
Acknowledgments

Chapter 1

Thijs ten Raa, the editor of this Handbook, is grateful to Professor Wassily Leontief to whom he was research assistant at New York University. Professor Leontief shaped the field and Thijs ten Raa dedicates the Handbook to his memory. He also wishes to remember the lesson of his German, later Dutch, mother Eva Sachs: “Lern – the only things that cannot be taken from you are in your head.”

Chapter 2

Douglas S. Meade is grateful to Anne Carter for providing extensive written recollections of HERP working with Leontief, and to Clopper Almon for a wealth of information provided in personal interviews.

Chapter 4

José M. Rueda-Cantuche is licensed as the author of Chapter 4 by the Institute of Prospective Technological Studies of the Joint Research Centre, European Commission; © European Union (2014).

Chapter 7

Giovanni Russo and Laura Chies gratefully acknowledge comments by an anonymous referee, which substantially improved the quality of the chapter.

Chapter 8

Bart Los would like to thank Erik Dietzenbacher, Robert Stehrer, Marcel Timmer and Gaaitzen de Vries for many stimulating discussions, which provided him with many insights that have been expressed in this chapter. Furthermore, he is grateful to the editor of this Handbook, Thijs ten Raa, for giving him the opportunity to contribute. An anonymous referee provided useful comments.

Chapter 12

Umed Temursho (formerly Temurshoev) is licensed as the author of Chapter 12 by the Institute of Prospective Technological Studies of the Joint Research Centre, European Commission; © European Union (2014). He is grateful to Thijs ten Raa for his constructive assessment and suggestions that largely improved the presentation of the whole material. His chapter has also benefitted from remarks received from Randall Jackson, Michael Lahr, Ronald Miller, Glen Peters, João Rodrigues and José M. Rueda-Cantucho. The author is particularly thankful to Geoffrey Hewings for his numerous valuable comments and suggestions.
