

Acknowledgements

---

This edited volume is a project of the Chr. Michelsen Institute (CMI) in Bergen, Norway, and the University of British Columbia, Vancouver, Canada. Our aim was to engage with scholars and analysts working on corruption in a variety of resource sectors within our respective institutions and other national and international research settings. We are very pleased with how this collaboration turned out and are extremely grateful to the contributing authors for their willingness to engage with us, comment on each other's work, and meet project deadlines. As editors, we are deeply thankful for the support our project idea received at Edward Elgar Publishing. Particular thanks are due to Alex Pettifer and Tara Gorvine, as well as to the anonymous reviewers who considered an initial proposal. We are grateful to our colleagues at CMI who contributed with support and useful comments. Special thanks go to Ottar Mæstad, Arne Strand, Ivar Kolstad, Arne Wiig, Inge Amundsen, Inge Tvedten, Siri Gloppen and Odd-Helge Fjeldstad, as well as to colleagues at the CMI-hosted U4 Anti-Corruption Resource Centre: Jesper Johnson, Nils Taxell, Kendra Dupuy, Sofie Schütte, Fredrik Eriksson and Boris Divjak. At SOAS University of London, where Aled pursues his PhD, Peter Mollinga, Rosaleen Duffy, Leandro Vergara-Camus, Misha Velthuis, Giulia Baldinelli, Mohammed Hoque, Amrita Lamba, and Musa Mckee at the Department of Development Studies have been sources of support and feedback on political ecology and critical realist debates. At the University of British Columbia, we would like to thank Max Cameron, Hollie Grant, Rashid Sumaila and Mark Warren. Warm thanks go to Tina Søreide, Heather Marquette, Paul Heywood, Dominik Zaum, Christine Cheng, Paul Robbins, Fiona Meehan, Finn Heinrich, Dieter Zinnbauer, Eleanor Fisher, Elizabeth Hart, Alina Rocha Menocal, Chukwumerije Okereke and André Standing for insightful discussions on new directions in corruption research during 2015–2016.