
Contributors

Afshin Akhtar-Khavari is an Associate Professor in the Griffith Law School, Griffith University, Australia. He is a former Deputy Head and (acting) Head of the Griffith Law School. He is currently a member of the World Commission on Environmental Law for the International Union for the Conservation of Nature and a lead author for the Intergovernmental Platform on Biodiversity and Ecosystem Services on a report dealing with land degradation and restoration. He is on the editorial board of the Griffith Law Review. He publishes in the general area of international law and environmental humanities. He recently completed a co-authored monograph with Routledge on Ecological Restoration in International Environmental Law and is currently working on a co-edited collection in the Griffith Law Review dealing with law and ecological recovery. He is also writing his next book dealing with fear in the law and ecological recovery discourse.

Klaus Bosselmann is a Professor of Law and Founding Director of the New Zealand Centre for Environmental Law at the University of Auckland. He has provided consultancy for the OECD, UN, EU, and the governments of Germany and New Zealand. He was a delegate at the Earth Summits in Rio de Janeiro (1992 and 2012), is an executive member of several global sustainability organisations and is Chair of the IUCN World Commission on Environmental Law Ethics Specialist Group.

Nicholas Bryner is an Emmett/Frankel Fellow in Environmental Law and Policy at UCLA School of Law in Los Angeles, California. Prior to his current position, he worked as a Visiting Associate Professor of Law and Environmental Program Fellow at The George Washington University Law School and has also served as Executive Officer for the International Union for Conservation of Nature's World Commission on Environmental Law (WCEL).

Peter Burdon is an Associate Professor in the Adelaide Law School at Adelaide University in Australia and deputy chair of the International Union for the Conservation of Nature Ethics Specialist Group. He has published several books including Earth Jurisprudence: Private Property and the Environment (Routledge, 2014) and he is currently completing a book on Hannah Arendt and the Eichmann trial for the Routledge Nomikoi Critical Legal Thinkers series.

Michael Faure is the academic director of the Maastricht European Institute for Transnational Legal Research (METRO) and Professor of Comparative and International Environmental Law in the Law Faculty at Maastricht University. In addition, he is the academic director of the Ius Commune Research School, a member of the board of directors of Ectil, a half time Professor of Comparative Private Law and Economics at the Rotterdam Institute of Law and Economics (RILE) of the Erasmus University in Rotterdam and academic director of the European Doctorate in Law and Economics (EDLE) programme.

Douglas Fisher is Emeritus Professor of Law at the Queensland University of Technology in Australia. His involvement in environmental law began in 1970 and he has engaged in both professional and academic activities related to environmental law since then in Scotland, Australia and New Zealand. His most recent publications include Legal Reasoning in Environmental Law: a Study of Structure, Form and Language (Edward Elgar, 2013).

Elizabeth Fisher is Professor of Environmental Law in the Faculty of Law at the University of Oxford. She is General Editor of the Journal of Environmental Law and lead author of Fisher, Lange and Scotford, Environmental Law (Oxford University Press, 2013).

Anna Grear is Professor of Law and Theory in the Cardiff Law School and School of Law and Politics at Cardiff University in the United Kingdom. She is the founder and Director of the Global Network for the Study of Human Rights and the Environment (<http://www.gnhre.org>) and the Editor in Chief of the Journal of Human Rights and Environment (Edward Elgar).

David Grinlinton is an Associate Professor of Law in the Faculty of Law at the University of Auckland in New Zealand and a Visiting Professor of Law at Western Law School at the University of Western Ontario. His areas of research include the role of property rights in environmental and natural resources law, facilitating the greater uptake of renewable energy, and legal processes and regulation to encourage greater sustainability in the extractive industries. He is a member of the IUCN's CEL Specialist Group on Energy Law and a founding member of the 'Sustainable Energy for All' global community of practice.

Jørgen K. Knudsen is a political scientist graduated from the University of Oslo in Norway. He obtained his Doctoral degree at the University of Twente in the Netherlands. He has been a research scientist at SINTEF Energy Research, Norway and is currently working on environmental research for the Norwegian Management of Public Constructions and Properties.

Louis Kotzé is Research Professor of Law in the Faculty of Law at North-West University (Potchefstroom Campus) in South Africa and Visiting Professor of Environmental Law at the University of Lincoln in the United Kingdom. He is co-editor of the Journal of Human Rights and the Environment (Edward Elgar) and Deputy-director of the Global Network for Human Rights and the Environment. His recent publications include Global Environmental Governance: Law and Regulation for the 21st Century (Edward Elgar, 2012) and Research Handbook on Human Rights and the Environment (with Anna Gear) (Edward Elgar, 2015).

William M. Lafferty is a retired Professor of Political Science at the University of Oslo where he was Director of the Program for Research and Documentation for a Sustainable Society (ProSus). He is Professor Emeritus of Strategic Research for Sustainable Development in Europe at the Center for Clean Technology and Environmental Policy at the University of Twente in the Netherlands. In recent years he has also served as a senior advisor on governance and policy for SINTEF Energy Research, Norway.

Chris McGrath is a senior lecturer in environmental regulation in the School of Geography, Planning and Environmental Management at the University of Queensland in Australia. He is a barrister and has been involved in many of the most significant environmental law cases to have been decided in Australia over recent years.

Brian J. Preston has been the Chief Judge of the Land and Environment Court of New South Wales in Australia since 2005. He is a member of a number of national, regional and international organisations whose focus is environmental law. He has contributed significantly over many years to an understanding of environmental law and to its development through his judicial and extrajudicial writings and commentary.

Niko Soininen is a lecturer in environmental law and jurisprudence at the University of Eastern Finland School of Law. He has a keen interest in environmental law, administrative law and jurisprudence. He is co-editor of a book entitled Transboundary Marine Spatial Planning and International Law (Earthscan/Routledge, 2015) and author of several articles and book chapters on water law, marine environmental law and legal theory. In September 2016 he defended his LL.D. thesis entitled Transparencies in Legality: A Legal Analysis of the Reason-giving Requirement in Water Management Permitting in Finland. Outside of academia Niko has worked as an adviser for HELCOM and the Ministry of Agriculture and Forestry and the Ministry of the Environment in Finland.

Caiphaz Soyapi is a doctoral candidate in the Faculty of Law at North-West University in South Africa. His thesis focuses on the emergence of transnational environmental rights law in Africa. Research interests include international environmental law, transnationalism in law and socio-legal studies.

Tim Stephens is Professor of International Law and an Australian Research Council Future Fellow in the Sydney Law School at the University of Sydney in Australia. He has written extensively on international environmental dispute settlement including International Courts and Environmental Protection (Cambridge University Press, 2009).

Prue Taylor teaches environmental and planning law to graduate and undergraduate students in the School of Architecture and Planning at the University of Auckland in New Zealand. She is the Deputy Director of the New Zealand Centre for Environmental Law and a member of the IUCN Commission of Environmental Law and its Ethics Specialist Group. Her specialist research interests are in the areas of climate change, human rights, environmental and commons governance, ocean law and policy, property rights and environmental ethics. Prue has co-authored Common Heritage of Mankind: A Bibliography of Legal Writing (Fondation de Malte, 2013) with Lucy Stroud.

Anastasia Telesetsky is an Associate Professor of Law at the University of Idaho School of Law in the Natural Resources and Environmental Law program. She is currently the co-chair of the International Environmental Law Committee of the American Bar Association Section of International Law and an editorial board member of the Asia-Pacific Journal for Ocean Law and Policy. In 2016, she was the Ian Axford Public Policy Fellow at the New Zealand Ministry of Primary Industries focusing on fisheries sustainability issues.

Jonathan Verschuuren is Professor of International and European Environmental Law at Tilburg University in the Netherlands, a faculty member of the Tilburg Sustainability Center and an EU Marie Skłodowska-Curie Fellow. He has been a visiting professor at a number of universities outside the Netherlands. His extensive list of publications includes Research Handbook on Climate Change Adaptation Law (Edward Elgar, 2013).

Annecoos Wiersema is a Professor of Law at the University of Denver Sturm College of Law. She was the Director of the International Legal Studies Program at the Sturm College of Law from 2013 to 2015 and former Ved P. Nanda Chair. Prior to joining the faculty at the University of Denver Sturm College of Law, she was an Assistant Professor at the Ohio State University Michael E. Moritz College of Law and worked in the Denver office of Arnold and Porter LLP as a litigation associate. Annecoos was the George W. Foley, Jr. Fellow in Environmental Law at Harvard Law School from 1999 to 2000 and spent time as a Visiting Scholar at the International Monetary Fund (IMF) in 2001.

Claire Williams holds degrees in law, legal practice, science and climate science. She specialised in international law and human rights at Masaryk University in the Czech Republic. Claire is now undertaking a PhD which examines the disconnection between our scientific understanding of human impact and the laws and policies governing our behaviour. Claire has just been awarded an Endeavour Scholarship to complete her PhD at New York University.

