

Acknowledgments

All chapters of this edited volume were initially prepared for an international conference on the Changes in the Public Administration and the Welfare State – Comparative Analyses, held at the University of Potsdam in December 2012. The conference was funded by the symposium program German–Italian Dialogs of the German Academic Exchange Service (DAAD), which has the objective to support newly formed cooperation between German and Italian and other European universities. As the organizers of this conference and the editors of this edited volume we would like to take the opportunity to thank the DAAD for their support which has allowed us not only to bring together a critical number of European researchers being interested in marketized and managerialized welfare governance, but also to publish the results of this conference and make them accessible for the international research community.
