Contributors

David Bailey is Senior Lecturer in Politics at the University of Birmingham, United Kingdom. His research focuses on the critical political economy and contestation of European capitalism. Recent publications appear in Near Futures Online, New Political Economy and Socio-Economic Review. He is currently writing a book, Beyond Defeat and Austerity: Disrupting (the Critical Political Economy of) Neoliberal Europe, co-authored with Mónica Clua-Losada, Nikolai Huke and Olatz Ribera-Almandoz, on new patterns of resistance during the European crisis (forthcoming with Routledge).

Eduardo Barberis is Researcher in Regional and Environmental Sociology at the University of Urbino Carlo Bo, Italy, where he lectures on immigration policy and urban sociology and coordinates the Centre for Applied Transcultural Research. His research interests include the territorial dimension of social policy and exclusion; street-level bureaucracy and the accessibility of welfare; immigrants’ incorporation and discrimination. On these issues he has been carrying out comparative research. Among his recent works, he edited in 2015 a special issue of Sociologica – Italian Journal of Sociology online on ‘Rescaling immigration paths: emerging settlement patterns beyond gateway cities’ (co-edited with E. Pavolini).

Daniel Béland is the Canada Research Chair in Public Policy (Tier 1) and a Professor at the Johnson Shoyama Graduate School of Public Policy, University of Saskatchewan campus, Canada. A specialist of fiscal and social policy in comparative perspective, he has published a dozen books and more than 100 peer-reviewed articles in scholarly journals. Recent books include Obamacare Wars: Federalism, State Politics, and the Affordable Care Act (University Press of Kansas, 2016; with Philip Rocco and Alex Waddan); and Welfare Reform in Canada: Provincial Social Assistance in Comparative Perspective (University of Toronto Press, 2015; co-edited with Pierre-Marc Daigneault). For more information see www.danielbeland.org.

Anette Borchorst is a political scientist and Professor in Research in gender, politics and welfare states at the Department of Political Science, Aalborg University (AAU), Denmark. She is currently the director of the GRIP project on gender policy regimes, which include analysis on anti-discrimination, judicialization and the European Union (EU). She has published extensively on welfare states and social and gender equality policies, often from a comparative perspective. Publications include: ‘Gender and state’, in Brinkner (ed.), Political Sociology, Copenhagen: Hans Reitzel, 2013; ‘EU gender and diversity policies and European public sphere’ (with Monika Mokre), in Siim and Mokre (eds), Intersections of Gender and Diversity in the European Public Sphere, Palgrave, 2013; ‘Institutionalising Intersectionality in the Nordic Countries? Anti-discrimination and equality in Denmark, Finland, Norway and Sweden’ (with Lenita Freidenvall, Johanna Kantola, Liza Reisel and Mari Teigen), in Krizan, Skjeie and Squires (eds), Institutionalising Intersectionality: The Changing Nature of European Equality Regime, Palgrave Macmillan, 2012.
Cecilia Bruzelius is a doctoral researcher in the Department of Social Policy and Intervention, University of Oxford, United Kingdom. Her doctoral research explores how EU social citizenship is shaped at the local level. Parallel to this she has contributed to an EU-funded research project on barriers to EU citizenship (bEUcitizen). More broadly, her research interests are in borders of welfare, social citizenship, and social Europe.

Daniel Clegg is Senior Lecturer in Social Policy in the School of Social and Political Science, University of Edinburgh, United Kingdom. His research interests are in the comparative analysis of labour market policies and social security provisions for people of working age, especially in the European context. His recent publications include ‘Convergence from below? The reform of minimum income protection in France and the UK’ (Journal of International and Comparative Social Policy, 2014), ‘The demise of tax credits’ (Political Quarterly, 2015) and ‘Comparative social policy analysis and active labour market policy: putting quality before quantity’ (Journal of Social Policy, 2016, with Jochen Clasen and Alexander Goerne).

Mary Daly is Professor of Sociology and Social Policy at the Department of Social Policy and Intervention at the University of Oxford, United Kingdom. Formerly she was a professor at Queen’s University Belfast. Among the fields on which she has published are comparative social policy, with a special interest in EU social policy, poverty, care, gender, family and labour market. Much of her work is comparative, in a European and international context.

Caroline de la Porte is Professor at the Department of Business and Politics, Copenhagen Business School (CBS), Denmark. Prior to joining CBS, Caroline was Associate Professor at Roskilde University (2013–15) and at the University of Southern Denmark (2007–13). She holds a PhD from the European University Institute in Italy, and an MSc and BSc from Université Catholique de Louvain, Belgium. Caroline’s research focuses on comparative welfare state reform, the Nordic welfare model, the Europeanization of welfare states. She is a leading scholar on EU governance and public policy. Recent publications include ‘A new era of European Integration? Governance of labour market and social policy since the sovereign debt crisis’, Comparative European Politics, 13 (1) (with Elke Heins) and ‘Altered Europeanization of pension reform during the Great Recession: Denmark and Italy compared’, West European Politics (with David Natali). Caroline has wide experience in teaching at all levels, uses blended learning in teaching and has contributed to the development of several Master’s programmes.

Valeria Fargion is Jean Monnet Chair of ‘European Integration Politics’ and co-ordinator of the European Studies Master’s programme at the University of Florence, School of...
Political Science, Italy. She was the Co-Chair of ESPANET – Italy from 2008 to 2014 and is currently the editor-in-chief of its official journal Politiche Sociali/Social Policies. She served for two terms as elective member for the International Sociological Association (ISA) RC 19 Executive Board. From 2008 to 2010, she acted as national expert for the European Commission (Directorate-General, DG, for Employment) in the context of the open method of coordination (OMC) on pensions, health and long-term care. She has participated in a variety of international research projects, and has published widely on the Italian Welfare State in a historical, and a comparative perspective, social care services in Europe, and territorial politics with particular reference to new social risks and European structural funds. Over the most recent years her research interests shifted to global social policy and EU development co-operation in Africa. Within this context, she organized in Florence the international conference ‘Social Policy in a Globalizing World: Developing a North–South Dialogue’ which hosted 140 social policy scholars from all over the world (www.rc19.unifi.it). Her latest publications include Alle radici del welfare all’italiana. Origini e futuro di un modello sociale squilibrato with Maurizio Ferrera and Matteo Jessoula (Marsilio, 2012) and ‘The European Union as a global social policy actor – discourse and policy practice’ (with M. Mayer), in A. Kaash and K. Martens (eds) Actors and Agency in Global Social Governance, Oxford University Press, 2015.

Bent Greve is Professor in Social Science with an emphasis on welfare state analysis at the University of Roskilde, Denmark. His research interest focuses on the welfare state, and social and labour market policy, often from a comparative perspective. He has published extensively on social and labour market policy, social security, tax expenditures, public sector expenditures and financing of the welfare state. He is regional and special issues editor of Social Policy & Administration.

Elke Heins is Lecturer in Social Policy at the University of Edinburgh, United Kingdom. Her research mainly focuses on labour market and social policy reform in comparative and European perspective. She is co-editor of the book The Sovereign Debt Crisis, the EU and Welfare State Reform (Palgrave Macmillan, with Caroline de la Porte). Recent publications in peer-reviewed journals such as Comparative European Politics, Socio-Economic Review, European Journal of Industrial Relations and Journal of Social Policy dealt with the impact of EU governance reform on member state social policies, the concept of flexibility, the involvement of trade unions and third sector organizations in welfare policy delivery and the privatization of welfare services.

Anton Hemerijck joined the European University Institute (EUI) in January 2017 as Professor of Political Science and Sociology, taking leave of absence from the Vrije Universiteit Amsterdam. Trained as an economist at Tilburg University in the Netherlands, he took his doctorate from Oxford University in Social Studies in 1993. At the Vrije Universiteit he was Dean of the Faculty of the Social Sciences between 2009 and 2014, while also employed as Professor of Institutional Policy Analysis in the Department of Public Administration and Political Science. Between 2013 and 2017, he was nominated Centennial Professor of Social Policy at the London School of Economics and Political Science. Prior to his return to academia, between 2001 and 2009, he directed the Scientific Council for Government Policy (WRR), the principle think tank in the Netherlands, while holding a professorship in Comparative European Social Policy at the Erasmus University Rotterdam. Between 1996 and 2000 he was senior researcher at the Max-Planck-Institute for the Study of Societies in Cologne, working with Fritz Scharpf and Vivien Schmidt on the project Welfare and Work in the Open Economy, published in 2000 with Oxford University Press. Professor Hemerijck has held numerous visiting appointments, ranging from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology to the University of Lisbon, the University of Antwerp, the Collegio Carlo Alberto of Turin University and the EUI (1996, 1998).

For over two decades, Professor Hemerijck has written extensively on welfare reform across Europe, including the impact of European Union social, employment and economic policy coordination, from the perspective of the comparative political institutionalism. Important book publications include A Dutch Miracle with Jelle Visser (Amsterdam University Press, 1997), The Future of Social Europe with Maurizio Ferrera and Martin Rhodes (CErTA Press Lisbon, 2000) and Why We Need a New Welfare State with Gösta Esping-Andersen, Duncan Gallie and John Myles (Oxford University Press, 2002). His monograph Changing Welfare States (Oxford University Press, 2013) received numerous positive reviews (see the Oxford University Press website). His latest edited volume, The Uses of Social Investment, was published with Oxford University Press in 2017.

Bjørn Hvinden is Professor in Sociology and Head of Research at NOVA – Norwegian Social Research, an institute at the Oslo and Akershus University College of Applied Sciences, Norway. His main research interests are comparative and European social policy, social citizenship, climate change and welfare, disability, poverty and job insecurity.

Bob Jessop is Distinguished Professor of Sociology and Co-Director of the Cultural Political Economy Research Centre at Lancaster University, United Kingdom. He is best known for his contributions to state theory and critical political economy, including welfare state restructuring and, more recently, for work in critical governance studies. In the past five years he has also published extensively on financial crises and crises of crisis-management, neoliberalism, and the state of austerity. His most recent book is The State: Past, Present, Future (Polity, 2015). His personal website provides access to an extensive archive of his work: http://www.bobjessop.org.

Yuri Kazepov has been a Professor of International Urban Sociology and Compared Welfare Systems at the University of Vienna, Austria, since March 2015. Previously he had been teaching at the University of Urbino, Italy. He has been Jean Monet Fellow at the European University Institute (1995–96), Visiting Professor at the University of Bremen, Lund, Växjö, Leuven, and ARC Distinguished Fellow at the Graduate Center CUNY. He is a founding member of the Network for European Social Policy Analysis (ESPAnet) and the immediate-past president of RC21, the Research Committee on Urban and Regional development of the International Sociological Association. His fields of interest are urban governance and citizenship, social policies in comparative perspective. On these issues he has been carrying out comparative research and evaluation activities for the European Commission (DG Research, DG Culture, DG Employment) and many national agencies (NWO, Nicis, FTSE, CNR). He has been international coordinator of the following EU projects: EUREX (Minerva) and the E-Urbs (Virtual Campus) projects and the national partner of the following projects: URBEX (FP4), GOETE (FP5), IMPROVE, ISPIRES, DIVERCITIES, SEFIRA (FP7), YOUNG ADULLLT (H2020).

Patricia Kennett is Professor in Comparative and International Policy Studies, and Director of Research at the School for Policy Studies, University of Bristol, United Kingdom. Her research interests intersect the fields of social policy and urban and transnational studies. Currently, she is working on exploring the interrelated dynamics of scale, power and policy and embedding global and transnational dynamics within the everyday life of places and people, drawing on comparative, historical and qualitative methods. Her geographical focus is on East Asia and Europe. Recent publications include A Handbook of Comparative Social Policy, 2nd edition (editor, Edward Elgar, 2013), an edited collection Women and Housing: An International Analysis (with Chan, Kam Wah, Routledge, 2010), as well as numerous journal articles. She is currently co-editor of the Journal of Social Policy.

Borbála Kovács was visiting faculty at the Department of Political Science, Central European University (CEU), Budapest, Hungary between 2013 and 2017. Her research focuses on family policy analysis, informality and welfare state change and the sociology of childcare in Central and Eastern Europe (with a focus on Romania). Most recently she has published articles in European Societies, the Cambridge Journal of Regions, Economy and Society and the International Journal of Sociology and Social Policy. She has also edited special issues for the Journal of Contemporary Central and Eastern Europe and the Journal of Eurasian Studies. Her first book, theorising the making of childcare arrangements and the role of family policy instruments for micro-level analysis, is planned for 2018 (Palgrave Macmillan).

Jon Kvist is Professor of European Public Policies and Welfare Studies at the Department of Social Science and Business, Roskilde University, Denmark. He was Professor from 2008 to 2014 at the Centre for Welfare State Research (CWS) at the University of Southern Denmark, Odense, and has also worked at SFI – the Danish National Institute of Social Research. Kvist has published widely on the Nordic welfare model, Europeanization and set-theoretic methods. He has chaired international research projects and been a member of the Norwegian Research Councils’ welfare, work and migration programme, the Scottish government working group on welfare and the Danish government Commission on Unemployment Insurance, and is national coordinator in the European Commission’s new Expert Network on Social Policy. Recent publications include ‘A framework for social investment strategies: integrating generational, life course and gender perspectives in the EU social investment strategy’ (Comparative European Politics, 2015), ‘Three worlds of welfare capitalism: the making of a classic’ (co-author, Journal of European Social Policy) and Changing Social Equality: The Nordic Welfare Model in the 21st Century (co-editor, 2012). See www.jonkvist.com for more.

Noemi Lendvai-Bainton is Senior Lecturer in Comparative Public Policy at the School for Policy Studies, University of Bristol, United Kingdom. Her research interests include the transformation and Europeanisation of social policy in Central Eastern Europe and the transnationalisation of social policy in South East Europe. Her theoretical work focuses on critical policy studies most recently explored in her recent co-authored book Making Policy Move: Towards a Politics of Translation and Assemblage (Policy Press, 2015) co-authored with John Clarke, Dave Bainton and Paul Stubbs. She has also published and carried out research on topics such as variegated austerity capitalism in Eastern Europe, anthropology of public policy, postcolonial studies, theories of translation and critical approaches to comparative social policy.

Traute Meyer is Professor of Social Policy at the University of Southampton, United Kingdom. Her research has focused on change in European welfare systems and its impact on citizens; since 2007 she has been the editor for the Journal of European Social Policy. Recent publications include ‘The liberalisation of the German social model: public-private pension reform in Germany since 2001’, Journal of Social Policy, 2014, 43 (1) (with P. Bridgen) and ‘Free movement? The impact of legislation, benefit generosity and wages on the pensions of European migrants’, Population, Space and Place, 2013, 19 (6) (with P. Bridgen and C. Andow).

Tariq Modood is Professor of Sociology, Politics and Public Policy and the founding Director of the Centre for the Study of Ethnicity and Citizenship at the University of Bristol, United Kingdom. He is also the co-founder of the international journal Ethnicities. He was awarded an MBE for services to social sciences and ethnic relations in 2001, made a Fellow of the Academy of Social Sciences (UK) in 2004 and elected a Fellow of the British Academy in 2017. He served on the Commission on the Future of Multi-Ethnic Britain, the National Equality Panel and the Commission on Religion and Belief in British Public Life. His latest books include Multiculturalism: A Civic Idea (2nd edn, 2013) and, as co-editor, Multiculturalism Rethought (2015), Multiculturalism and Interculturalism: Debating the Dividing Lines (2016) and The Problem of Religious Diversity: European Problems, Asian Challenges (2017). His website is www.tariqmodood.com.

Jeremy Morris is an ethnographer of post-socialist societies and is Associate Professor of Global Studies at Aarhus University, Denmark. His research focuses on ‘actually lived experience’ in Russia and post-socialist states, particularly in relation to work, class and the informal economy. He has authored a number of books and articles including: Everyday Post-Socialism: Working-Class Life Strategies in the Russian Margins (Palgrave, 2016). He is the co-editor of New Media in New Eurasia (Routledge, 2015); The Informal Post-Socialist Economy: Embedded Practices and Livelihoods (Routledge, 2014) and Informal Economies in Post-Socialist Spaces: Practices, Institutions and Networks (Palgrave, 2015).

Brian Nolan is Director of the Employment, Equity and Growth Programme at the Institute for New Economic Thinking, Oxford Martin School, Professor of Social Policy at the Department of Social Policy and Intervention, and Senior Research Fellow at Nuffield College, University of Oxford, United Kingdom. His main areas of research are income inequality, poverty, and the economics of social policy. His publications include The Handbook of Economic Inequality (2008) co-edited with W. Salverda and T. Smeeding, Poverty and Deprivation in Europe (2011) co-authored with C.T. Whelan, The Great Recession and the Distribution of Household Income (2013), co-edited with S. Jenkins, A. Brandolini and J. Micklewright, and two co-edited volumes with
Contributors

W. Salverda et al., Changing Inequalities in Rich Countries: Analytical and Comparative Perspectives and Changing Inequalities and Societal Impacts in Rich Countries: Thirty Countries’ Experiences, all from Oxford University Press.

Klaus Petersen is Professor of Welfare History and Director of Centre for Welfare State Research, University of Southern Denmark. He is a specialist in Nordic welfare state history and has over the last years worked on social policy language and the relationship between war and social reforms. His more recent work includes: Danish Welfare History (published in Danish) vols 1–6 (University of Southern Denmark Press, 2010–15); and Analyzing Social Policy Language (Policy Press, 2014; co-edited with Daniel Béland). For more information see: www.sdu.dk/welfare.

Birgit Pfau-Effinger is Professor of Sociology and Research Director at the University of Hamburg, Germany and Professor in the Department of Political Science and Public Management of the University of Southern Denmark. Since January 2016 she has been a member of the Board of ESPAnet. Her main research interests include the relationship between cultural change and welfare state change; the role of culture and institutions for the explanation of cross-national differences in gender, care and the work–family relationship; diversity of development paths of gender cultures, welfare state policies and the work–family relationship, and the changing relationship between formal and informal work. She has published numerous articles in peer-reviewed, academic journals, as well as several books with leading English-language publishers. She has also had a leading role in several international research projects, which include DFG (German Science Foundation) and EU projects, the ESF Network GIER, the COST A15 Action and the EU Network of Excellence RECWOWE.

Femke Roosma is Assistant Professor in Sociology at the Department of Sociology at Tilburg University, the Netherlands and member of the City Council in Amsterdam. Her main research interests regard the social legitimacy of welfare states and the cross-national analysis of multiple dimensions of welfare attitudes.

Chiara Saraceno was Professor of Sociology at the University of Turin, Italy, until 2006, when she was appointed Research Professor at the Wissenschaftszentrum Berlin für Sozialforschung, Germany, for five years. Retired, she is honorary fellow at the Collegio Carlo Alberto, Turin. Her research topics concern comparative family, gender and intergenerational arrangements, comparative social policies, social inequalities and poverty. Among her publications are: Il Welfare (il Mulino, 2013), Coppie e famiglie. Non è questione di natura (Feltrinelli, 2013). ‘Three concurrent crises in welfare states in an Mi Ah Schoyen is a political scientist and researcher at NOV A – Norwegian Social Research, an institute at the Oslo and Akershus University College of Applied Sciences. Her research focuses on comparative welfare states, the implications of climate change for social policy, the distribution of resources across age groups and generations and the balance between state and family welfare.

Martin Schröder holds a Professorship for Economic Sociology at the University of Marburg, Germany. His research focuses on social inequality, welfare states, varieties of capitalism, the influence of morality on economic action, and life satisfaction. In 2013, he published the monograph Integrating Varieties of Capitalism and Welfare State Research: A Unified Typology of Capitalisms with Palgrave. In 2016, he published the article ‘How income inequality influences life satisfaction’ in the European Sociological Review and the article ‘Varieties of regulation: how to combine sectoral, regional and national levels’ in Regional Studies. He has also published on welfare regimes in Social Forces and the Journal of Social Policy.

Martin Seeleib-Kaiser is Professor of Comparative and Applied Public Policy at the Institute of Political Science of the Eberhard Karls University in Tübingen (Germany). Previously he held appointments at the University of Oxford, Duke University (North Carolina) and the University of Bremen (Germany). He has published widely, among others in American Sociological Review, Comparative Political Studies, Journal of Common Market Studies, Journal of European Social Policy, Politics and Society, Politische Vierteljahresschrift, Social Policy and Administration, Social Politics, West European Politics and Zeitschrift für Soziologie. His work has been translated into Chinese, Dutch, French, Italian and Korean.

Birte Siim is a political scientist and Professor in Gender Research in the Social Sciences, Department of Culture and Global Studies, Aalborg University (AAU), Denmark. She currently participates in the ‘Barriers to EUropean citizenship’ (bEUcitizen) project as the Danish coordinator for Gender and Generational Citizenship. It includes studies of immigration and Right-wing populism. She has published extensively on gender and democracy, citizenship, and the welfare state. Publications include: ‘Gender diversities – practicing intersectionality in the European Union’, Ethnicities, 2014, 14 (4) (with L. Rolandsen Agustin); ‘Political intersectionality and democratic politics in the European public sphere’, Politics & Gender, 2014, 10 (1); ‘Conflicts and negotia-
Contributors xvii

Manuel Souto-Otero is Professor of Social Sciences (Education Policy) at the School of Social Sciences, Cardiff University, United Kingdom. His main areas of interest are education policy analysis and evaluation – with a particular focus on internationalisation in education, European education policy-making, and the link between education and work. He obtained his DPhil from the University of Oxford. He has recently co-edited The Palgrave International Handbook of Higher Education Policy and Governance (Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan) with Jeroen Huisman, Harry de Boer and David D. Dill, and edited the book Evaluating European Education Policy-making: Privatization, Networks and the European Commission (Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan).

Ngai-Ling Sum is Reader in Cultural Political Economy and Co-Director of the Cultural Political Economy Research Centre at Lancaster University, United Kingdom. She is a member of the Department of Politics, Philosophy and Religious Studies and writes extensively in the area of cultural political economy, governmentality studies, and the political economy of East Asia. She is the co-author (with Bob Jessop) of Beyond the Regulation Approach: Putting the Capitalist Economy in its Place (Edward Elgar, 2006) and Towards a Cultural Political Economy: Putting Culture in its Place in Political Economy (Edward Elgar, 2013). She is currently preparing an introductory textbook on cultural political economy. Her homepage is www.lancaster.ac.uk/fass/ppr/profiles/Ngai-Ling-Sum/.

Wim van Oorschot is Professor of Social Policy at the Centre for Sociological Research (CeSO), University of Leuven, Belgium. His main research interests regard the EU – comparative analysis of the social legitimacy of welfare policies and their reforms. He is a member of the Questionnaire Design Teams that developed the Welfare Attitudes modules in European Social Survey (ESS) 2008 and ESS 2016.