

---

Contributors

---

Craig Allan is a solicitor in Glasgow. Craig, together with Thérèse O'Donnell, has published extensively regarding natural disasters, particularly focusing on the ILC drafting project and its impact on sovereignty.

Marie Aronsson-Storrier is a Research Associate in Global Law and Disasters at the University of Reading and a final year PhD candidate in international law at Melbourne Law School. Marie's research and teaching interests include Disaster Risk Reduction, Water Security, Legal Theory and International Law on the use of force.

Alison Bisset is Associate Professor in International Human Rights Law at the University of Reading. She specialises in transitional justice, with a particular focus on the work of truth commissions and their relationship with prosecuting bodies. Her monograph, Truth Commissions and Criminal Courts, was published by Cambridge University Press in 2012.

Kirsten Nakjavani Bookmiller is a Professor of Government and Director of Global Partnerships at the Center for Disaster Research and Education at Millersville University. She co-founded the Disaster Law Interest Group at the American Society of International Law and her research specialisation is in international disaster relief law and policy.

Susan C. Breau is Professor of Law and Head of the School of Law at the University of Reading. She specialises in the lawfulness of the use of force (including the responsibility to protect), international humanitarian law, international organisations law, and disaster law. She has acted as a consultant to the Commonwealth Secretariat, the International Commission on Missing Persons, the Kurdish Human Rights Project, the Oxford Research Group, and Every Casualty Group (ongoing).

Hannah Entwisle Chapuisat was the Research and Partnership Officer at the Nansen Initiative (2013–2015), and previously worked on issues related to humanitarian affairs and displacement with UN OCHA and UNHCR, as well as NGOs. She has an academic background in law, peace studies and contemporary art.

Leïla Choukroune is Director of the Centre for Social Sciences and Humanities (CSH), New Delhi, India. She has published extensively including (with Sangeeta Khorana), Global Health and the Emerging World (Springer, 2016), is the Editor of the Springer book series International Law and the Global South and Board member of China Perspectives.

Mary Crock is Professor of Public Law, University of Sydney and Accredited Specialist in Immigration Law. Her research interests concern vulnerable migrants, in particular refugees, children and persons with disabilities. She heads a project examining refugees with disabilities in situations of displacement. Mary is author of many migration-related books and articles.

Michael Eburn is an Associate Professor at the Australian National University's College of Law. His PhD benchmarked Australia's disaster arrangements against international legal standards. His current research looks at the policies, institutions and governance of natural hazards and is funded by the Bushfire and Natural Hazards Cooperative Research Centre.

Gilles Giacca was at the time of writing Research Fellow and Programme Coordinator at the Law Faculty of Oxford University. His most recent publications include Economic, Social and Cultural Rights in Armed Conflict (OUP, 2014), and The Arms Trade Treaty: A Commentary (OUP, 2016).

James A. Green is Professor of Public International Law at the University of Reading. His books include The Persistent Objector Rule in International Law (OUP, 2016) and Cyber Warfare: A Multidisciplinary Analysis (Routledge, 2015). He is co-editor-in-chief of the Journal on the Use of Force and International Law.

Lawrence Hill-Cawthorne is a Lecturer in Law at the University of Reading. Previous positions include Lecturer at Merton College, Oxford and British Research Council Fellow at the Kluge Center in Washington, DC. His research interests cut across a number of topics within public international law.

Walter Kälin is Professor Emeritus at the University of Bern. He has served in a number of key positions including as Envoy of the Nansen Initiative (2012–2015), member of the UN Human Rights Committee (2003–2008 and 2012–2014), and Representative of the UN Secretary General on the Human Rights of Internally Displaced Persons (2004–2010).

Tahmina Karimova is currently a Human Rights Officer at the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights. She holds a diploma of jurist from the Tajik State National University, an LL.M. from the University of Essex and a PhD in International Law (summa cum laude) from the University of Geneva and the Graduate Institute of International and Development Studies (IHEID).

Kristian Cedervall Laut is Assistant Professor with the Centre for International Law and Justice at the Faculty of Law, University of Copenhagen. He also co-heads the interdisciplinary research project Changing Disasters, and is among the founding members of COPE, Copenhagen Center for Disaster Research.

Christopher Newdick is the Professor of Health Law at the University of Reading, UK. His books include Who Should We Treat? Rights, Rationing and Resources (OUP, 2005) and Law and Ethics in Intensive Care (co-editor, OUP, 2010). He is a legal advisor to the Thames Valley NHS Priorities Committee.

Thérèse O'Donnell is a Reader in Law, at Strathclyde University, Glasgow, specialising in Public International Law and Human Rights Law. Thérèse, together with Craig Allan, has published extensively regarding natural disasters, particularly focusing on the ILC drafting project and its impact on sovereignty.

Tade Oyewunmi is an energy lawyer with specifications in international oil and gas law as well as energy market regulations. He is currently a doctoral researcher at the Centre for Climate Change, Energy and Environmental Law, University of Eastern Finland. His qualifications include an LLB (University of Ibadan, Nigeria), a BL (Nigerian Law School), and an LLM in oil and gas law (University of Aberdeen, UK). He is a member of the Nigerian Bar Association (NBA), International Association for Energy Economics (IAEE) and the Association of International Petroleum Negotiators (AIPN).

Hà Lê Phan is a doctoral candidate in international human rights law at the Free University of Berlin. Her PhD provides a socio-legal analysis of the right to sanitation. She has worked on socio-economic human rights including the right to water, transboundary water law, sustainable development and intersectional discrimination.

Tilman Rodenhäuser is a PhD candidate at the Graduate Institute of International and Development Studies, Geneva. Over the past few years, he has worked with the ICRC, Geneva Call and DCAF. In his work and publications he focuses primarily on the applicability of the laws of war and human rights to non-state armed groups.

Haythem Salama is an international water business specialist with a PhD in Public Private Partnership (PPP). He has worked for international water companies as a regional director for the Middle East and North Africa region. Haythem has produced a number of papers and reports on Privatization, Public Private Partnerships (PPP/BOT), construction industry development and water-related challenges.

Katja L.H. Samuel is an Associate Professor at the School of Law, University of Reading, specialising in a broad range of security-related issues, including disaster law, counter-terrorism, human rights and institutional responses. A barrister, previously she served in the Royal Navy both operationally and as a legal adviser.

Evelyne Schmid is a lecturer and post-doctoral research fellow at the University of Basel and previously the University of Bangor, Wales. She is the author of Taking Economic, Social and Cultural Rights Seriously in International Criminal Law (Cambridge Studies in International and Comparative Law, Cambridge University Press, 2015).

Stefano Silingardi holds a PhD in International Law and Economics from the Bocconi University of Milan and is Adjunct Professor of International Law at the University of Modena and Reggio Emilia.

Tim Stephens is Professor of International Law and Australian Research Council Future Fellow at the University of Sydney. He is President of the Australian and New Zealand Society of International Law. He teaches and researches in public international law, with his published work focusing on the international law of the sea, international environmental law and international dispute settlement. His ARC Future Fellowship project is examining the role of international law in the Anthropocene.

Anastasia Telesetsky is an Associate Professor of Law at the University of Idaho College of Law where she teaches in the Natural Resources and Environmental Law programme. She is a member of the IUCN World Commission on Environmental Law and has published widely on a variety of disaster law topics including climate change insurance and food law topics including the legal obligation to eliminate food waste. In 2004, she was a Bosch Fellow working on the progressive legal implementation of the Right to Food.

Simon Whitbourn is a solicitor who has worked as a legal adviser in central and local government. During his career, he has advised the United Kingdom's Civil Contingencies Secretariat and Maritime and Coastguard Agency, and has specialised in the laws around serious emergencies and disasters.

Inga T. Winkler is a human rights researcher, lecturer and consultant and a scholar-in-residence at NYU's Center for Human Rights and Global Justice. From 2009 to 2015 she worked as Legal Advisor to the UN Special Rapporteur on the Human Rights to Water and Sanitation.