

Contributors

Chris Alden is a Professor in International Relations at the LSE. He has conducted extensive field work across the Southern Africa region both on this topic and other areas. He has published widely on international politics and conflict in Southern Africa as well as work on Asia–Africa relations. He has previously taught at the University of Witwatersrand, and held research fellowships at the University of Tokyo, the Ecole Normale Supérieure and the University of Cambridge. His last publications include Foreign Policy Analysis: New Approaches (Routledge, 2012), ‘China and Africa: the relationship matures’ (Strategic Analysis, 2012) and Land, Liberation and Compromise in Southern Africa (Palgrave, 2009).

Elena Atanassova-Cornelis is a Lecturer in East Asian Politics at the School of Political and Social Sciences, Université Catholique de Louvain (UCL), and at the Department of Politics, University of Antwerp (UA), both in Belgium. She is also a visiting professor at the Brussels School of International Studies (BSIS) of the University of Kent, UK. She has lectured at the Lille Institute of Political Studies (Sciences Po Lille) in France and at Ghent University in Belgium. Her research interests and expertise include Japanese and Chinese foreign policies, cross-Taiwan Strait relations, US regional strategy in Asia, EU–Asia relations, and East Asian international politics with a special focus on security and regional cooperation. Recent articles have been published in Pacific Focus: Inha Journal of International Studies, East Asia: An International Quarterly and Asia-Pacific Review. She is co-editor (with Frans-Paul van der Putten) of Changing Security Dynamics in East Asia: A Post-US Regional Order in the Making? (Palgrave, 2014).

Laura Barber is the programme assistant for the Africa International Affairs Programme at the London School of Economics. She is a PhD candidate in International Relations at the London School of Economics. Her thesis topic concerns Chinese foreign policy towards Africa in the ‘going out’ era, with a particular focus on the evolution of China’s relations with Sudan and South Sudan. Previously she worked as a programme assistant at the United Nations’ University for Peace in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia. She has also worked as a research assistant for the East Asia Institute at the National University of Singapore.

Benjamin Barton is a PhD Candidate in War Studies at King's College London and Hong Kong University. He was previously a Research Assistant for the InBev-Baillet-Latour Chair of European Union–China Relations at the EU International Relations and Diplomacy Studies Department of the College of Europe in Bruges. He holds an MA in EU International Relations and Diplomacy Studies from the College of Europe, Bruges (2008–2009), and a BA in European Studies from the University of Sussex, Brighton (2004–2008). He also undertook Erasmus studies at the Institut d'Etudes Politiques (I.E.P) of Strasbourg, France (2006–2007). His fields of interests include EU–China–Africa relations; the EU's Mediterranean Policies and Politics; and the EU and international development.

Ummu Salma Bava is Professor of European Studies at the Jawaharlal Nehru University. She studied Politics (MA) International Relations and also obtained her PhD in European Studies at the Jawaharlal Nehru University. Her main research interests are European and South Asian Security and Politics; comparative regional integration – EU, SAARC and ASEAN; transatlantic relations and NATO; German politics and foreign policy; India–Europe and India–US relations; Indian foreign policy; international politics; and conflict resolution. Her latest publications include 'The Efficiency of the EU External Action and the EU–India Relationship' in M. Telo and F. Ponjaert (eds), The EU's Foreign Policy. What Kind of Power and Diplomatic Action? (Ashgate, 2013); 'Emerging Power Alliances in Perspective: IBSA, BRIC, BASIC' in Francis A. Kornegay and Lesley Masters (ed.), From BRIC to BRICS (Institute for Global Dialogue and Friedrich Ebert Stiftung, 2011), 'Regional Integration: Lessons for South Asia from Around the World' in R. Dossani, D. Sneider and V. Sood (eds), Does South Asia Exist?: Prospects for Regional Integration (Brookings, 2010) and 'India: Foreign Policy Strategy between Interests and Ideas' in D. Flemes (ed.), Regional Leadership in the Global System. Ideas, Interests and Strategies of Regional Powers (Ashgate, 2010). She is also the Director of the Jawaharlal Nehru Institute of Advanced Study (Jawaharlal Nehru University).

Fabienne Bossuyt is Assistant Professor at the Centre for EU Studies at Ghent University. Her research focus concerns EU external relations and policies. Her publications include articles in the European Foreign Affairs Review (2009, 2011 and 2013), European Journal of Contemporary Research (2013), European Integration online Papers (2013), Comparative European Politics (2014), Journal of Contingencies and Crisis Management (2014) and Democratization (2014). She is currently preparing a monograph on EU–Central Asia relations (forthcoming, Palgrave Macmillan).

Matthieu Burnay serves as Project Manager of the InBev-Baillet Latour EU–China Chair and is a Junior Researcher at the Leuven Centre for Global Governance Studies, University of Leuven. He is also the teaching assistant for the course ‘Chinese Law from a European Perspective’. In 2014–2015, he is an Associate Researcher at Beijing Normal University School of Law. He earned a BA in Political Science and a BA in Law from the University Saint Louis-Brussels. He then obtained a double MSc degree in International Affairs from Peking University and the London School of Economics. His main research interests include EU–China relations in global governance, China and the rule of law and Chinese foreign policy. In 2014, he received a Scientific Prize Gustave Boël – Sofina Fellowship from the King Baudouin Foundation. He has been a Guest Lecturer at the University of Göttingen, Seoul National University and the University Saint Louis-Brussels. His latest publications include articles that appeared in European Foreign Affairs Review, Belgian Review of International Law and La Revue Nouvelle, as well as several book chapters.

David Camroux is Senior Researcher and an Associate Professor at Sciences Po where he teaches on contemporary Southeast Asian society and politics, Asian regional integration and EU–Asia relations. He has also been a Visiting Professor at Korea University (Seoul) and, in January–April 2013, at the London School of Economics. He is the co-editor of the Journal of Current Southeast Asian Affairs. He studied for his first degree at the University of Sydney and his doctorate in Paris at the Sorbonne.

Ariane de Bellefroid holds a Masters degree in European Studies with a specialization in external relations, and a Masters degree in literature from the University of Louvain (UCL). She has been successively working at the Madariaga – College of Europe Foundation and at the European Commission (EuropeAid).

Jean-Christophe Defraigne holds an MSc in Economic History from the London School of Economics and a PhD in Economics from the University of Brussels. In 2003–2004, he was research fellow at the University of International Business and Economics of Beijing (Jing Mao Da Xue) working on EU–China economic relations and was a visiting professor at Zhejiang Da Xue in 2009–2011. He is currently Professor in Economics attached to the Institute for European Studies of Saint-Louis University, Brussels and visiting Professor at the Louvain School of Management, University of Louvain. His research focuses on long-term comparative analysis of regional integration processes (East Asia, Europe, Americas) and their links with the strategies of transnational corporations and technological changes; the history of technological change and industrial and trade policies in Europe, USA and East Asia (1870–2005); and the transition of the Chinese economy, East Asian integration and the rise of emerging economies and their effect on Europe.

Karima Fachqoul is a Doctoral Candidate at the University of Saint-Louis Brussels. She studied Law, Accountancy, Economics, Political Sciences and European Affairs and she obtained her BA in Corporate Law at EPHEC and her MA in European Studies at the University of Louvain (UCL) and the University of Saint-Louis Brussels. Her main research interests include European external policies and influence, relations with the emerging powers, and more specifically the comparison between the European presence and the contemporary Chinese penetration in the MENA region.

Bob Kabamba is Lecturer in Political Sciences at the Université de Liège. He studied Political Science and Public Administration and obtained his PhD in Political Science at the Université de Liège. His main research interests are comparative studies; prevention of and conflict management; the electoral systems and the processes of decentralization of states in transition or in post-conflict situations; international relations in Africa; and the Africa of the Great Lakes. His last publications include Optimaliser les processus électoraux en RDC: transparence et efficience démocratique (2010) and ‘Consolidation institutionnelle et démocratisation en RDC’ in Revue de la Faculté de Droit de l’Université de Liège (2010). He is also the director of the Cellule d’appui politologique en Afrique centrale (CAPAC) de l’Université de Liège and Guest Professor at the Butembo Catholic University in the RDC.

Thierry Pairault is socio-economist and sinologist. He is Directeur de recherche émérite at the French Centre national de la recherche scientifique and a member of the Centre d’études sur la Chine moderne et contemporaine at the École des Hautes Études en Sciences Sociales, where he teaches a seminar on Chinese economy with special focus on Sino-African economic relations. He has published numerous books and articles in learned journals on socio-economic issues related to China.

Clara Portela is Assistant Professor of Political Science at Singapore Management University and Hypo Tyrol Bank Guest Professor at the University of Innsbruck, Austria. She holds a PhD from the European University Institute in Florence and an MA from the Free University of Berlin. She is the author of the monograph European Union Sanctions and Foreign Policy (Routledge, 2010) and the recipient of the 2011 THESEUS Award for Promising Research in European Integration. Her research interests include EU–ASEAN relations and issues of international security such as sanctions and nuclear proliferation. She has held visiting positions with Carleton University, Canada, Hitotsubashi University, Japan, University of London, UK, Institut d’Etudes Politiques de Grenoble, France and the Australian National University, Australia.

Jivanta Schöttli is Postdoctoral Scholar and Lecturer at the Research Centre for Globalisation and Distributional Conflict, Heidelberg University, Germany and Associate Member of the South Asia Institute. She studied International Relations History and Economic History at the London School of Economics and obtained her PhD in Political Science at Heidelberg University. Her main research interests are political theory (leadership and institutions, liberalism, citizenship); international relations (foreign policy analysis and international politics of South Asia); and political economy (corruption, regulation and the corporate sector in India). Her latest publications include the co-edited volume, India in the Contemporary World: Polity, Economy and International Relations (Routledge, 2014), ‘India as a Global Security Actor’ in Mary Kaldor and Iavor Rangelov (eds), The Handbook of Global Security Policy (Wiley, 2014) and Strategy and Vision in Politics: Jawaharlal Nehru’s Policy Choices and the Designing of Political Institutions (Routledge, 2011).

Ronald Bruce St John graduated from Knox College with a BA in political science and the Graduate School of International Studies, University of Denver, with an MA and PhD in international relations. Following service in Vietnam as a Captain, Military Intelligence, he joined the marketing division of Caterpillar Inc., spending most of his 30-year career in Europe, Africa, the Middle East and Asia. He retired at the end of 2001 after a decade as a Strategic Planning and Commercial Manager. Dr St John was an affiliate professor at the Institute of International Studies, Bradley University in 1982–2006, lecturing and teaching a course on Middle East politics. In 1999–2001 he participated in the Proyecto Trinacional, a trilateral project (Bolivia, Chile and Peru) promoting economic development in the Atacama Desert. He was actively engaged in 2002 in the Palestinian Authority’s Land Corridor Project, sponsored by The Adam Smith Institute in London. He has been a frequent guest lecturer at the Diplomatic Academy of Peru since 1999. He has served as a consultant for a variety of Fortune 500 companies, US government agencies, National Geographic Magazine, World Book Encyclopedia, the Associated Press, Washington Post and The New York Times. He also served on the International Advisory Board of the Journal of Libyan Studies and The Atlantic Council Working Group on Libya. Working as an independent scholar, Dr St John has published 22 books and monographs and contributed to 23 others with a three-fold focus on Andean America, North Africa and the Middle East, and Southeast Asia. He has also authored more than 350 articles and reviews, including essays in the Dictionary of African Biography (2012), Oxford Islamic Studies Online (2013), Oxford Encyclopedia of Islam and Politics (2014), and The Middle East and North Africa 2015 (2014).

Gilles Verhulst worked at the European Commission and for the Belgian Ministry of Foreign affairs, taking part in the Berheim Foundation programme on Europe. He holds from University of Louvain (UCL) a Masters degree in Law and in European Studies with a specialization in external relations.

Wenjia Wang holds a BA from Beijing Normal University and a Masters degree in Political Science at the University of Louvain (UCL). She is currently pursuing PhD research in International Relations at UCL, focusing on China–ASEAN relations and the role of China in East Asian integration.

Katja Weber is Professor in the Sam Nunn School of International Affairs at Georgia Institute of Technology. She obtained her PhD in Political Science at the University of California in Los Angeles. Her main research interests are institution-building in Europe and the Asia-Pacific, varying interpretations of sovereignty, non-traditional security challenges, and German foreign policy. She is the author of Hierarchy Amidst Anarchy: Transaction Costs and Institutional Choice (SUNY Press, 2000), co-author (with Paul Kowert) of Cultures of Order: Leadership, Language, and Social Reconstruction in Germany and Japan (SUNY Press, 2007), and co-editor (with Michael Baun and Michael Smith) of Governing Europe's Neighborhood: Partners or Periphery? (Manchester University Press, 2007). She has also published a number of articles in the Journal of European Integration, Journal of European Public Policy, International Studies Quarterly, Journal of Politics, and Issues and Studies. During the fall of 2008 she was a Visiting Research Scholar at the Graduate School of Law & Politics at the University of Tokyo, and in November–December 2010, a Visiting Fellow at the EU Center at the National University of Singapore/Nanyang Technological University.

Sophie Wintgens is currently a Post-Doctoral Fellow at the Political Observatory of Latin America and the Caribbean of the Centre for International Studies and Research (OPALC-CERI, Sciences Po Paris, France). She is also a Lecturer in Political Science and International Relations at the Political Science Department and a Researcher at the Centre for International Relations Studies (CEFIR) of the University of Liège (ULg, Belgium). She obtained her PhD in Political Science at the ULg and the University of Saint-Louis-Bruxelles in 2014. Supervised by the Professors Sebastian Santander and Jean-Christophe Defraigne, her thesis focused on ‘China’s strategy for growth on the world stage: the case study of its penetration into Latin America’. Recent publications include (as a writer) ‘Le “péril jaune” en RDC: mythe ou réalité?’ in S. Santander (ed.), L’Afrique, nouveau terrain de jeu des émergents (Karthala, 2014), ‘Biotechnologies et coopération Sud-Sud. Les défis liés aux OGM dans la politique brésilienne d’exportation de produits agricoles en Chine’, Études internationales, 44(4) (2013), ‘UE-Chine: “en-jeu” ou hors-jeu?’ in S. Santander (ed.), Puissances émergentes: un défi pour l’Europe? (Ellipses, 2012), and (as a co-editor) Acteurs émergents. Perspectives pour la gouvernance mondiale (Presses Universitaires de Liège, 2013), and La puissance. Débat autour des jeux et enjeux du pouvoir (Editions de l’Université de Liège, 2011).

Jan Wouters is Jean Monnet Chair ad personam EU and Global Governance, Full Professor of International Law and International Organizations, and founding Director of the Institute for International Law and of the Leuven Centre for Global Governance Studies, an interdisciplinary centre of excellence, at the University of Leuven (KU Leuven). In Leuven, he teaches public international law, law of international organizations, the law of the World Trade Organization, space law and international humanitarian law. As Visiting Professor at Sciences Po (Paris), Luiss University (Rome) and the College of Europe (Bruges) he teaches EU external relations law. He is a Member of the Royal Academy of Belgium for Sciences and Arts, is President of the United Nations Association Flanders Belgium, and practises law as Of Counsel at Linklaters, Brussels. He is Editor of the International Encyclopedia of Intergovernmental Organizations, Deputy Director of the Revue belge de droit international and an editorial board member in ten international journals. He has published widely on international, EU, corporate and financial law (including 50 books, 100 international journal articles and 150 chapters in international books). His recent books include The United Nations and the European Union (2006), Multilevel Regulation and the EU (2008), The Europeanisation of International Law (2008), European Constitutionalism Beyond Lisbon (2009), Belgium in the Security Council (2009), Accountability for Human Rights Violations by International Organizations (2010), Upgrading the EU's Role as Global Actor (2011), The European Union and Multilateral Governance (2012), International Prosecutors (2012), Informal International Lawmaking (2012), Private Standards and Global Governance (2012), China, the European Union and Global Governance (2012), The EU's Role in Global Governance (2013), National Human Rights Institutions in Europe (2013) and The Law of EU External Relations (2013). Apart from his participation in many international scientific networks, he advises various international organizations, trains international officials and is often asked to comment on international events in the media. He is coordinator of a large-scale FP7 Programme FRAME, 'Fostering Human Rights Among European (External and Internal) Policies' and of the InBev-Baillet Latour EU China Chair at KU Leuven.