
Contributors

Bassam Abu Al-Foul is an associate professor of economics at the American University of Sharjah, UAE. His fields of specialization are in the areas of international economics, development economics, natural resources and quantitative analysis. His current research focuses mainly on the Middle East and North Africa (MENA) region and has been published in internationally refereed journals.

Adewale Abideen Adeyemi is an assistant professor in the Department of Finance, Faculty of Economics and Management Sciences, International Islamic University Malaysia. He is also an associate member of the Chartered Institute of Bankers of Nigeria and a member of the International Association for Islamic Economics, and was formerly a lecturer in the Accounting and Finance Department, University of Ilorin, Nigeria. He holds a Ph.D. degree in business administration specializing in finance from the International Islamic University Malaysia, where he also held a postdoctoral fellowship. His B.Sc. finance and M.Sc. finance degrees were obtained from the University of Ilorin, and University of Lagos, Nigeria respectively. Areas of expertise include development finance, corporate finance and Islamic finance. In addition to consultancy services experience in these areas, he has presented papers in both local and international seminars, roundtable discussions, conferences and symposia in Europe, South-East Asia, the Middle East and Africa. His current research interests are in the areas of livelihood finance, Islamic microfinance, financial inclusion and payment systems.

Habib Ahmed has an MA (economics) from the University of Chittagong, Bangladesh, Cand. Oecon. from the University of Oslo, Norway, and a Ph.D. (economics) from the University of Connecticut, USA. Before joining Durham University as a Professor and the Sharjah Chair in Islamic Finance in 2008, he was Manager, Research and Development, Islamic Banking Development Group, the National Commercial Bank (NCB), Kingdom of Saudi Arabia, and worked at the Islamic Research and Training Institute of the Islamic Development Bank Group, Saudi Arabia. He also taught at the University of Connecticut, USA, the National University of Singapore and the University of Bahrain. He has been a member of the Capital Adequacy Working Group of the Islamic Financial Services Board (IFSB), which is responsible for, among other things, setting standards and guidelines for Islamic banks and financial institutions. He has authored or edited more than 70 papers and publications, which include articles in international refereed journals, books, chapters in books, and other academic papers, monographs and reports. Some topics of his research include Islamic microfinance, risk management and corporate governance in Islamic financial institutions, capital structure in Islamic firms, exchange rate determination in an Islamic economy, and implications of Islamic law on economic institutions and organizations. A recent book, Product Development in Islamic Banks, was published by Edinburgh University Press. His recent research interests include contemporary applications of Islamic commercial law, inclusive Islamic finance, Islamic banking and finance, and the integration of waqf and the financial sector.

Tunku Alina Alias Ph.D. is a consultant with the Malaysian legal firm of Wong Lu Peen & Tunku Alina, which she co-founded in 1992, and is currently resident in New York, USA. She has significant experience in advising banks and corporate and public bodies in connection with their investment activities in Asia, the Middle East and the Americas on both a conventional and a Shari'ah-compliant basis and has managed briefs involving corporate, project and retail financing. She is also a mediator with the Malaysian Mediation Centre and an associate mediator for the Singapore Mediation Council. Her area of interest is Islamic philanthropy, in particular the waqf. She has presented and written on this subject matter in several private workshops and is a participant of the French Groupement de Recherche Internationale (GDRI) research project on waqf organized by the Centre National de la Recherche Scientifique (CNRS) in Aix-en-Provence. The International Centre for Education in Islamic Finance (INCEIF) has appointed her as adjunct research fellow.

Mohamed Ariff Ph.D. is a senior professor at the University Putra Malaysia and is a professor of finance at the Bond University Australia. He has worked full time at AACSB-accredited business schools (National University of Singapore; Monash University) and held senior administrative positions. On leave, he worked as a professor or fellow at universities including Harvard (1994), Tokyo (1989, 1991, 2008), UCD Dublin (1992, 2004) and Melbourne (1994). He is an active researcher in financial economics, with contributions appearing in 112 internationally published journals (including Journal of International Money and Finance, Journal of the Operations Research Society, Journal of Small Business Management, Journal of Business Finance and Accounting, International Tax Journal, Applied Economics, Applied Financial Economics, Pacific Basin Finance Journal, Pacific Accounting Review, Journal of Asia Pacific Economy, Journal of Financial Services Research and Global Finance Journal). Research pertaining to Asia Pacific financial markets is published in 33 research books and one top-selling textbook, Investments (co-authors Bodie, Rosa, Marcus and Kane), published by McGraw-Hill. He has organized a network of scholars across the world to conduct funded research in the series Foundations of Islamic Finance for Edward Elgar Publishing, with three volumes to date and more forthcoming. He has contributed to the advancement of financial economics through founding the Asian Finance Association, AFA, in 1989, and was elected president in 2004–07. He is the chief editor of International Journal of Banking and Finance, published by Berkeley Press. He has been a consultant to three stock exchanges, a securities commission, UNESCO, ADB, and private corporations such as the National Australia Bank.

Muhammad Chaudry, a career food technologist, received his academic education in Pakistan, Lebanon and the United States, with a Ph.D. from the University of Illinois at Champaign–Urbana. For 15 years he worked in the food industry in various technical and management positions, responsible for total quality, quality assurance, human resources and employee training. For the past 30 years, he has been managing halal certification programs for the Islamic Food and Nutrition Council of America (IFANCA). Under his administration, halal certification by IFANCA has expanded to over 4000 production sites in 56 countries. Halal-certified products include meat and poultry, seafood, food products, food ingredients and chemicals, nutritional products and supplements, cosmetics, personal care products, household products, vaccines, food-processing chemicals, sanitation chemicals and packaging materials. He is a member of the Institute of Food Technologists and expert consultant to the World Organization for Animal Health. He has written several articles and papers in technical journals, as well as co-authored a book, Halal Food Production, published by CRC Press. He was an international delegate for food safety workshops conducted in India, under the sponsorship of the United Nations International Trade Centre and the American Spice Trade Association. He is experienced in the management of not-for-profit organizations and industrial corporations in a cross-functional environment.

Murat Çizakça received his BA in economics from Leicester University, UK in 1968, and an MA and a Ph.D. in economics and economic history from the University of Pennsylvania in 1978. He taught at Bogazici, Koç, Fatih and Bahcesehir universities in Istanbul and at ISTAC Kuala Lumpur. He is currently a professor of Islamic finance and comparative economic history at INCEIF University in Kuala Lumpur. He has authored a number of books, including Islamic Capitalism and Finance:

Origins, Evolution and the Future (Edward Elgar Publishing, 2011), A History of Philanthropic Foundations: Islamic World from the Seventh Century to the Present (Bogazici University Press, Istanbul, 2000) and Comparative Evolution of Business Partnerships (Brill, Leiden, 1996), and has published 85 articles in scholarly journals. He has attended 200 conferences and presented papers worldwide. He is a former fellow of the Institute of Advanced Studies (Wissenschaftskolleg), Berlin, Germany (1997–98), a member of the Executive Board (Giunta), Istituto Storia Economica (F. Datini), Prato, Italy, and Third Allianz Visiting Professor for Islamic Studies at the Institut für Geschichte und Kultur des Nahen Orients, LMU Munich University, Germany (2006).

Hafas Furqani is a researcher at the International Shari'ah Research Academy for Islamic Finance (ISRA). He obtained his Ph.D. in economics (2012) as well as Master of Economics (2006) from the Department of Economics, International Islamic University Malaysia. His bachelor's degree is in Shari'ah Mu'amalah from the State Islamic University Syarif Hidayatullah Jakarta (2002). He has written extensively and published articles in the areas of Islamic economics, banking and finance in academic journals as well as newspapers and magazines. His paper 'Challenges in the Construction of Islamic Economics Discipline' was awarded first prize in the KLIFF Essay Competition (2011), and his article 'Theory Appraisal in Islamic Economic Methodology: Purposes and Criteria' published in Humanomics was chosen as a highly commended award winner at the Literati Network Awards for Excellence 2013. His Ph.D. thesis, 'The Foundations of Islamic Economics: A Philosophical Exploration of the Discipline', was awarded a gold medal at the 2012 International Islamic University Malaysia Research, Invention and Innovation Exhibition (IRIIE 2012).

Ismail H. Genc is a professor of economics at the American University of Sharjah, Sharjah, UAE. He received his Ph.D. in economics from the Texas A&M University in December 1999. He was an associate professor with tenure in the Economics and Statistics departments at the University of Idaho, USA. He also served as vice-president of the Southwestern Economics Association (USA), and currently sits on various editorial boards, and advises policy and decision makers in industry and governmental bodies. His expertise is broadly in applied monetary economics, economic development and remittances. His work has appeared in a number of academic outlets such as journals and books, and was recognized with grants and contracts as well as several awards and honours. He is fluent in English and Turkish.

Roszaini Haniffa is a professor of accountancy at Heriot-Watt University, UK. She was previously at Hull University Business School, where she was a professor of accounting as well as founder and director of the Centre of Accounting and Accountability Research (CAAR). She has also held the post of professor of accounting and head of accounting and finance at Bradford University School of Management, and has held a lectureship at the University of Exeter. She has taught both professional and academic courses in accounting and finance in various higher education institutions in Malaysia and on MBA programmes in Hong Kong, Singapore, Oman and Bahrain. She received her B.Sc. in finance from Northern Illinois University, USA, an M.Sc. in accounting and finance from Stirling University, UK, and a Ph.D. in accounting and finance from the University of Exeter, UK. Her research broadly addresses issues related to disclosure, corporate governance and accountability as well as business ethics, with highly cited publications in these areas. She is the joint founder and editor of the Journal of Islamic Accounting and Business Research (JIABR), and the moderator for AIA's Islamic banking professional paper, and she sits on a number of editorial boards. She was one of the judges for the Banker Annual Bank Awards. She is included in the Muslim Women Power List 2009 by the UK Equality and Human Rights Commission.

M. Kabir Hassan is a professor of finance and Hibernia Professor of Economics and Finance in the Department of Economics and Finance at the University of New Orleans, USA. He received his BA in economics and mathematics from Gustavus Adolphus College, Minnesota, USA, and MA in economics and Ph.D. in finance from the University of Nebraska–Lincoln, USA. He has 145 papers published in refereed academic journals. He has supervised 32 doctoral theses, and many of his students are now well placed in the academic, government and private sectors. He is editor of the Global Journal of Finance and Economics, Journal of Islamic Economics, Banking and Finance and International Journal of Islamic and Middle Eastern Finance and Management, and co-editor of the Journal of Economic Cooperation and Development. He has edited and published many books, along with articles in refereed academic journals. He is co-editor (with M.K. Lewis) of Handbook of Islamic Banking and Islamic Finance (International Library of Critical Writings in Economics, Edward Elgar Publishing, 2007), and co-editor (with Michael Mahlknecht) of Islamic Capital Market: Products and Strategies (John Wiley & Sons, 2011). He is co-author of Islamic Entrepreneurship (Routledge UK, 2010). He has co-authored a textbook, Islamic Finance, published by the Pearson Publishing Company in May 2013.

Mohammad Hudaib is a reader at the Adam Smith Business School, University of Glasgow, UK. He previously taught at the Nottingham University Business School, University of Essex, Bradford University School of Management and University of Exeter. Prior to his teaching career in the UK, he was an auditor in Saudi Arabia. He received his BA in accounting from King Saud University, Saudi Arabia, an M.Sc. in accounting and finance from Stirling University, UK and a Ph.D. in accounting from the University of Essex, UK. His research interests and publications are mainly in the areas of auditing and governance, accounting fraud and business ethics. He has supervised and acted as internal and external examiner for many Ph.D. candidates in the UK. He is the joint founder and editor of the Journal of Islamic Accounting and Business Research (JIABR) and examiner for CIMA and AIA.

Zafar Iqbal is a professor of finance at the National University of Computer and Emerging Sciences, Pakistan. He is the founding head of department, Department of Management Sciences at Lahore Campus and associate dean of FAST School of Management, which encompasses departments delivering business education at the university's Faisalabad, Islamabad, Karachi and Lahore campuses. Previously, he worked for several years in the field of investment management in some of the top financial institutions in the Middle East and Australia. His last professional assignment was with the South Australian Government Financing Authority, where he worked as a portfolio manager (liability management). His doctoral thesis is on the Islamic perspective on public finance. He has created his niche in research by synthesizing a range of conventional rational perspectives on organizing various dimensions of a contemporary society with Islam. His areas of research interest lie in Islamic finance, distributive justice and public finance, and corruption and governance in Muslim countries. His publications have appeared in the American Journal of Islamic Social Sciences, Review of Islamic Economics and International Journal of Islamic Financial Services. He also is the author of Justice: Islamic and Western Perspectives (Islamic Foundation, Leicester, 2007) and joint author (with Mervyn K. Lewis) of An Islamic Perspective on Governance (Edward Elgar Publishing, 2009).

Abdul Azim Islahi is a professor at the Islamic Economics Institute (formerly Islamic Economics Research Center), King Abdulaziz University, Jeddah. He has spent more than 35 years in research, teaching and expanding the frontiers of the discipline of Islamic economics. His Ph.D. is from the Aligarh Muslim University, Economic Concepts of Ibn Taymiyah (Leicester, UK, 1988). Another major work is Contributions of Muslim Scholars to Economic Thought and Analysis up to 15th CE Century (2005, 2nd edn accepted for publication by Edward Elgar Publishing). His main contribution is filling the research gap in the history of Islamic economic thought in the subsequent centuries by authoring Muslim Economic Thinking and Institutions in the 16th CE Century (2009), A Study of Muslim Economic Thinking in the 17th Century (2010), Islamic Economic Thinking in the 18th Century (2011) and Muslim Economic Thinking in the 19th Century, Part One: Arab World (forthcoming). He has contributed articles to the Encyclopaedia of Islamic Economics (London, 2009) on the economic thought of Ibn Taymiyah, Ibn al-Qayyim, al-Maqrizi and Shah Wali-Allah al-Dihlawi. His research papers have appeared in professional and refereed international journals, including History of Political Economy, History of Economic Ideas, Journal of Research in Islamic Economics, Journal of Islamic Economics, Review of Islamic Economics and American Journal of Islamic Social Sciences. He started his teaching career at the College of Engineering, King Abdulaziz University, Saudi Arabia, in 1977. In 1989 he joined the Department of Economics, Aligarh Muslim University, Aligarh, India. In 2002 he joined the Islamic Economics Research Center, King Abdulaziz University. He is a member of various academic and professional bodies.

Abdul Ghafar Ismail is a professor of banking and financial economics at the School of Economics, Universiti Kebangsaan Malaysia. He obtained his Ph.D. from the University of Southampton, UK. He is currently: the head of the Research Division, IRTI-IDB; principal research fellow, Institut Islam Hadhari; AmBank Group resident fellow for Perdana Leadership Foundation; and chairman of the Shariah Committee, Citibank Malaysia. He has published extensively in several refereed journals, among others the Journal of Business Ethics, Review of Islamic Economics, Journal of Islamic Economics, Banking and Finance, Humanomics, International Journal of Social Economics, Savings and Development, Global Journal of Finance and Economics, Review of Financial Economics, Journal of Financial Services Marketing, International Journal of Islamic and Middle Eastern Finance and Management, Research in Financial Qualitative Markets and Investment Management and Financial Innovations. His papers have also been presented at many international and local conferences, such as the International Seminar on Islamic Economics and Finance, IRTI International Conference and Malaysia Finance Association Conference. His research interests include learning process and growth theory, inter-temporal allocation of resources, earnings management, capital adequacy standards for Islamic banks, and risk management. He has been a lecturer since 1987 and has taught several economics courses such as money and banking, financial economics, advanced macroeconomics, money and capital market in Islam, the Islamic economics system, Islamic economics analysis, international finance, risk management in Islamic banking, issues in Islamic banking, Islamic banking, and money, zakat and the real economy.

Andreas A. Jobst is a senior economist in the European Department of the International Monetary Fund (IMF) in Washington, DC, where he is responsible for the financial sector coverage and macroprudential surveillance of the euro area since early 2014. Previously, he was Chief Economist and Deputy Director (Supervision) of the Bermuda Monetary Authority (BMA), where his work focused on financial stability and macroprudential surveillance, risk analytics, and financial regulation (banking and insurance). During his appointment, he shaped the Islamic finance agenda of the jurisdiction (Islamic investment funds and (re) takaful). He was also heavily involved in the International Association of Insurance Supervisors (IAIS) as member of the Financial Stability Committee (FSC). Before moving to Bermuda, he spent more than six years as mid-career economist at the Monetary and Capital Markets (MCM) Department of the IMF. As a member of IMF Article IV missions he has been responsible for the financial sector coverage of several large mature and emerging market economies, completing the stress tests for Belgium, Germany, Hong Kong SAR, Spain, Sweden, the United Kingdom and the United States as part of the IMF's Financial Stability Assessment Program (FSAP). He also served as one of the main authors of the Global Financial Stability Report (GFSR), with a focus on developing models for solvency and liquidity risk as well as macro-financial linkages. He holds a Ph.D. from the London School of Economics (LSE) and was also educated in Cambridge and Oxford.

Monzer Kahf is a professor of Islamic economics and finance at the Qatar Faculty of Islamic Studies (QFIS) of Hamdan bin Khalifa University, Qatar. He gained his Ph.D. from the University of Utah in 1975, and worked in various places as research economist and professor. He is the author of 28 books and booklets in English and Arabic on Islamic banking and finance, Islamic economics, Zakah and Awqaf. Some of his books are translated into Indonesian, Turkish and Korean. Among his well-known books are Instruments of Meeting Budget Deficit in Islamic Economics, The Islamic Economy: Analytical Study of the Functioning of the Islamic Economic System, Economics of Zakah, The Islamic Economy: Analytical Study of the Functioning of the Islamic Economic System and International Economic Relations from Islamic Perspectives. He has written more than 100 articles, in English and Arabic, on Islamic economics, Islamic public and private finance, Islamic banking, Zakah and Awqaf, including entries for the Oxford Encyclopedia of the Modern Islamic World. He was awarded the Islamic Development Bank (IDB) prize for his brilliant contributions in Islamic economics in 2001.

Muqtedar Khan is an associate professor in the Department of Politics and International Relations at the University of Delaware. He gained his Ph.D. from Georgetown University in 2000. His areas of interest are politics of the Middle East and South Asia, political Islam, Islamic political thought and American foreign policy in the Muslim world. He teaches courses on Arab and Middle Eastern politics, politics of development, globalization, and Islam in world affairs. As well as papers in academic journals, he regularly writes on various issues of Islam, politics and international relations in various newspapers and blogs. He has written two books: Islamic Democratic Discourse: Theory, Debates and Philosophical Perspectives (Lexington Books, 2006) and Debating Moderate Islam: The Geopolitics of Islam and the West (University of Utah Press, 2007).

Scott Kostyshak is a Ph.D. candidate in economics at Princeton University. He received BA degrees in economics, political science and mathematics from the University of California, San Diego. His research interests are in development, applied econometrics and subjective well-being. He is a core developer of the software LyX.

Mohamad Akram Laldin is the executive director of the International Shari'ah Research Academy for Islamic Finance (ISRA). Prior to joining ISRA he was an assistant professor at the Kulliyah of Islamic Revealed Knowledge and Human Sciences, International Islamic University Malaysia (IIUM). He is a member of Bank Negara Malaysia Shari'ah Advisory Council, member of the Accounting and Auditing Organization for Islamic Financial Institutions (AAOIFI) Shari'ah Board, member of the Law Harmonisation Committee of Bank Negara Malaysia, member of the Shari'ah Board of Employees Provident Fund Malaysia (EPF), chairman of the Maldives Monetary Authority Shari'ah Board, member of Yassar Limited (Dubai) Shari'ah Advisory Board, member of Nigerian Central Bank Council of Experts, chairman of the Islamic Advisory Board of HSBC Insurance Singapore, Shari'ah advisor to ZI Syariah Advisory Malaysia, member of the Shari'ah Advisory Council of the International Islamic Financial Market (IIFM), Bahrain, member of Thomson Reuters Islamic Benchmark (IIBR) Shariah Committee, member of the Shari'ah Board of Dar Al Takaful, Dubai, and a member of other boards locally and internationally. In addition, he is a member of the Board of Studies of the Institute of Islamic Banking and Finance, International Islamic University Malaysia and a member of the Board of Trustees of the Islamic Research Training Institute under the Islamic Development Bank, Jeddah. He holds a BA honours degree in Islamic jurisprudence and legislation from the University of Jordan, and a Ph.D. in principles of Islamic jurisprudence (Usul al-Fiqh) from the University of Edinburgh, UK. He is a registered Shariah advisor for Islamic securities with the Securities Commission of Malaysia and has acted as Shariah advisor in the issuance of several sukuks. He is a prolific author of academic works, specifically in the areas of Islamic banking and finance. He is the recipient of the Zaki Badawi Award 2010 for Excellence in Shariah Advisory and Research.

Mervyn K. Lewis is an adjunct professor at the University of South Australia Business School, having retired as professor of banking and finance at the end of 2013. Prior to that he was Midland Bank Professor of Money and Banking at the University of Nottingham. He was also a consultant to the Australian Financial System Inquiry, visiting scholar at the Bank of England, and inaugural Securities Commission–University of Malaya visiting scholar, and has been visiting professor at the universities of Cambridge, Melbourne, Vienna, Wuhan, Mauritius, Goettingen and Euromed Marseilles. He is a member of the ANZ Shadow Financial Regulatory Committee. Educated at the University of Adelaide, he obtained first-class honours in economics and a Ph.D. In 1986 he was elected a fellow of the Academy of the Social Sciences in Australia. He has published 23 books, 71 articles and 90 chapters. Recent volumes are Reforming China's State-Owned Enterprises and Banks (2006), Handbook of Islamic Banking (2007), Islamic Finance (2007), Untangling the US Deficit (2007) and An Islamic Perspective on Governance (2009). His latest books are Global Finance after the Crisis: The United States, China and the New World Order (2013) and Risk and Regulation of Islamic Banking (2014). He is currently working on Understanding Ponzi Schemes: Can Better Financial Regulation Prevent Investors from Being Defrauded? and books on Public Procurement and Financial Intermediaries.

Nurul Aini Muhamed is a senior lecturer in the Faculty of Economics and Muamalat, Universiti Sains Islam Malaysia (USIM). She obtained a bachelor's degree in Syariah (management) from the University of Malaya (2001) and an MBA from Universiti Kebangsaan Malaysia (2003). She was awarded a Ph.D. (business and management) from the University of South Australia (2009). She is currently the deputy dean (academic and research) and previously she was a programme head for the bachelor's degree of Muamalat administration and USIM alumni liaison officer. She has taught several subjects, including Fiqh Muamalat I, Fiqh Muamalat II and Management of Islamic Banking and Takaful Institutions. Her research areas include Islamic transaction law, Islamic banking and finance, halal compliance and corporate governance.

George Naufal is an assistant professor of economics at the American University of Sharjah and a research fellow at the Institute for the Study of Labor (IZA). His primary research includes migration and its consequences, mainly the impact of remittances on the remitting countries. His research has focused mostly on the Middle East and North Africa region, with an emphasis on the Gulf countries. He is the co-author of Expats and the Labor Force: The Story of the Gulf Cooperation Council Countries.

Volker Nienhaus received his doctorate in economics (1979) and his post-doctorate (1985) from the University of Bochum. He was a full professor of economics at the German universities of Trier (1989–90) and Bochum (1990–2004), and at Bochum he was also director of the Institute of Development Research and Development Policy and vice-rector for structure, planning and finance from 2000 to 2003. He was president of the University of Marburg from 2004 to 2010 and holds an honorary professorship of the University of Bochum. He has been a visiting professor at the ICMA Centre, Henley Business School, University of Reading, UK since 2010. In addition, he was a visiting scholar at the University of Malaya under the Securities Commission Malaysia Islamic Capital Market Programme (2010/11) and a visiting professor at the Faculty of Islamic Studies of Qatar Foundation, Doha (2011). He became adjunct professor of the International Centre for Education in Islamic Finance (INCEIF) in Kuala Lumpur in 2012. He served as a member of several advisory committees and boards, including the Academic Advisory Council of the German Federal Ministry of Economic Cooperation and Development in Bonn (1998–2008), the Academic Advisory Board of the Federal Agency for Civic Education in Bonn (2002–10), the Governing Council of the INCEIF (since 2006), and the International Advisory Board of FWU AG, Munich and Dubai (since 2007), a leading provider of bancatakaful products. He has contributed to projects of the Islamic Research and Training Institute of the Islamic Development Bank and the Islamic Financial Services Board. He has published numerous books and essays on Islamic economics and finance since the early 1980s.

Umar A. Oseni is an assistant professor at the Ahmad Ibrahim Kulliyah (Faculty) of Laws, International Islamic University Malaysia. Prior to this, he was a visiting fellow at the Islamic Legal Studies Program of the Harvard Law School in the United States. He received his LL B (Hons) in common and Islamic law from the University of Ilorin, Nigeria, Master of Comparative Laws (with distinction), and Ph.D. from the International Islamic University Malaysia. His doctoral research was on the legal framework for alternative dispute resolution in courts with Shari'ah jurisdiction in Nigeria, Malaysia and Singapore, where he proposed a new framework for dispute resolution in the Islamic finance industry. He was a resource person on Islamic microfinance at the UN-Habitat Workshop on Land Development in Islam jointly organized by UN-Habitat, the International Islamic University Malaysia and the University of East London in 2009. His areas of interest include the law and regulation of Islamic finance, contemporary issues in Islamic law, alternative dispute resolution and international commercial arbitration. He is a member of the following professional bodies: Chartered Institute of Arbitrators UK, International Centre for Dispute Resolution Young & International (ICDR Y&I), Young International Arbitration Group (YIAG), London Court of International Arbitration, Nigerian Bar Association, and Association of Professional Negotiators and Mediators. He has written widely on current legal and regulatory issues in Islamic finance. He is a co-editor (with Engku Rabiah Adawiah Engku Ali) of Essential Readings in Legal and Regulatory Issues in Islamic Finance (CERT Publications, Kuala Lumpur, 2012).

Bayu Taufiq Possumah is a Ph.D. candidate in Islamic economics at the Institute of Islamic Civilization (Hadhari), Universiti Kebangsaan Malaysia (UKM). He is a researcher at the Research Center for Islamic Economics and Finance (EKONIS) UKM. He has published in several refereed journals, including the Journal of Business Ethics, European Journal of Law and Economics and International Research Journal of Finance and Economics. He has presented papers at many international and local conferences, including the Islamic Banking, Accounting and Finance Conference, International Workshop of Islamic Economic and Finance Theory, World Universities Zakat Conference, Malaysia Finance Association Conference, and World Conference on Islamic Thought and Civilization. His research interests include Islamic economics, wealth management, Fiqh mualamat, classical literature and philosophy, Islamic banking, and Islamic civilization and management.

James E. Rauch is a professor of economics at the University of California, San Diego, research associate with the National Bureau of Economic Research, and fellow of the CESifo Research Network. His research is mainly in the areas of international trade, economic growth and development, and urban economics, and most recently in the area of entrepreneurship. A common theme of much of his work is how non-market interactions affect market outcomes. These non-market interactions may involve interpersonal or interfirm relationships, often addressed using networks as a conceptual framework. In addition to publishing many articles in leading professional journals, he is author of the textbook Leading Issues in Economic Development and the edited volumes Networks and Markets and The Missing Links: Formation and Decay of Economic Networks. He is especially known for his development of the widely used ‘Rauch classification’ of internationally traded goods and for his research at the intersection of economics and sociology. He was co-editor of the Journal of International Economics from 2001 to 2010 and associate editor of the Review of Economics and Statistics. In 2010 he presented the Nottingham Lectures in International Economics. He has been the principal investigator, alone and with various collaborators, on numerous National Science Foundation grants and served as a National Science Foundation Economics Review panellist from 2006 to 2008. He was awarded a Guggenheim fellowship in 2012.

Carrie E. Regenstein retired as the associate vice-provost for computing services at Carnegie Mellon University in 2012. During her 30-year career in higher education information technology (previously at Cornell, the University of Rochester and the University of Wisconsin–Madison), she was a frequent speaker and active contributor beyond her own campus, developing and leading numerous initiatives. She served on the EDUCAUSE board of directors from 2008 to 2012, including a year as treasurer and another as vice-chair. EDUCAUSE is the premier association for higher education information technology (IT). A member of the EDUCAUSE Management Institute from 1996 to 2002, she also served on the faculty of the Seminars on Academic Computing (SAC) New Directors Workshop, serving as leader in 2000. She was invited to co-author the 2011 ECAR Workforce Study and did an EDUCAUSE Live! web seminar on ‘Reflections on the Changing Workplace’ in December 2011. She also co-edited a collection of essays, Leadership, Higher Education and the Information Age: A New Era for Information Technology and Libraries, published in 2003. She serves on the faculty of the Council of Australian University Directors of Information Technology (CAUDIT) Leadership Institute. Before these activities escalated, she wrote and edited more extensively with her husband, Joe M. Regenstein, on a range of food science topics, especially with respect to religious foods.

Joe M. Regenstein is a professor in the Department of Food Science, Cornell University, USA. He also serves as an adjunct professor in the Department of Population Medicine and Diagnostic Sciences in the College of Veterinary Medicine. He heads the Cornell Kosher and Halal Food Initiative. He is an adjunct professor of food science at Kansas State University. Both his Bachelor of Arts in chemistry and his Master of Science in dairy chemistry are from Cornell, and his Ph.D. in biophysics is from Brandeis University in 1973. During the 1996–97 academic year he had a sabbatical as the Institute of Food Technologists' (IFT) first Congressional science fellow in Washington, DC. His research work has focused on flesh foods, particularly fish and poultry. He currently has primary responsibility for four courses: Kosher and Halal Food Regulations; Introduction to Animal Welfare; Chef's Chemistry; and A Good Meal: A Window into Diversity. In 2003 he received the College of Agriculture and Life Science's award for efforts to promote multicultural diversity, and he has given keynote addresses at major international conferences on halal food and kosher food. He received the Elizabeth Stier Humanitarian Award from IFT in 2000. He is a member of the Food Marketing Institute's Animal Welfare Technical Committee and the American Veterinary Medicine Association's Humane Slaughter Panel. He is working with Spirit of Humane to design low-cost halal and humane slaughter equipment (www.spiritofhumane.com).

Mian Nadeem Riaz is director of the Food Protein R&D Center, head of the Extrusion Technology Program, and a member of the graduate faculty in the Nutrition and Food Science Department, Texas A&M University, College Station, Texas, USA. He joined the Center 20 years ago after completing his Ph.D. in food science. He has published five books, including Halal Food Production, which is widely used in universities for food science and nutrition major students. He has published 17 chapters in different books, including chapters in the area of halal food-related issues. He teaches a course on religious and ethnic food at Texas A&M University to food science and nutrition majors. He has more than 20 years of research experience in his field. He has given more than 250 talks in 48 different countries, including several talks on halal food-related topics in the USA, Pakistan, India, Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, Thailand, Malaysia, Colombia, Greece, the United Arab Emirates, Mexico and other countries. He has published a number of articles in different food-related national and international magazines and journals on halal food processing, domestic and international halal markets, the halal certification process for different food industries, new halal trends, and the value of the halal logo.

Jared Rubin graduated with a Ph.D. in economics from Stanford University, USA in 2007 and a BA from the University of Virginia, USA in 2002, and is an economic historian interested in the Middle East and Western Europe. His research focuses on relationships between political and religious institutions and their role in economic development. He is the former executive director (and current board member) of the Association for the Study of Religion, Economics, and Culture (ASREC). His work has appeared or is forthcoming in journals such as the Review of Economic Studies, Review of Economics and Statistics and Economic Journal. He is currently writing a book (Rulers, Religion, and Riches: Why Western Europe Got Rich and the Middle East Did Not.; under contract with Cambridge University Press) on the long-run economic consequences of differing political and religious institutions in the Middle East and Western Europe.

Meysam Safari of University Putra Malaysia is a specialist in Islamic finance, having published a number of articles and book chapters on sukuk debt securities markets in 11 countries. He is the co-author of a chapter (with Mohamed Ariff) in The Islamic Debt Market for Sukuk Securities. He has won several awards, of which the Khazana Foundation postgraduate research grant over four years is notable. He is working on a manuscript of the valuation issues of sukuk debt securities by solving the mathematics that incorporates the special features of six different types of such securities being traded in ten countries.

Muhammad Nejatullah Siddiqi combines knowledge of modern economics with expertise in Shariah sciences gained after intensive education and training. Currently a professor emeritus at Aligarh Muslim University, India, Department of Business Administration, he has been associated with the University of California, Los Angeles, as a fellow in its Center for Near Eastern Studies, with the Islamic Development Bank at Jeddah as a visiting scholar, and with the International Islamic University Malaysia as a distinguished professor. While serving as a professor of economics at King Abdulaziz University, Jeddah, he also served as editor of the Journal of King Abdulaziz University: Islamic Economics. He was awarded the King Faisal Prize for his contributions to Islamic economics. He has authored many books in English, Urdu and Arabic, some of which have been translated into several other languages. He has also served as president of the International Association for Islamic Economics. He was a member of the Accounting and Auditing Organization for Islamic Financial Institutions (AAOIFI) and sits on the Board of Trustees, Indian Center for Islamic Finance.

Shamim A. Siddiqui is an economist with a research and teaching interest in Islamic economics, Islamic banking and finance, history of economic thought, macroeconomics, monetary economics, labour economics, development economics, and international trade and finance. He received his BA (economics and political science), MA (economics) and M.Sc. (applied economics) from the University of Karachi, Pakistan and his Ph.D. (economics) from Temple University, Philadelphia, USA. He is currently an associate professor in the School of Business and Quality Management at Hamdan Bin Mohammed eUniversity, Dubai. He has written 20 articles in refereed journals and a number of papers for edited books and an encyclopedia, mostly on Islamic economics and finance. He co-authored Regional Integration in Theory and Practice: A Case Study of ASEAN (Lambert Publishers, 2010) with Julia Roebke. He also co-edited Small Economies and Global Economics (Nova Publications, 2008) with J. Ram Pillarisetti and others. He has presented 17 papers at conferences held on Islamic economics and finance. He has also worked on 15 research projects, sponsored by the World Bank and the governments of Pakistan, Sri Lanka and Brunei Darussalam.

Azeemuddin Subhani is a financial Shari'ah scholar, listed in three international Shari'ah scholars' databases, with over five decades' teaching, industry, research and consulting experience both in Islamic law and finance and in conventional finance and accounting. He taught in Pakistan (the Institute of Business Administration, IBA), Canada (the University of Waterloo) and the UAE, where he is now in charge of the Islamic finance programme at the Ajman University of Science and Technology. He has industry experience in investment banking, and financial planning in the petro-chemical and oil and gas industries. He advised the Saudi Ministry of Petroleum on the Aramco nationalization project. His research experience spanned a period of seven years at McGill University, researching the divine law of riba and bay'. His doctoral dissertation on this subject was evaluated by the McGill faculty as a 'seminal' work in Islamic law. He provided consulting services to, and sat on the Shari'ah boards of, various Islamic financial institutions, including Islamic law firms in North America and the Middle East. He received his BA in economics, political science and English from the University of Karachi, Pakistan, an MBA in accounting from IBA, Karachi, Pakistan, an MBA with doctoral work in finance from the University of Southern California, Los Angeles, California, USA, and an MA and Ph.D. in Islamic law and finance from the Institute of Islamic Studies, McGill University, Montreal, Quebec, Canada. He also has a certificate in Usul al-Fiqh (Islamic jurisprudence). With many professional affiliations, he has been an invited speaker and panellist at several international Islamic finance conferences and workshops in the US, Canada and the Middle East.

Rodney Wilson is an emeritus professor at the International Centre for Education in Islamic Finance (INCEIF). Previously he was involved in research and teaching in Islamic economics and finance for over 30 years, and he founded the Durham University Islamic finance programme. Before joining INCEIF he was a visiting professor at the Qatar Faculty of Islamic Studies. He has authored 12 books and over 50 articles. His most recent books are Legal, Regulatory and Governance Issues in Islamic Finance (Edinburgh University Press and Columbia University Press, New York, 2012) and Economic Development in the Middle East (Routledge, London and New York, 2013). He has extensive consultancy experience, including with the African Development Bank (2011 and 2012), the Qatar Central Bank (2010) and the Islamic Financial Services Board Working Group on Shari'ah Governance (2007–09). He serves on the Technical Committee for Islamic Finance of the Finance Accreditation Agency.

Ouidad Yousfi is an assistant professor of finance at Management Research in Montpellier (MRM) in the University of Montpellier 2, France. She is also at Finance Internationale et Stratégie des Affaires (Fiesta) in the Institut Supérieur de Gestion de Tunis, Tunisia. Her teaching experience is in mathematics, financial mathematics, statistics, probabilities, and market finance, in several institutions (IUT of Montpellier, Nanterre University of Nanterre, Paris Dauphine University, Creteil Val de Marne University). She is interested in private equity, liquidity problems, asymmetric information problems and Islamic finance, with several publications in Bankers, Markets and Investors (BM&I), Journal of Behavioral Finance, Journal of Economic Research and IUP Journal of Corporate Governance. She is also a referee for Revue Etudes en Economie Islamique, Applied Financial Economics and Journal of Accounting in Emerging Economies. She has participated in conferences and seminars in France, Canada, Greece, Italy and Spain. She is working on the liquidity of options markets and risk taking and innovation from a gender angle.

Asad Zaman is the vice chancellor of the Pakistan Institute of Development Economics. He received his BS in mathematics from MIT, USA in 1974, and MS in statistics and Ph.D. in economics from Stanford University, USA in 1976 and 1978 respectively. He has taught in the economics departments of the University of Pennsylvania, Columbia University, Johns Hopkins University and California Institute of Technology, USA, as well as at Bilkent University in Ankara, Turkey. He has published extensively in leading journals in the area of Islamic economics, as well as conventional economics and econometrics. His advanced graduate textbook, Statistical Foundations for Econometric Techniques, was published by Academic Press in 1996. He is the managing editor of International Econometric Review. He has been an invited speaker at many international conferences on econometrics, Islamic economics, and Islamic banking and finance.

