Acknowledgments

We wish to acknowledge the many individuals that, in various ways, have made it possible to compose and publish this book. First, our gratitude goes to the authors of the chapters of this book; they have always responded straight away to our solicitations to send their chapters out to us and to revise them when it was required. With no hesitation we declare that without them and their enduring commitment, this collective editorial effort would never have seen the light. Second, we are indebted to the many participants at the First International Entrepreneurship Research Exemplar meeting “Entrepreneurial Ecosystems and the Diffusion of Startups” held at the University of Catania, Italy, on 23–25 May 2013. Gathering from various parts of Europe and North America, they vigorously contributed their wisdom, judgment and energies to the study of entrepreneurial ecosystems and the diffusion of startups, which was seen as a pretty risky academic endeavor at the time as it was at its very inception. The initial idea to assemble this book emerged out of those discussions and the chapters are an elaboration of works initially presented on that occasion. Third, our universities (University of Denver and Pittsburgh, George Washington University and University of Catania) deserve special recognition for allowing us the time and application required to the turn this volume into reality. Fourth, we recognize the commissioners and Edward Elgar Publishing for their invaluable support in the book’s publishing process. Fifth, one of the editors wishes to express his gratitude to Harvard Business School and its faculty for providing the appropriate environment to finalize some parts of the book during his visit to Boston in spring 2017. Last but not least, our respective families merit boundless admiration for patiently tolerating our absences in the preparation of this volume.

Sharon Alvarez
Elias G. Carayannis
Giovanni Battista Dagnino
Rosario Faraci
Boston, Catania, Pittsburgh, Washington,
April 2017