About the editors

Duncan Matthews is Professor of Intellectual Property Law in the Centre for Commercial Law Studies, Queen Mary University of London. He holds Masters degrees from the University of Warwick and the University of Exeter, and a PhD from the London School of Economics and Political Science (LSE). He has acted as an advisor to: the Directorate General Trade of the European Commission; the ECAP II EC-ASEAN Intellectual Property Rights Co-operation Programme; the American Association for the Advancement of Science (AAAS); the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP); the European Parliament Committee on International Trade; the European Patent Office (EPO); the UK Strategic Advisory Board for Intellectual Property Policy (SABIP); the UK Intellectual Property Office (IPO) Expert Advisory Group on Trade and Development, and IPKey (the strategic partnership and cooperation between the EU and China on IP, implemented by the European Union Intellectual Property Office (EUIPO) in cooperation with the EPO).

He is Academic Director for the EPO European Qualifying Examination (EQE) training programme and the State Intellectual Property Office of the People's Republic of China (SIPO) training programme, both at Queen Mary University of London. He is the author of Globalising Intellectual Property Rights: The TRIPS Agreement (Routledge, 2002) and Intellectual Property, Human Rights and Development (Edward Elgar Publishing, 2011).

Herbert Zech studied law at the Universities of Erlangen and Munich and obtained his doctorate at the University of Constance. He also holds a degree in Biology (Dipl.-Biol.) from Kaiserslautern University of Technology. Since April 2012 Herbert Zech has been teaching at the Faculty of Law of the University of Basel (Switzerland). He currently holds the position of Professor of Life Sciences Law and Intellectual Property Law and is also Dean of Research. His main fields of academic interest are intellectual property law, especially bio- and nanotechnology patents, information law and technology law.