
Contributors

Wolfgang Alschner is an Assistant Professor at the University of Ottawa's Faculty of Law and a former post-doctoral researcher at the Graduate Institute of International and Development Studies in Geneva and the World Trade Institute in Bern. He worked for UNCTAD's International Investment Agreements Section as a consultant for several years and has published in peer-reviewed journals on WTO law, regionalism, as well as investment law and arbitration. His current research focuses on the empirical and computational analysis of international economic law. Wolfgang holds a PhD in International Law and a Master of Law from Stanford Law School.

Fabian Bohnenberger is a doctoral researcher at the Department of European and International Studies, King's College London. He holds a Master of Public Policy from the Hertie School of Governance and is a member of the working group on trade policy at the Friedrich Ebert Foundation. His research examines the political economy of global trade with a particular focus on the constitutional role of ideas and expertise in the world trade system, delegation and agency in international organisations, and the democratic legitimization of transnational governance.

Ruth Buchanan is Professor of Law at Osgoode Hall Law School in Toronto, Canada, and a Senior Fellow at Melbourne Law School. An interdisciplinary legal scholar whose work spans critical legal theory, sociology of law, and cultural legal studies, Professor Buchanan is a co-editor of Law in Transition: Human Rights, Development and Transitional Justice (with Peer Zumbansen, Hart 2014) and Reading Modern Law: Critical Methodologies and Sovereign Formations (Routledge 2012, with Sundhya Pahuja and Stewart Motha). Her current research project is a study of the visual mechanisms through which knowledge about development is produced and disseminated by international institutions.

Kimberley Byers holds an MA in International Development and received a Juris Doctor from Osgoode Hall Law School. She has worked on international development projects in South Asia, West Africa, and the Caribbean with a focus on fundamental human rights, gender equality, and justice reform. She currently works in the Department of Justice, Government of Canada.

Sungjoon Cho joined the IIT Chicago-Kent faculty in 2003 and teaches courses in international law, international trade law, international business transactions, and comparative law. From 1994 to 1996, Professor Cho represented the government of the Republic of Korea in negotiations under the World Trade Organization (WTO) and the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD). In 2002, he received his S.J.D. (Doctor of Juridical Science) degree from Harvard Law School. Professor Cho's works have been selected for the Stanford/Yale Junior Faculty Forum twice (2007 and 2008). His new book, The Social Foundations of World Trade: Norms, Community, and Constitution, was published by Cambridge University Press in 2015.

Deval Desai is a Postdoctoral Research Fellow at the Hirschman Centre on Democracy at the Graduate Institute, Geneva, Switzerland, and Fellow-in-Residence at the Institute for Global Law and Policy, Harvard Law School. He also worked for several years as a Justice, Conflict, and Governance Specialist at the World Bank. He researches legal reform, global governance, expertise, and ignorance. He has published on these in the Annual Review of Law and Social Science, Humanity, Development and Change, and the Journal of Development Studies.

Shai Dothan is an Associate Professor of International and Public Law at the University of Copenhagen Faculty of Law, affiliated with iCourts – the Centre of Excellence for International Courts. He received his PhD, LLM, and LLB from Tel Aviv University. Before coming to Copenhagen, Shai was a post-doctoral fellow at the University of Chicago, the Hebrew University, and Tel Aviv University, as well as a fellow at Yale University and the Max Planck Institute in Heidelberg. He is the author of Reputation and Judicial Tactics: A Theory of National and International Courts (CUP 2015; paperback 2016).

Jeffrey L. Dunoff is Laura H. Carnell Professor at Temple University Beasley School of Law. His research and writing focus on public international law, international courts, international organizations, international regulatory regimes, including international trade law, and interdisciplinary approaches to international law. His publications include Interdisciplinary Perspectives on International Law and International Relations: The State of the Art (co-edited with Mark A. Pollack, CUP 2012), and Ruling the World?: Constitutionalism, International Law, and Global Governance (co-edited with Joel P. Trachtman, CUP 2009). He is currently working with Mark Pollack on an interdisciplinary research project on international judicial practices.

Sabine Frerichs is Professor of Economic Sociology at the Vienna University of Economics and Business. Previously she was Assistant Professor at the Law Faculty of the University of Helsinki. She holds a PhD degree in Sociology from the University of Bamberg. Her main research fields are sociological theory, economic sociology, sociology of law, and European integration. In her recent work, she focused on the theoretical foundations and critical potential of an economic sociology of law. Her publications include 'The Law of Market Society: A Sociology of International Economic Law and Beyond' (2012/13) FYBIL 173–237, 'Unravelling the European Community of Debt' (2017) ELJ 720–868, and 'Transnational Law and Economic Sociology' in Peer Zumbansen (ed.), Oxford Handbook of Transnational Law (OUP forthcoming).

Bryant G. Garth is Chancellor's Professor at the University California-Irvine School of Law, where he has been since 2012. His scholarship focuses on the legal profession, the sociology of law, and globalization. His three major books on law and globalization, co-authored with Yves Dezalay and published by the University of Chicago Press, are Dealing in Virtue (1996), The Internationalization of Palace Wars (2002) and Asian Legal Revivals (2010). He served as co-editor of the Journal of Legal Education from 2011–14. He is also on the Executive Coordinating Committee of the 'After the J.D.' project, the first longitudinal study of the US legal profession.

Moshe Hirsch is the Von Hofmannsthal Professor of Law at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem and Co-director of the International Law Forum at the Hebrew University Law

Faculty. His publications include Invitation to the Sociology of International Law (OUP 2015); ‘The Sociology of International Investment Law’, in Z. Douglas, J. Pauwelyn, and J. E. Viñuales (eds), The Foundations of International Investment Law: Bringing Theory into Practice (OUP 2014); ‘Explaining Compliance and Non-compliance with ICSID Awards: The Argentine Case Study and a Multiple Theoretical Approach’ 19(3) (2016) Journal of International Economic Law 681–706; and ‘The Sociology of International Law’ 55(4) (2005) University of Toronto Law Journal.

Rick James holds a BA in Economics (Simon Frazer University) and a MBA in Finance (Helsinki School of Economics). After two decades of work in banking and financial consulting, his interest turned to intellectual property rights. After gaining a Diploma in Law on Intellectual Property (Queen Mary University of London), he subsequently enrolled in the Doctoral Studies Programme at the Law Faculty of the University of Helsinki. His doctoral dissertation Correlated Intellectual Property Rights: A New Foundation for IP Law provides a normative solution for a problem that Rick encountered in his consulting work: small technology companies could not monetize even reasonable intellectual property claims against multinational corporations which countered any ‘patent hold-up’ with strategies of protracted litigation.

Christian Joerges is Professor of Law and Society at the Hertie School of Governance. His research focuses on economic ordering through law at the national level, and on European integration and globalization. His current projects include the European crisis and transnational trade governance. He is also a Co-director of the Centre of European Law and Politics at the University of Bremen. Until 2007, he held the Chair for European Economic Law at the European University Institute Florence. He was a Visiting Professor in the Faculty of Legal Science at the University of Trento, the University of Toronto Faculty of Law, the Hauser Global Law School at New York University, Columbia Law School, and the Birkbeck College of Law, University of London. He has been a fellow at the Institutes for Advanced Study in Berlin and Wassenaar, NL. In 2009 he was awarded an honorary doctorate from the University of Fribourg.

Nicolas Lamp is an Assistant Professor at the Faculty of Law at Queen’s University. Prior to joining Queen’s, he worked as a Dispute Settlement Lawyer at the Appellate Body Secretariat of the WTO, where he advised the Members of the Appellate Body on legal issues arising in appellate proceedings under the WTO’s dispute settlement mechanism. He holds an LLM and a PhD in Law from the London School of Economics and Political Science, as well as a BA and MA from the Universities of Dresden and Bremen. His research focuses on international trade law-making and adjudication.

Andrew Lang joined the Edinburgh School of Law in 2017 as the Chair of International Law and Global Governance. He is an expert in Public International Law, with a specialty in International Economic Law. He has a combined BA/LLB from the University of Sydney, and his PhD is from the University of Cambridge. From 2004–6, Professor Lang was a Junior Research Fellow at Trinity Hall, University of Cambridge, before teaching at the London School of Economics and Political Science from 2006 to 2017.

Mikael Rask Madsen is the founder and Director of iCourts, The Danish National Research Foundation’s Centre of Excellence for International Courts, Professor of European Law and Integration at the University of Copenhagen, and member of the Danish Royal Academy of Sciences and Letters. Trained as a lawyer, he wrote his doctoral dissertation at L'École des Hautes Études en Sciences Sociales, Paris, where he worked with leading sociologists of law and globalization. He has helped pioneer the sociology of international law, notably by empirical studies of processes of legal globalization. He is currently directing a systematic empirical exploration of the causes and consequences of the proliferation of international courts, which includes field-work on three continents. He is the author of numerous books and articles.

Kristina Mansveld received her JD from Osgoode Hall Law School in 2016 and is currently clerking at the British Columbia Court of Appeal. Her research interests include historical and present intersections of colonial property law and indigenous legal traditions, and comparative approaches to gender-based refugee status determination. When not thinking about the law, she is happiest on an adventure in the mountains.

Gregory Messenger is Senior Lecturer in Law at the University of Liverpool where he teaches world trade law and public law. He was previously Junior Research Fellow in Law at The Queen's College, Oxford where he wrote his monograph The Development of World Trade Organization Law: Examining Change in International Law (OUP 2016). He has taught public international law, world trade law, and international investment law at the Universities of Oxford and Durham as well as courses on English law at the University of Granada. His research examines conceptual issues arising from the development and application of international law. His current research interests are principally in the practice of international institutions (particularly those of world trade), philosophical and sociological approaches to international law broadly conceived, and the relationship between systemic challenges in public health and commodities regulation and different discrete legal regimes in international law.

Mark A. Pollack is Professor of Political Science and Law, Jean Monnet Chair, and Director of Global Studies at Temple University, where he conducts research on international law and international relations and on the European Union. He has published widely on these subjects, including most recently Interdisciplinary Perspectives on International Law and International Relations: The State of the Art (co-edited with Jeffrey L. Dunoff, CUP 2013), and 'Who Supports International Law, and Why? The United States, the European Union, and the International Legal Order', a special issue of the International Journal of Constitutional Law (13(4), 2015). He is currently working on a project, with Jeffrey L. Dunoff, on international judicial practices.

Sergio Puig is an Associate Professor of Law at University of Arizona in Tucson. His main academic interests include topics related to international economic law, arbitration, law and society, and indigenous rights. Prior to academia, Sergio worked at the World Bank Group and ICSID, and practised in leading firms in Mexico City and Washington, DC. Sergio attended UNAM and received a law degree from ITAM in Mexico. He earned a Masters in International and Socio-Legal Studies (JSM) and a doctoral degree (JSD) in International Economic Law at Stanford Law School in the USA. His main publications are available in SSRN.

Galit A. Sarfaty holds a Canada Research Chair in Global Economic Governance and is an Associate Professor with tenure at the Allard School of Law at the University of British Columbia. She holds a JD from Yale Law School, a PhD and MA in Anthropology from the University of Chicago, and an AB summa cum laude from Harvard University. Professor Sarfaty's research bridges public and private international law and has focused on the convergence of economic globalization with human rights. Her research has focused on such major international economic organizations as the World Bank, which was the subject of her book Values in Translation: Human Rights and the Culture of the World Bank (Stanford University Press 2012). Professor Sarfaty's recent research has appeared in leading law reviews including the American Journal of International Law, Harvard International Law Journal, Virginia Journal of International Law, and the Stanford Journal of International Law.

David Schneiderman is Professor of Law and Political Science (courtesy) at the University of Toronto where he teaches and writes in the areas of constitutional law and on international investment law. He is the author of over 80 articles and book chapters and also the author or editor of 12 books, including Constitutionalizing Economic Globalization: Investment Rules and Democracy's Promise (CUP 2008), Resisting Economic Globalization: Critical Theory and International Investment Law (Palgrave Macmillan 2013) and, most recently, Red, White and Kind of Blue? The Conservatives and the Americanization of Canadian Constitutional Culture (University of Toronto Press 2015).

Wouter G. Werner is professor of Public International Law at the Vrije Universiteit, Amsterdam, and co-director of the Centre for the Politics of Transnational Law. His research focuses on the sociology of international law, cinematic representations of international law, and the logic of repetition in international legal argument.