
Contributors

Annemarie Bridy is a Professor of Law at the University of Idaho College of Law, an Affiliate Scholar at the Stanford Law School Center for Internet and Society, and an Affiliate Fellow at the Yale Law School Information Society Project. She specializes in intellectual property and information law, with specific attention to the impact of evolving technology on existing frameworks for the protection of intellectual property and the enforcement of intellectual property rights.

Naomi Cahn is the Harold H. Greene Professor of Law at The George Washington University Law School. She has written numerous law review articles on trusts and estates, elder law, family law, and reproductive technology. She was the reporter for the Uniform Law Commission's Uniform Fiduciary Access to Digital Assets Act, and she is the author, or co-author, of several award-winning articles on digital assets in the ABA's Probate & Property magazine. She is also the co-author of textbooks on trusts and estates and family law, and various other books.

Irene Calboli is a Professor of Law at Texas A&M University School of Law and the Deputy Director of the Applied Research Centre for Intellectual Assets and the Law in Asia, School of Law, Singapore Management University, where she is a Visiting Professor and Lee Kong Chian Fellow. She is also a Transatlantic Technology Law Forum Fellow at Stanford Law School. She has published many books, articles, and chapters on topics related to intellectual property and international trade law. She is an elected member of the American Law Institute and an Associate Member of the Singapore Academy of Law.

Michael W. Carroll is a Professor of Law and Director of the Program on Information Justice and Intellectual Property at American University Washington College of Law. His research and teaching specialties are intellectual property law and cyberlaw, focusing on the search for balance in the face of challenges posed by new technologies. He is a founding member of Creative Commons, Inc., serves on the Board of Directors of the Public Library of Science, and recently completed service on the National Research Council's Board on Research Data and Information. He also is an Academic Fellow of the Center for Democracy and Technology.

Carol M. Hayes is a licensed attorney in Seattle, Washington, and a Post-Doctoral Fellow at the University of Illinois College of Law. She has also held fellowships at the National Academy of Sciences in Washington, D.C., and the Institute of Intellectual Property in Tokyo, Japan. Her research areas include cybersecurity, privacy, and patent law. In the area of patent law, her focus is primarily on patents relevant to computing and communications.

Sarah Jane Hughes is the University Scholar and Fellow in Commercial Law at Indiana University's Maurer School of Law, where she has taught since 1989 in the areas of commercial law, banking regulation, and privacy. She is a member of the American Law Institute and the co-author with David P. Fidler of RESPONDING TO NATIONAL SECURITY LETTERS: A PRACTITIONER'S GUIDE (American Bar Association 2009). She also curated, edited, and contributed to RFIDS, NEAR-FIELD COMMUNICATIONS AND MOBILE PAYMENTS (American Bar Association 2013). From 1974 to 1988, she was an attorney in the Federal Trade Commission's Bureau of Consumer Protection. Her recent work on payments innovations, including virtual currencies and mobile payments, can be found at <http://www.ssrn.com>.

Ariel Katz is an Associate Professor at the Faculty of Law, University of Toronto where he holds the Innovation Chair in Electronic Commerce. From 2009 to 2012 he was the Director of the Centre for Innovation Law and Policy. He received his LL.B. and LL.M. from the Faculty of Law at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem and his S.J.D. from the Faculty of Law, University of Toronto. He studies, writes, speaks, teaches, and advises on competition law and intellectual property law, with allied interests in electronic commerce, the regulation of international trade, and particularly the intersection of all these fields.

Jay P. Kesan is a Professor and Workman Research Scholar at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. His research work focuses on patent law and policy, cybersecurity, and privacy, and he typically employs empirical and analytical methods in his research efforts. He received his J.D. summa cum laude from Georgetown University and a Ph.D. in electrical and computer engineering from the University of Texas at Austin. He has served as a special master, a technical and legal expert, and counsel in patent matters. His recent publications can be found on SSRN (Social Science Research Network) at <http://www.ssrn.com>.

Nancy S. Kim is the ProFlowers Distinguished Professor of Internet Studies and Professor of Law at California Western School of Law, and Visiting Professor at Rady School of Management, University of California, San Diego. She writes and teaches in the areas of contract law, Internet law, commercial law, and privacy. She is the author of WRAP CONTRACTS: FOUNDATIONS AND RAMIFICATIONS (Oxford Univ. Press 2013). Prior to teaching, she worked in both legal and business capacities at technology companies in Silicon Valley.

Christina L. Kunz is Professor Emerita at Mitchell Hamline School of Law, with teaching expertise in contracts and commercial law, including electronic commerce and international sales. She is a co-author of LEARNING SALES (West Academic Publ. 2016) and CONTRACTS: A CONTEMPORARY APPROACH (West Academic Publ. 2010). She continues to serve on state bar committees and law reform projects with the American Law Institute and the Uniform Law Commission.

Ariana R. Levinson is a Professor of Law at the University of Louisville Brandeis School of Law, where she teaches labor and employment law. She has published six articles about technology and the workplace and regularly presents her research on this topic to practitioners and academics, including at such places as Fordham University Law School, Berkeley Law School, and Universidad Carlos III de Madrid.

David F. Lindsay is Associate Professor at Monash University, Melbourne, Australia, where he teaches copyright, cyberlaw, and trusts. He is the author of INTERNATIONAL DOMAIN NAME LAW (Hart Pub'g 2007) and general editor of the Australian Intellectual Property Journal. He is Vice-Chair of the Australian Privacy Foundation and a member of the Media and Communications subcommittee of the Law Council of Australia.

Christiana N. Markou holds an LL.B (Hons.) from the University of Sheffield (UK) and an LL.M. in International, Commercial and European Law from the same university. She was called to the Cyprus Bar Association in 2001 after passing the relevant examination with honors in 2000 and since then she has been a practicing lawyer, now in Markou & Co LLC. She also holds a doctorate (Ph.D.) from the University of Lancaster (UK). She is a lecturer in law at European University Cyprus where she teaches consumer law, private international law, and internal market law. She publishes mainly in the areas of EU consumer law and privacy law.

Stephen T. Middlebrook is a lawyer in private practice who focuses on payments and financial technology. He previously was General Counsel of UniRush, LLC, General Counsel of FSV Payment Systems, Inc., and Senior Counsel at the U.S. Department of the Treasury, Financial Management Service. He served as an ABA Advisor to the Uniform Law Commission's Study Committee on Alternative and Mobile Payments and, more recently, was appointed the ABA's Advisor to the ULC's Drafting Committee on the Regulation of Virtual Currency Businesses Act. He is co-chair of the Electronic Payments and Financial Services Subcommittee of the ABA's Cyberspace Law Committee.

Juliet M. Moringiello is a Professor at Widener University Commonwealth Law School, where she regularly teaches Bankruptcy, Property, Sales, and Secured Transactions. She is the Chair-Elect of the Pennsylvania Bar Association Business Law Section, as well as Chair of the Section's Uniform Commercial Code Committee and Chair of the Section's Task Force for the Enactment of the Uniform Voidable Transactions Act. Prof. Moringiello is an elected member of the American Law Institute, a Fellow of the American College of Commercial Finance Lawyers, and a Uniform Law Commissioner for Pennsylvania.

Edward A. Morse is a professor of law at Creighton University School of Law, where he holds the McGrath North Mullin & Kratz endowed chair in business law and is a research scholar in Creighton's Institute of Economic Inquiry. He is co-author (with Ernie Goss) of GOVERNING FORTUNE: CASINO GAMBLING IN AMERICA (Univ. of Mich. Press 2007). He is active in the ABA Cyberspace Law Committee and speaks and writes regularly on taxation, regulation, and technology.

James P. Nehf is Professor of Law and Cleon H. Foust Fellow, Indiana University Robert H. McKinney School of Law. His publications include several chapters in a leading commercial law treatise, SECURED TRANSACTIONS UNDER THE UNIFORM COMMERCIAL CODE (Lexis-Nexis/Matthew Bender), an updated and revised edition of CORBIN ON CONTRACTS—THE IMPOSSIBILITY DOCTRINE, and a book on privacy law, OPEN BOOK: THE FAILED PROMISE OF INFORMATION PRIVACY IN AMERICA (2012). He has published numerous other book chapters and articles on commercial law, consumer finance, privacy law, low-income consumer transactions, and international/comparative law subjects.

Christine Riefa is a Reader in Law at Brunel University, London. Her research interests are in the areas of Internet law and consumer law. She has published widely on these and related topics. She is a board member of the International Association of Consumer Law, a Fulbright alumna, and was awarded a scholarship of the Max Planck Institute for Comparative and International Private Law for the year 2015.

Sonia E. Rolland is a Professor of Law at Northeastern University School of Law. Her areas of expertise are international law, trade law, and development. Recent publications include Are Consumer-Oriented Rules the New Frontier of Trade Liberalization?, Harv. Int'l L.J. (2014) and DEVELOPMENT AT THE WTO (Oxford Univ. Press 2013). She has visited at Columbia Law School, the Georgetown University Law Center, and the University of Michigan Law School. She clerked for H.E. Gilbert Guillaume and H.E. Ronny Abraham at the International Court of Justice. Professor Rolland co-chairs the International Economic Law Interest Group of the American Society of International Law.

John A. Rothchild is Associate Professor at Wayne State University Law School, where he teaches in the areas of intellectual property law and Internet law. He is a co-author (with Margaret Jane Radin, R. Anthony Reese, and Gregory M. Silverman) of the law school casebook INTERNET COMMERCE (Foundation Press 2d ed. 2006). Previously he was an attorney in the Federal Trade Commission's Bureau of Consumer Protection.

Amy J. Schmitz is the Elwood L. Thomas Missouri Endowed Professor of Law at the University of Missouri School of Law, but began her career at the University of Colorado Law School in 2000. She has taught courses in Contracts, Secured Transactions, Arbitration, International Arbitration, Consumers and the Law (service learning), and Dispute Resolution in the Digital Age. Her current research explores empirical realities of contracting behavior, as well as various other issues related to consumer, arbitration, and contract law and policy. She has been active in recent debates regarding consumer arbitration and online dispute resolution, and is often an invited speaker on these topics. Her work is widely published, and she also developed a non-profit consumer outreach website at MyConsumertips.info.

David J. Shakow is a Gabelli Fellow at the Gabelli School of Business of Fordham University, where he teaches courses in federal income tax, and a Professor Emeritus at the University of Pennsylvania Law School. He served as Deputy Tax Legislative Counsel at the United States Treasury and was a co-reporter (with George Yin) of an American Law Institute project on the taxation of private business enterprises.

Shaun B. Spencer is an Assistant Professor and Director of Legal Skills at the University of Massachusetts School of Law, where he teaches Information Privacy Law. Prior to joining the University of Massachusetts, he taught at Boston College Law School and Harvard Law School. Professor Spencer's current scholarship explores the implications of data analytics and machine learning for consumer privacy and surveillance law.

Hannibal Travis is Professor of Law at Florida International University College of Law, where he teaches intellectual property, entertainment law, antitrust, and Internet law. He is the editor of and a contributor to CYBERSPACE LAW: CENSORSHIP AND REGULATION OF THE INTERNET (Routledge 2013). His other work deals with digital libraries, theories of fair use, the principles of software and Internet law, performers' rights, freedom of expression, and international law.

Marketa Trimble is the Samuel S. Lionel Professor of Intellectual Property Law at the William S. Boyd School of Law, University of Nevada, Las Vegas. Her major areas of expertise are public and private international law of intellectual property, including conflict of laws, transnational litigation, and enforcement of intellectual property rights on the Internet. She has authored numerous articles and book chapters; her publications include GLOBAL PATENTS: LIMITS OF TRANSNATIONAL ENFORCEMENT (Oxford Univ. Press 2012) and the casebook INTERNATIONAL INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY LAW: CASES AND MATERIALS (Foundation Press 4th ed. 2016) (with Paul Goldstein).

Asma A.I. Vranaki is an Assistant Professor in Law at the Anglia Law School of Anglia Ruskin University. She investigates the links between law, society and digital technologies from a multi-disciplinary perspective. Asma is also an Associate Fellow at Oxford University and a fellow at the Centre for Information Policy Leadership of Hunton & Williams ("CIPL"). CIPL is a global data protection, privacy and information policy think tank. Asma is involved in CIPL's multi-stakeholder project on the consistent implementation and interpretation of the European General Data Protection Regulation. Previously, Asma was post-doctoral researcher on the EC-funded "Accountability for Cloud" project at Queen Mary, University of London ("QMUL"). She has taught law at various universities including the London School of Economics and Political Science, QMUL, and Oxford University. She is a non-practicing commercial barrister and consultant to Preiskel & Co LLP, a leading technology City law firm. She holds an LLB from the London School of Economics and Political Science, an LLM in Computer & Communications Law from QMUL and a DPhil in Law from Oxford University.

Suzanne Brown Walsh is a partner in Murtha Cullina LLP in Hartford, Connecticut. She recently chaired the Uniform Law Commission's drafting committee on The Revised Uniform Fiduciary Access to Digital Assets Act and is currently a member of the Regulation of Virtual Currency Businesses and Directed Trust Act Drafting Committees. She has served on the ULC's Scope and Program Committee and drafting committees for the Uniform Trust Decanting, Adult Guardianship and Protective Proceedings Jurisdiction, Insurable Interests in Trusts, Premarital and Marital Agreements, and Powers of Appointment Acts. She is a Fellow of the American College of Trust and Estate Counsel.

Jane K. Winn is Charles I. Stone Professor of the University of Washington School of Law in Seattle, Washington and a faculty director of the Center for Advanced Study & Research on Innovation Policy. A graduate of Queen Mary College, University of London and Harvard University, she is a member of the American Law Institute and received Fulbright research grants in 2008 and 2016. She has been a visiting faculty member at University of California-Berkeley; Peking University and Tsinghua University, China; Sciences Po and Université Jean Moulin Lyon III, France; Melbourne University and Monash University, Australia; Chulalongkorn University, Thailand; and National Law University-Odisha, India.