

Contributors

Gabriele Abels holds the Jean Monnet Chair for comparative politics and European integration at the Institute of Political Science, University of Tübingen, Germany. Her research interests are European integration, theories of European integration, role of parliaments in the EU, political participation, biotechnology regulation, food safety policy and gender studies.

John P. Burns is Dean of the Faculty of Social Sciences and Chair Professor of Politics and Public Administration at the University of Hong Kong, China. Burns researches public administration in China, including Hong Kong, focusing on civil service reform, party-government relations, public policy and governance issues.

Federica Casarosa is Research Fellow at the Centre for Judicial Cooperation at the European University Institute, Department of Law, Florence, Italy. She has worked as a consultant for FAO and as a Jean Monnet Fellow at the Robert Schuman Centre for Advanced Studies. Her research interests focus on private regulation in the food sector and new media law and regulation.

Donal Casey is Lecturer in Law at the University of Kent, Canterbury, UK. His research interests lie in the area of food regulation and in the issues of legitimacy and accountability. His research has been published in the European Law Journal, the Journal of Law and Society, and Regulation & Governance.

Neil Collins is Dean of the Graduate School of Public Policy, Nazarbayev University, Kazakhstan. He is a past president of the Political Studies Association of Ireland and a former Centennial Scholar at the American Political Science Association in Washington DC. He is the author of several books, including Understanding Chinese Politics, Manchester University Press, 2013.

Vanessa Constant Laforce has been working as a Researcher and Teaching Fellow in Law at the University of Abertay, Dundee, UK. She has also worked in France as a Parliamentary Assistant for Chantal Berthelot, French Member of Parliament. Her research interests include EU market access issues for agricultural food products from developing countries.

Robin van Dalen works for the Philips Africa innovation center, Kenya. Her passion is adventure, connecting people, business and human development. She worked for NGOs in Ecuador, Kenya and India, researched the halal market, and developed the medical software business in the Middle East. She is a Cambridge University graduate in organization studies.

Gareth Enticott is Senior Lecturer in Rural Geography at the School of Planning and Geography at Cardiff University, UK. His research explores the social impacts of animal disease policy, principally bovine tuberculosis, on farmers and veterinarians in the United Kingdom and New Zealand.

Elena Fagotto is Director of Research at Harvard Kennedy School's Transparency Policy Project, Cambridge, Massachusetts and a Ph.D. candidate at Erasmus University, Rotterdam, the Netherlands. Her research focuses on regulatory policy, information disclosure, and democratic governance. She is currently examining the role of private actors in food safety regulatory regimes.

Doris Fuchs is Professor of International Relations and Sustainable Development at the University of Münster, Germany. Her research focuses on the structural and discursive power of non-state actors (especially transnational corporations), sustainable consumption, financialization, energy, climate, and food politics and policy.

Marco Gobbato is a business consultant at Studio Tosi, Venice – Vicenza, Italy. He has worked as a Max Weber Fellow at the European University Institute, and as a teaching assistant at the University of Trento. His research interests focus on contract law, inter-firm networks and private regulation. His works have appeared on several books and journals.

Jörn-Carsten Gottwald has been Professor for East Asian Politics at Ruhr University Bochum, Germany since 2011. Prior to this appointment he worked at the Centre for Chinese and East Asian Politics at Free University Berlin, at the Department of Political Science, University of Trier and the Irish Institute of Chinese Studies, National University of Ireland, Cork.

Tetty Havinga is Associate Professor at the Institute for Sociology of Law of the Radboud University, Nijmegen, the Netherlands. She is interested in relations between industry and law with a view to the public interest. Her research explores the development and effects of private and public food regulation.

Agni Kalfagianni is Assistant Professor for Global Food and Environmental Governance at the Institute for Environmental Studies (IVM), VU University of Amsterdam, the Netherlands. She is also Senior Research Fellow of the international Earth System Governance Project (ESGP). Kalfagianni has published extensively on issues of effectiveness, legitimacy and justice of global food and environmental governance.

Alexander Kobusch is Junior Lecturer at the Institute of Political Science, University of Tübingen, Germany. His research interests are European integration, food safety in the EU, network governance and social network analysis.

Robert Lee is Professor of Law at Birmingham Law School, UK. Between 2001 and 2012 he was Co-Director of the ESRC Research Centre on Business Relationships, Accountability, Sustainability and Society (BRASS) at Cardiff University. His wider interest is in regulatory issues particularly in areas of health and environment.

Jing Li is Junior Research Fellow at the think tank, China Finance 40 Forum, where she researches food safety regulation and regulatory institutional arrangements. After conducting research at the Sun Yat-sen University she joined DemeterSoft, an IT company focused on food regulation, seeking to link the academic and practical worlds.

Peter Oosterveer is Associate Professor at the Environmental Policy Group, Wageningen University, the Netherlands. His work is in the field of globalization and sustainability of food production and consumption. Peter is particularly interested in global public and private governance of food, promoting sustainability and the role of consumers therein.

Haiko van der Voort is Assistant Professor at Delft University of Technology, Faculty of Technology, Policy and Management, the Netherlands. He earned his PhD with an extensive study on co-regulation. His research is about decision-making on norms in and among organizations. Related topics are regulation, enforcement, certification, and risk management.

Frans van Waarden is Professor of Policy and Organization Studies at Utrecht University, the Netherlands, and Fellow of Utrecht University College. His research interests are in phenomena at the boundaries between politics, economics, law and history, seen through the eyes of a sociologist: the governance of markets, regulation and its enforcement, and political institutions.

Xiaoqi Wang is Assistant Professor at the Department of Politics and Public Administration, University of Hong Kong, China. Wang's research interests include public administration, civil service reforms in China, and policy analysis of food safety and waste management. She has published a book and several journal articles about reforms and policies in China.