
Contributors

Rob Atkinson is Professor of Urban Policy in the Department of Geography and Environmental Management, University of the West of England, Bristol and a member of the Centre for Sustainable Planning and Environments. For the last 30 years he has been involved in research, teaching and policy work related to cities.

Peter Biegelbauer is Senior Scientist at the Center for Innovation Systems and Policy of the AIT, Austrian Institute of Technology in Vienna. In his research work he has concentrated on public participation, public policymaking and the possibilities of learning from experience in politics.

Yelter Bollen is a PhD student at the Centre for EU Studies, Ghent University. His research is on the domestic politics of EU trade policy in Belgium and the Netherlands.

Dorota Dakowska is Professor of Political Science at the University of Lyon 2 (ENS Triangle) and a member of the Institut Universitaire de France. Her current research focuses on the international and European dimensions of higher education reforms.

Falk Daviter is Assistant Professor of Public Administration and Policy at the University of Potsdam. His research focuses on questions of EU policymaking, biotechnology regulation, knowledge use and the politics of expertise.

Sarah Delputte is Post-Doctoral Assistant at the Centre for EU Studies, and a lecturer at the Department of Political Science at Ghent University. Her research focuses on the EU's development policy.

Peter H. Feindt was Professor and Chair Holder of Strategic Communication at Wageningen University. Since October 2017 he is Professor of Agriculture and Food Policy at Humboldt-University in Berlin. His main research interests are agriculture, food and environmental policy, political participation and deliberative governance, and discursive policy analysis.

Hubert Heinelt is Professor for Public Administration, Public Policy and Urban Research at the Institute for Political Science, Technische Universität Darmstadt. His research covers various policies (particularly labour market, environment and climate policy) in multi-level systems. Furthermore, he is interested in how the shift from government to governance can be made in a participatory manner that meets standards of democratic self-determination.

Johanna Kantola is Professor in Gender Studies at the Faculty of Social Sciences, University of Tampere, Finland. Her books include Gender and Political Analysis (written with Lombardo, Palgrave 2017), Gender and the Economic Crisis in Europe (edited with Lombardo, Palgrave 2017) and she is one of the editors of The Oxford Handbook on Gender and Politics (2013) and Palgrave's Gender and Politics book series.

Jesper Dahl Kelstrup is Associate Professor in European Public Policy at the University of Roskilde, Denmark. His research focuses on the roles that think tanks play in European public policies.

Michèle Knodt is Full Professor and Jean Monnet Professor ad personam for ‘Comparative Politics and European Integration’ at the Technische Universität Darmstadt and Director of the Jean Monnet Centre of Excellence ‘EU in Global Dialogue’ (CEDI). Her research focuses on constructivist approaches to European governance and energy policy.

Xymena Kurowska is Associate Professor of International Relations at Central European University and Marie Skłodowska-Curie Fellow at Aberystwyth University. Her research interests concentrate on interdisciplinary approaches to security and international state-building, and on developing interpretive methodologies to study these areas. She has written, amongst others, on different aspects of the EU’s security and foreign policy.

Emanuela Lombardo is Senior Lecturer at Madrid Complutense University, Spain. Her latest books are Gender and Political Analysis (written with Johanna Kantola, Palgrave 2017), Gender and the Economic Crisis in Europe (edited with Johanna Kantola, Palgrave 2017) and The Symbolic Representation of Gender (written with Petra Meier, Ashgate 2014).

Sybille Münch is Assistant Professor for Theory of Public Policy at the Center for the Study of Democracy at Leuphana University Lüneburg. Her research focuses on interpretive approaches to policy analysis as well as urban and migration research.

Frank Nullmeier is Professor for Political Science at the University of Bremen and head of the department ‘Normative and Theoretical Foundations of the Welfare State’ at the SOCIUM Research Center on Inequality and Social Policy. His work focuses on welfare state theory, social policy and interpretive approaches to policy analysis. His most recent work examines the transformation of democratic legitimation.

Jan Orbie is Associate Professor at the Department of Political Science and Director of the Centre for EU Studies at Ghent University. His research focuses on the European Union’s external relations.

Katharina T. Paul is a senior researcher at the Department of Political Science at the University of Vienna. Her research focuses on health and consumer policy as well as interpretive and critical approaches to policy analysis. She has received several grants awarded by the Austrian Science Fund (FWF) and currently holds an Elise Richter Fellowship.

Wolfgang Petzold is Deputy Director for Communication at the European Committee of Regions in Brussels and worked for the European Commission for ten years. He has published books and articles on EU cohesion policy and lectures at several universities.

Claudio M. Radaelli is Professor of Political Science at the University of Exeter, where he directs the Centre for European Governance and holds the Jean Monnet Chair in Political Economy. He is leading on the ERC advanced research project PROTEGO – Procedural Tools for Effective Governance (2016–2020).

Detlef Sack is Associate Professor for Comparative Politics at the Faculty for Sociology at the University of Bielefeld. His research focuses on the governance of state–market relations, comparative public policy research and theories of democracy.

E. K. Sarter, whose research interests are in the field of public policy, social and economic policies, governance of public services, and the strategic use of public procurement, is Research Fellow at the University of South Wales.

Sabine Saurugger is Professor of Political Science, Research Dean at Sciences Po Grenoble and Research Fellow at PACTE. Her research focuses on theories of European integration, European policy analysis and the politics of law in the EU.

Vivien A. Schmidt is Jean Monnet Professor of European Integration and Professor of International Relations and Political Science in the Pardee School of Global Studies at Boston University. Her areas of research are European political economy, institutions and democracy as well as methodological theory, focused on discursive institutionalism.

Miranda A. Schreurs is Professor of Environment and Climate Policy at the Bavarian School of Public Policy, Technical University of Munich. Her research focuses on climate change, low carbon energy transitions, and environmental movements in Europe, the United States, and Asia. She is currently Vice Chair of the European Environment and Sustainable Development Advisory Councils. She co-chairs the National Committee to Monitor the Nuclear Waste Management Site Location Search in Germany and was a member of the Ethics Committee for a Secure Energy Future set up by the German Chancellor Angela Merkel in reaction to the Fukushima nuclear accident.

Kathia Serrano Velarde is a Professor for Political Sociology at Heidelberg University. Her research focuses on the transformation processes in European education and research. She currently works on research projects dealing with the governance of science, lifelong learning strategies and the influence of expert knowledge in policy work.

Holger Straßheim is Assistant Professor at the Department of Social Sciences at Humboldt University Berlin. His research focuses on regulation and governance, comparative policy analysis (especially welfare, employment policy, food safety, consumer policy, energy policy), expertise and democracy, organisations and networks and the role of time in public policy. He is co-editor of the Advances in Critical Policy Analysis Book Series, Edward Elgar Publishing.

Matthias Weber is head of the Center for Innovation Systems and Policy of the AIT, Austrian Institute of Technology in Vienna. His research work focuses on national and European research and innovation policy in a range of different domains, and on the role of foresight in the governance of social change.

Karsten Zimmermann is Professor for European Planning Cultures at the Faculty of Spatial Planning at the Technical University of Dortmund. He is currently also Dean of this Faculty and was between 2013 and 2017 the President of the European Urban Research Association (EURA). He is educated as a political scientist and dedicated most of his academic work to the study of cities and regions.