
Acknowledgments

The investigation of social capital and its relationship with health is pursued by researchers throughout the globe and has the potential to impact communities and people everywhere. We are proud to present this volume and are grateful to our contributors for bringing their various academic disciplines and their experiences with communities worldwide.

We are grateful to the hard work of Donna Folland in editing revisions, coordinating communications, and unifying formats to assure readability. She also provided spirit to this investment in social capital research.

