baseball League in a variety of roles, including as a liaison for professional players from Japan’s Saitama Seibu Lions.

Rodney Paul
Rodney Paul has a PhD in Applied Economics from Clemson University, USA. His research interests in the economics and finance of sports include attendance modelling, market efficiency and sports gambling markets, television ratings in sports, competitive balance and uncertainty of outcome. He is currently Full Professor in the Department of Sport Management in the David B. Falk College of Sport and Human Dynamics at Syracuse University.

Peter Schuwalow
Peter Schuwalow is a Lecturer in Economics including Sports Economics in the Department of Economics, Monash University, Australia. Recent research has included the history of labour market regulation in professional sports and the economic value of professional sport.

James Skinner
James is the Director of the Institute for Sport Business, Professor of Sport Business and Associate Dean Enterprise at Loughborough
University London, UK. His research and consultancy interests are in leadership, culture and change in sport; doping in sport; and sport and social capital. In conjunction with colleagues he has received external research funding from the Australian Research Council, the World Anti-Doping Agency, the Australian Federal Government’s Anti-Doping Research Program, the Australian Sports Commission and London Sport. His current research is examining policy mechanisms and frameworks to apply a uniform approach to athlete regulation and conduct.

John Solow

John Solow is Professor of Economics, Tippie College of Business, the University of Iowa, USA. Professor Solow received his BA in Economics from Yale University and his MA and PhD in Economics from Stanford University. He joined the Iowa faculty in 1981. His research interests include sports economics, antitrust law and economics, and public policy, and his work has been published in the American Economic Review, the Journal of Public Economics and the Journal of Sports Economics, among others. He has worked at the Federal Energy Administration and the Electric Power Research Institute, served as a consultant to the US Departments of Energy and Justice, Mid-American Energy, Qwest Telecommunications and numerous law firms, and has been a Visiting Scholar at Stanford University, the University of Auckland and Monash University.

Mark Stewart

Mark Stewart is a Senior Lecturer in the School of Economics, Finance and Marketing at RMIT University, Australia. His publications have appeared in journals including the Journal of Sports Economics, the International Journal of Sports Finance and Applied Economics. Mark has also previously worked as a professional athletics coach and currently holds the part-time position of National Junior Coach (Pole Vault) for Athletics Australia.

Klaus Vieweg

Klaus Vieweg is Director of the Institute of Law and Technology, Chair for Civil Law, Law of Information Technology, Law of Technology, and Business Law at the Law School of Friedrich-Alexander University Erlangen-Nuremberg, Germany. He is Vice President of the German Sports Law Association, Honorary Vice President of the International Association of Sports Law (IASL), Co-founder of The Hague International Sports Law Academy (HISLAC) and Member of the German Court of Arbitration for Sports. His main areas of research are national, European and international facets of law of associations and federations, sports law, tort law, property law, law of technology and business law.
Contributors xiii

Peter von Allmen
Peter von Allmen is a Professor of Economics at Skidmore College, USA and currently serves as Department Chair. Previously, he served as a Fellow of the American Council on Education and is currently the President of the North American Association of Sports Economists. He received his BA from the College of Wooster and his PhD from Temple University. His central research focus is on the economics of sports. In addition to his primary research, he is the co-author of The Economics of Sports (with Michael Leeds), now in its fifth edition.

Andrew Weinbach
Andrew Weinbach is Professor at Wall College of Business, Coastal Carolina University, USA. He has published widely on major sporting codes in North America, with a particular emphasis on gambling behaviour.

Roger Welch
Roger Welch was a Principal Lecturer, and is now a Visiting Research Fellow, at the University of Portsmouth, UK. He has written extensively on collective and individual employment rights and on employment law in the context of professional sport. He is an original and ongoing co-author of Sports Law, published by Routledge, and the lead author of Employment Law, published by Pearson in its Living Law series.