

Contributors

EDITORS

Philippe Le Billon (MBA Paris, PhD Oxford) is a Professor at the University of British Columbia (UBC) with the Department of Geography and the Liu Institute for Global Issues, Canada. Before joining UBC, he was a Research Associate at the Overseas Development Institute (ODI) and the International Institute for Strategic Studies (IISS), with fieldwork in Angola, Cambodia, Iraq, Sierra Leone, South Sudan, and the former Yugoslavia. He focuses on relations between the environment, development and security, with an empirical focus on primary commodities. His books include Wars of Plunder: Conflicts, Profits and the Politics of Resources (Oxford University Press, 2013), and Oil (with G. Bridge, Polity Press, 2012).

Aled Williams (MA Kent) is a Senior Advisor at the U4 Anti-Corruption Resource Centre at the Chr. Michelsen Institute (CMI), Norway. He was previously a Senior Research Coordinator at Transparency International (TI) and is currently a PhD candidate at the Department of Development Studies, SOAS University of London. He researches the politics of development, corruption and natural resources, applying political economy and political ecology approaches to the forest sector and extractive industries, with fieldwork in Indonesia. He is co-editor of the book Corruption, Grabbing and Development: Real World Challenges (with T. Søreide, Edward Elgar Publishing, 2014).

AUTHORS

Inge Amundsen (MA Oslo, PhD Tromsø) is a political scientist and Senior Researcher at the Chr. Michelsen Institute (CMI) focusing on democratic institutionalization, parliaments, political parties, political corruption and natural resources (petroleum resource management and revenue management). His main study area is francophone West Africa, Ghana, Angola, Tanzania, Nigeria, and Bangladesh. Amundsen was Research Director at CMI from 2000 to 2003 and Director of the U4 Anti-Corruption Resource Centre from 2002 to 2006.

Festus Boamah (PhD Bergen) is an Assistant Professor and post-doctoral researcher at the University of Bayreuth, Germany. His research has focused on large-scale biofuel land deals and the implications for resource entitlements, social institutions and state–society relations in Africa. He also examines why particular non-state actors have evolved to bear ‘state-like’ qualities in the processes of large-scale land allocations. Boamah’s current research focuses on adaptations to solar energy technology in Ghana and Kenya.

Connor Joseph Cavanagh is a PhD candidate in the Department of International Environment and Development Studies (Noragric) at the Norwegian University of Life Sciences, and a Research Fellow in Science Domain 5 – Ecosystem Services at the World Agroforestry Centre (ICRAF) in Nairobi. Connor’s research examines tensions and contradictions within processes of uneven conservation and development in eastern Africa, with a specific interest on transformations in forest governance. Recent articles have appeared in Forum for Development Studies, Antipode, the Journal of Peasant Studies, Forest Policy and Economics, and Geoforum.

Kendra E. Dupuy (MA Washington, PhD Washington) is a political economist and Advisor at the U4 Anti-Corruption Resource Centre at the Chr. Michelsen Institute (CMI). Her research focuses on resource management in the extractive industries and the forestry sector, particularly corruption, transparency, and accountability in company–community relations, corporate social responsibility and benefit sharing mechanisms, with fieldwork in West Africa. She was previously a researcher at the Peace Research Institute Oslo (PRIO).

Levon Epremian (MA Brunel, MSc NTNU) is a PhD candidate at the Department of Geography at the Norwegian University of Science and Technology (NTNU). His research focuses on the politics of natural resource development, with a particular focus on governance and policy interventions designed to promote transparency and accountability in the extractive sectors.

Birthe Eriksen (PhD Bergen) is a Lecturer at the Department of Accounting, Auditing and Law at the Norwegian School of Economics (NHH). Her research focuses on modern labour and industry, particularly corporate governance, legal protection for whistleblowers, corruption, cybercrime, privacy and information security. She is a regular newspaper columnist and has experience as a local politician.

Odd-Helge Fjeldstad (MPhil Bergen, PhD NHH) is an economist and Senior Researcher at the Chr. Michelsen Institute. His research focuses on public financial management, mainly tax reform and revenue administration, including tax evasion, fiscal corruption, capital flight, inter-governmental fiscal relations, and local government taxation. He has served as director of major multidisciplinary research and capacity building programmes, and worked as a consultant for bilateral and multilateral development organizations. Fjeldstad is Extraordinary Professor at the African Tax Institute, University of Pretoria, and Senior Fellow at the International Centre for Tax and Development (ICTD).

Jennifer Jacquet (MSc Cornell, PhD UBC) is an Assistant Professor of Environmental Studies at New York University. Her work focuses on large-scale cooperation dilemmas including climate change and the exploitation of wildlife and fisheries. She is particularly focused on the role of social approval in encouraging cooperation, and is the author of Is Shame Necessary? New Uses for Old Tools (Pantheon Books, 2015).

Jesper Johnsen (MA Copenhagen, PhD Cambridge) is a political scientist and former Senior Advisor at the U4 Anti-Corruption Resource Centre at the Chr. Michelsen Institute (CMI), Norway. His research focuses on public governance and accountability institutions, and public administration reform. He led the governance component of the 'Tanzania as a Future Petro State' research programme at CMI. Johnsen is currently a Policy Analyst at the OECD, working at the Support for Improvement in Governance and Management (SIGMA) programme.

Päivi Lujala (MSc Aalto University, PhD NTNU) is a geographer and Associate Professor at the Norwegian University of Science and Technology (NTNU). Her research focuses on socio-economic vulnerability to natural hazards and climate change, and natural resource management in the context of armed civil conflict and peacebuilding. She currently leads the projects 'From a curse to a blessing? Transparency and accountability in managing high-value natural resource revenues' and 'Quantitative analysis of community resilience' both at NTNU.

Grizelda Mayo-Anda (LLB) is an environmental lawyer and Executive Director of the Environmental Legal Assistance Centre (ELAC), the Philippines. Her work involves legal advocacy to enable citizens to uphold constitutional rights relating to large-scale natural resource extraction and agro-industrial development projects. She is the recipient of several environmental awards.

Joseph Perfect Mrema (MA NMBU) is a PhD candidate in the Department of International Environment and Development Studies at the Norwegian University of Life Sciences (NMBU) and Assistant Lecturer at the Institute of Resource Assessment, University of Dar es Salaam. His research focuses on institutional analysis, environmental governance and political ecology.

Oliver Remy (MSc Environmental Management, Durham) is a PhD candidate studying Chinese investment in Africa with a focus on the forestry sector.

Ussif Rashid Sumaila (PhD Bergen) is Professor of Ocean and Fisheries Economics at the University of British Columbia (UBC) and Director of the Fisheries Economics Research Unit at the UBC Institute for the Oceans and Fisheries. He specializes in bioeconomics, marine ecosystem valuation, and the analysis of global issues such as fisheries subsidies, illegal, unreported and unregulated (IUU) fishing, and the economics of high and deep sea fisheries. He has experience working in fisheries and natural resource projects in Norway, Canada, the North Atlantic region, Namibia and the Southern African region, Ghana and the West African region, Hong Kong and the South China Sea.

Tina Søreide (MA Bergen, PhD NHH) is Professor of Law and Economics at the Norwegian School of Economics (NHH). She was previously a governance expert at the World Bank, a Senior Researcher at the Chr. Michelsen Institute (CMI) and post-doctor in criminal law at the Faculty of Law, University of Bergen. Søreide studies corruption, governance, law enforcement and development. She has published extensively on anti-corruption, her latest book being Corruption and Criminal Justice: Bridging Economic and Legal Perspectives (Edward Elgar, 2016).

Allison Witter (MSc Lund) is a PhD candidate at the University of British Columbia (UBC) Fisheries Centre. Her research focuses on the economic viability and socio-ecological impacts of community supported fisheries.

Tanya Wyatt (MA Eastern Michigan, PhD Kent) is a green criminologist and Reader at Northumbria University. Her research focuses on the illegal wildlife trade, but also smuggling and theft of other natural resources. She was previously a Visiting Fellow at the Australian National University's (ANU) Transnational Environmental Crime Project.

Dieter Zinnbauer (MSc Regensburg, PhD LSE) is Programme Manager for emerging policy issues at Transparency International (TI), Germany, and previously served as Chief Editor of TI's Global Corruption Report. He has also worked as a policy analyst for various international organizations and held Research Fellow positions among others with the Carnegie Council on Ethics and International Affairs in New York, the London School of Economics, and the E.J. Safra Center for Ethics at Harvard Law School.