List of contributors

Dr Robyn Bartel is a Senior Lecturer in Geography and Planning and a research associate of the AgLaw Centre at the University of New England. Robyn's fields of expertise are environmental law, regulatory theory and cultural geography.

Albert K. Butzel is the principal of Albert K. Butzel Law Offices in New York City. He has been counsel in a number of significant environmental litigations, including the Storm King Mountain and Westway MegaProject cases.

Javier de Cendra is Dean of IE Law School. He is also honorary senior lecturer at University College London Energy Institute and honorary senior fellow at UCL Faculty of Laws. His areas of research include climate change and energy law and policy.

Professor Donna Craig holds an appointment at the University of Western Sydney. Previously she was the co-director at the Macquarie University Centre for Environmental law. She researches and teaches environmental law and justice.

Meinhard Doelle is Professor of Law, and Associate Dean, Research, Schulich School of Law, Dalhousie University, and Director, Marine & Environmental Law Institute. Professor Doelle specialises in climate change, environmental law, and energy law.

Josefin Gooch is a researcher, teacher and doctoral candidate at Lund University. Her area of research includes transboundary water law and natural resource governance.

Wayne Gumley is a Senior Lecturer at the Monash University Faculty of Business and Economics. His areas of specialisation are environmental and natural resources law, corporate environmental responsibility and ecological tax reform.

Dr Cameron Holley is Senior Research Fellow (DECRA) at the Faculty of Law, the University of New South Wales. His areas of specialisation are water law and environmental law, with a focus on regulation and governance.

Tanya Howard is a doctoral student at the Australian Centre for Agriculture and Law at the University of New England. Her research focuses on improving institutional mechanisms for community engagement in natural resource governance.

Amanda Kennedy is the Deputy Director of the Australian Centre for Agriculture and Law at the University of New England. Her research interests are in the areas of environmental justice and land use governance.

William Lahey is Associate Professor of Law at the Schulich School of Law, Dalhousie University. His specialisations include law and regulation in environmental, health systems and energy systems governance and natural resources law and policy.

Andrew Lawson is a doctoral student at the Australian Centre for Agriculture and Law at the University of New England, specializing in governance issues in farming, rural communities, and the environment.

Dr Emma Lees is University Lecturer in Property and Environmental Law, Department of Planning Law, University of Cambridge. Her research focuses on land law, European and national environmental law, and planning law.

Professor Paul Martin is the Director of the Australian Centre for Agriculture and Law at the University of New England. His areas of specialisation are natural resource governance and rural social justice.

Molly Masterton is a recent graduate of the George Washington University Law School, where she served as a research assistant to LeRoy Paddock, Associate Dean for Environmental Studies, and focused on emerging issues in environmental and energy law.

Peter Noble is a director of the Australian Meat Processors Corporation and TAL's representative director on the UN EP FI Principles of Sustainable Insurance. His areas of interests are risk management, sustainability and the law.

Richard L. Ottinger is former Dean and now Dean Emeritus of Pace Law School. He served as a 26-year Member of Congress and chaired the House Energy Subcommittee. He chairs the Energy & Climate committee of the IUCN World Commission on Environmental Law.

Omondi Robert Owino is a doctoral candidate at the Faculty of Law, Bayreuth and an Advocate of the High Court of Kenya. He specialises in trans-boundary natural resource regulation and cooperation as well as energy law.

LeRoy Paddock is Associate Dean for Environmental Legal Studies at The George Washington University Law School. His areas of focus are environmental governance, environmental enforcement and aspects of energy law.

John Louis Parker is an environmental lawyer in the Hudson Valley, New York. He served as Regional Attorney for the NY Department of Environmental Conservation. His specialties include climate change, environmental justice and environmental regulatory issues.

Wang Pianpian holds environmental law degrees from Sun Yat-sen University and Pace University. She passed the Chinese Bar Exam in 2009. Pianpian is active in the business sector in carbon assets management and on environmental law in the context of climate change.

Grant Pink is an Adjunct Research Fellow (School of Law/Faculty of the Professions) at the University of New England. He is a recognised expert on environmental enforcement networks and is undertaking a PhD on environmental regulation.

Alistair Rieu-Clarke is a Reader in International Law at the Centre for Water Law Policy and Science, University of Dundee. He specialises on role and relevance of international law within the context of transboundary water resources management

Nicholas A. Robinson is University Professor for the Environment, and Emeritus Kerlin Professor of Environmental Law, at Pace University, whose environmental law programs he founded. A leader in IUCN since 1972, he lives along Hudson River.

Professor Gregory Rose is a member of the Australian National Centre for Ocean Resources and Security (ANCORS) and is Law Discipline Leader at the University of Wollongong. He specialises in international law focused on marine environment and on crime.

Taryn L. Rucinski is Environmental Law Librarian and Adjunct Professor of Law, Pace University School of Law. Ms. Rucinski graduated with her J.D. and certificate in environmental law from Pace in 2010; her research specialties include environmental and energy law.

Professor Solange Teles Da Silva is Professor of Law at the Mackenzie Presbyterian University and CNPq Fellow Research Productivity. Her areas of specialisation are environmental law, sustainable development and social environmental justice

Radina R. Valova received her J.D. from Pace Law School in 2012 and her LL.M. in 2013 in Land Use and Sustainable Development. She was the 2012–13 Pace Energy and Climate Center Ottinger Energy Research Fellow.

Marla E. Wieder is an Assistant Regional Counsel and Regional Criminal Enforcement Counsel with the U.S. EPA, Region 2. From 2000 through 2011 she served as an adjunct professor at Pace Law School. Her area of specialization is hazard waste.

Professor Wang Xi is the Director of the Natural Resources Law Institute of Shanghai Jiao Tong University. His areas of specialisation are environmental law and environmental governance.