Contributors

Andrzej Ancygier is Energy Expert at Climate Analytics and Lecturer in Environmental Politics at New York University, USA and Freie Universität in Berlin, Germany.

Mischa Bechberger holds a PhD as a political scientist and has worked for more than ten years in the field of promotion policy for renewable energies.

Pierre Bocquillon is a Lecturer in politics at the University of East Anglia, UK. He works on European politics and the politics of energy and climate change.

Simona Davidescu is a Research Associate at the EU–Asia Institute at ESSCA Angers and Associate Lecturer at the Department of Politics, University of York, UK.

Lorenzo Di Lucia is an Associate Researcher at Imperial College London, UK, working on an integrated approach to the governance of land use and bioenergy systems.

Maria Rosaria Di Nucci is a Senior Researcher at the Environmental Policy Research Centre, Freie Universität Berlin, Germany.

Helene Dyrhauge is an Associate Professor, Institute for Social Sciences and Business at Roskilde University, Denmark.

Gonzalo Escribano is Director of the Energy Programme at Elcano Royal Institute (Madrid), in Spain, and Professor of Economics at the Spanish Open University (UNED).

Aurélien Evrard is a Lecturer in Political Science at Université Sorbonne Nouvelle – Paris 3, France and Research Associate at Sciences Po, Centre d’Études Européennes (CEE), France.

Jenny Fairbrass is Senior Lecturer in Business and Management at the Norwich Business School of the University of East Anglia, UK. Co-convenor of the University Association for Contemporary European Studies Collaborative Research Network (UACES CRN) on the European Energy Policy.
Contributors

Rosa Fernandez is Senior Lecturer and Programme Leader in Economics at the University of Chester, UK.

Rainer Hinrichs-Rahlwes has a leading role at European Renewable Energies Federation (EREF).

Bernd Hirschl is head of the Department on Sustainable Energy and Climate Protection at the Institute for Ecological Economy Research (IÖW) in Berlin and Professor at the Brandenburg University of Technology Cottbus-Senftenberg, Germany.

Ralitsa Hiteva is a Research Fellow at the Science Policy Research Unit at the University of Sussex, UK and a member of the Sussex Energy Group. Ralitsa works on infrastructure governance and policy, business model innovation and environmental governance.

Thomas Hoppe is Associate Professor within the faculty of Technology, Policy and Management (TPM) at Delft University of Technology, the Netherlands.

Karolina Jankowska is project manager and editor of a daily newsletter on media coverage of energy policy and energy transition by the Sunbeam GmbH in Berlin, Germany. She has also worked as a researcher, scientific advisor, consultant and lecturer. She holds a PhD as a political scientist.

Helge Jörgens is a Visiting Professor at ISCTE-Instituto Universitário de Lisboa, Portugal, and Senior Lecturer in the Department of Political and Social Sciences of the Freie Universität Berlin, Germany.

Tomas Maltby is Lecturer in International Politics in the Department of Political Economy at King’s College London, UK.

Dörte Ohlhorst is Deputy Managing Director at the Environmental Policy Research Centre, Freie Universität Berlin, Germany.

Eva Öller is a PhD candidate at the Environmental Policy Research Center, Freie Universität Berlin, Germany.

Daniele Russolillo is Programme Manager of Fondazione per l’Ambiente – Turin School of Local Regulation, Italy, working on sustainable energy policies and economic regulation of local public services.

Israel Solorio is Associate Professor of Public Administration at the National Autonomous University of Mexico. Co-convenor of the University Association for Contemporary European Studies Collaborative Research Network (UACES CRN) on the European Energy Policy.
A guide to EU renewable energy policy

Ellen van Bueren is Professor of Urban Development Management at Delft University of Technology and Principal Investigator at the Institute for Advanced Metropolitan Solutions (AMS) in Amsterdam, the Netherlands.

Thomas Vogelpohl is a trained political scientist, who works as postdoctoral researcher at the FernUniversität in Hagen, Germany. His key research area is the analysis of environmental, energy and climate policies, with a special focus on German and European biofuels policy.