Contributors

Editor

Loretta Lees (FAcSS, FRSA) is Professor of Human Geography in the School of Geography, Geology and the Environment at the University of Leicester, UK, where she is Co-director of the Critical and Creative Geographies Research Group. She is internationally known for her research on gentrification/urban regeneration, global urbanism, urban policy, urban public space, architecture and urban social theory (see her TEDxBrixton talk https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=gMz1x5_yF2Q). Since 2009 she has co-organised The Urban Salon: A London forum for architecture, cities and international urbanism (see http://www.theurbansalon.org/) and since 2016 the Leicester Urban Observatory (www.leicesterurbanobservatory.wordpress.com/). She is the (co) author/(co)editor of eleven books including Gentrification (2008, Routledge) and The Gentrification Reader (2010, Routledge) with Tom Slater and Elvin Wyly, and Planetary Gentrification (2016, Polity) and Global Gentrifications: Uneven Development and Displacement (2015, Policy Press) with Hyun Bang Shin and Ernesto López-Morales. Her scholar-activist work on gentrification can be seen in https://justspace.org.uk/2014/06/19/staying-put-an-anti-gentrification-handbook-for-council-estates-in-london/

With

Martin Phillips is Professor of Human Geography in the School of Geography, Geology and the Environment at the University of Leicester, UK, where he is Co-director of the Critical and Creative Geographies Research Group. His research interests include rural social and cultural geographies, including those related to rural gentrification and rural class analysis. This research includes the comparative study of rural gentrification in France, the United Kingdom and the United States. His recent work also includes research on the environmental dimensions of rural gentrification, rural energy geographies, and climate change mitigation and adaptation in rural communities.

Contributors

Sandra Annunziata is a Lecturer in Urbanism and Urban Theory in the Department of Architecture, University of Roma Tre, Rome, Italy, and in European Urbanism in the Cornell in Rome Study Abroad Program of the College of Architecture, Art, and Planning, Cornell University. She was recently a Marie Curie Fellow at the University of Leicester where she completed a two-year, EU-funded project with Loretta Lees on anti-gentrification policies and practices in three southern European cities – Rome, Madrid and Athens. The research involved working with groups resisting gentrification in all three cities. She has guest edited a special issue of UrbanisticaTre on anti-gentrification practices in European cities.

Eduardo Ascensão is a postdoctoral researcher at the Centro de Estudos Geográficos, University of Lisbon, Portugal. An anthropologist and urban geographer, his research is on urban informality, housing and postcolonialism in Portuguese-speaking countries. He has published in the International Journal of Urban and Regional Research, CITY and the edited volume Global Gentrifications, amongst others.

Michaela Benson is a Reader in Sociology at Goldsmiths, University of London, UK. She is known for her contributions to the sociology of migration and her research on class, home, identity and belonging. She is the author of The British in Rural France (2011, Manchester University Press), co-author of The Middle Classes and the City (2015, Palgrave), and co-editor of the volumes Lifestyle Migration (2009, Ashgate), and Understanding Lifestyle Migration (2015, Palgrave).

Willem Boterman is an Assistant Professor in Urban Geography at the University of Amsterdam, the Netherlands. His PhD thesis was on middle-class families in Amsterdam. His current research focuses on class, school choice and the links between school segregation and residential segregation.

Susannah Bunce is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Human Geography and City Studies, University of Toronto, Scarborough, Canada. She recently completed a comparative study of urban community land trust organizations in Canada, the United States, and the United Kingdom.

Agustín Cocola-Gant is a post-doctoral researcher at the Centre of Geographical Studies, University of Lisbon, Portugal. His research focuses on the political economy of cities and pays particular attention to gentrification, displacement, tourism, architectural heritage and historical urban geography. His current project examines the relationship between tourism and gentrification, in particular exploring the social impacts caused by the growth of tourism in residential urban areas. He is author of the book El barrio Gótico de Barcelona. Planificación del pasado e imagen de marca (2011, second edition 2014) in which he explores the recreation of a historic area fuelled by the desire to display an idealised Catalan past and promote Barcelona as a tourist destination.

Mark Davidson is an Associate Professor of Geography at Clark University, USA. He is an urban geographer whose research interests span gentrification, urban policy, sustainability, mega-events and social theory. His current research is examining the impacts of municipal bankruptcies in the United States and includes an attempt to re-theorise critical urban theory. He has held fellowships at the Nelson A. Rockefeller Center for Public Policy and Social Science, Dartmouth College, and the Urban Research Centre, University of Western Sydney.

Freek de Haan is a researcher in the Department of Geography, Planning and Environment at the Nijmegen School of Management, Radboud University, the Netherlands. As part of a European-funded project (JPI Urban Europe, beyondgentrification.com), his research investigates gentrification processes in Arnhem, Vienna and Istanbul, applying relational and practice approaches to themes of demographics, planning, commerce and real estate. Apart from research, he is active in senior citizen education (HOVO Rotterdam), directing collective experiments in technical democracy Young@Mind: Invisible Rotterdam (2015–2016) and Young@Mind: Unhuman Rotterdam (2017).

Geoffrey DeVerteuil is a Senior Lecturer in the School of Geography and Planning at Cardiff University, UK. His research is at the intersection of inequality, its spatial expressions and its management within cities. He is interested more specifically in inequality as it manifests itself in terms of mental health, substance abuse treatment, homelessness, precarious migrants and the voluntary sector. More recently, he has focused on the nexus of gentrification, service hubs, immigration and cosmopolitanism/parochialism in global cities such as London and Los Angeles.

Petra Doan is Professor of Urban and Regional Planning at Florida State University, USA. She has published on international planning as well as planning for marginalised communities, with a special focus on lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgendered individuals. Several of her papers explore trans gendered perceptions of cities and public spaces and others examine the development of LGBTQ spaces in urban areas. In 2011 her edited book, Querying Planning: Challenging Heteronormative Assumptions and Reframing Planning Practice, was published by Ashgate. In Spring 2015 Routledge published her second edited volume, Planning and LGBTQ Communities: The Need for Inclusive Queer Spaces.

Melissa Fernández Arrigoitia is an urban sociologist and Lecturer in Urban Futures at the University of Lancaster, UK. Her interdisciplinary work focuses primarily on housing and critical and feminist geographies of the home. She has pursued a range of questions regarding urban belonging and exclusion in the UK, Europe, Latin America, South Asia and the Caribbean; including the construction of urban ‘others’ during a contested social housing demolition process in Puerto Rico. Her most recent strands of investigation have looked at housing as contested objects of ‘value’ that are being mobilised with and through ‘crisis’ to re-produce traditional and alternative notions of home and urban citizenship. This includes a long-term ethnography into the production of alternative home futures and collaborative, community-led practices, notably senior co-housing, in London. She co-edited (with Katherine Brickell and Alexander Vasudevan) Geographies of Forced Eviction: Dispossession, Violence, Insecurity (2017, Palgrave).

Shenjing He is Associate Professor in the Department of Urban Planning and Design at The University of Hong Kong, China. Her primary research interests focus on urban redevelopment/gentrification, housing differentiation and socio-spatial inequality, rural-urban migration and urban poverty. Shenjing has published more than 80 journal articles and book chapters in English and Chinese. She is the co-author/co-editor of Urban Poverty in China (2010, Edward Elgar), Locating Right to the City in the Global South (2013, Routledge), Urban Living: Mobility, Sociability, and Wellbeing (2016, Springer), and Changing China: Migration, Communities and Governance in Cities (2016, Routledge). She is the Chinese editor of Urban Studies.

Cody Hochstenbach is a PhD candidate in Urban Geography at the University of Amsterdam, the Netherlands. His PhD thesis investigates gentrification and socio-spatial inequalities from a demographic and life-course perspective. Other research focuses on urban policies, and on the intergenerational transmission of inequalities.

Phil Hubbard is Professor of Urban Studies in the Department of Geography, King’s College London, UK. His research examines processes of social exclusion and displacement in the city, with a focus on marginal and disadvantaged groups, including sex workers, asylum seekers, working class populations and ethnic minority groups. He is the author of nine books, including Key Ideas in Geography – City (2018, second edition, Routledge) and The Battle for the High Street (2017, Palgrave), which explores the gentrification of local shopping streets.

Tone Huse is a Post Doctoral Fellow at the Tik Centre for Technology, Innovation and Culture, University of Oslo, Norway. Her research concerns the geographies and materialities of politics, how policy is made and what its effects are. Tone has studied this through various projects, spanning political activists’ use of public space, gentrification, postcolonial urbanism, and urban climate politics. She is the author of Everyday Life in the Gentrifying City (2014, Ashgate) and is currently working on issues concerning the economisation of nature.

Juliet Kahne was awarded an MA in Cities and a PhD in Geography from King’s College London, supervised by Loretta Lees, on the topic of gentrification in Brighton and Los Angeles respectively. She works for Projects for Public Spaces in New York City. Juliet has participated in numerous community-focused urban research projects, from monitoring community recovery in the Lower Ninth Ward in New Orleans after Hurricane Katrina, to collaborating on an evaluation of a city-led regeneration scheme in one of London’s economically struggling outer boroughs. Her work has focused on exploring and understanding communities through ethnographic methods.

Chloe Kinton is a Research Associate in the Department of Geography at Loughborough University, UK. Her research interests include rural gentrification, (de-)studentification and geographies of higher education.

Antonia Layard is Professor of Law at the University of Bristol, UK. Her research is in law and geography where she has explored how law, legality and maps construct space, place and ‘the local’. Her book Law, Place and Maps: Balancing Protection and Exclusion will be published by Glasshouse Press, Routledge, in 2018. She has particular interests in ‘urban law’, and the legal provisions and practices involved in largescale regeneration and infrastructure projects. She has published on community-led housing, creative place-making, property, public space, plus housing and localism. She has a special interest in thinking through the legalities of fighting gentrification.

Ernesto López-Morales is an Associate Professor in the Department of Urban Planning, University of Chile, and Associate Researcher in the Centre of Studies of Conflict and Social Cohesion (COES), Chile. His research topics cover land and housing markets, gentrification, public urban infrastructure and land value capture, social contestation and activism, and social self-management of housing production, especially in Latin American cities. He has co-edited Global Gentrifications: Uneven Development and Displacement (2015, Policy Press) and co-authored Planetary Gentrification (2016, Polity Press), besides several recent papers and book chapters.
Hamil Pearsall is an Assistant Professor in the Geography and Urban Studies Department, Temple University, USA. Her research bridges several themes in human-environment and human geography: the social dimension of sustainability, environmental justice and health, and community resilience to environmental and economic stressors. Her recent work has focused on environmental gentrification, the role of vacant land in urban greening efforts, and the impact of environmental justice on urban sustainability planning.

Andy Pratt is Professor of Cultural Economy and Director of the Centre for Culture and the Creative Industries, City, University of London, UK. Andy is an internationally acclaimed expert on the topic of the cultural industries and cities. His research has three strands. The first focuses on the social and economic dynamics of clustering and knowledge exchange. The second strand concerns the definition and measurement of employment in the cultural, or creative, industries. The third concerns cultural governance and policy making at the national, regional and urban scales. Andy is Editor-in-Chief of City, Culture and Society.

Patrick Rérat is a Professor in Geography of Mobilities in the Institute of Geography and Sustainability, University of Lausanne, Switzerland. His research explores urban changes through the lenses of various forms of spatial mobilities such as residential mobility, internal migration and everyday mobility. His recent papers have addressed gentrification, reurbanization, the real estate market, housing choices, the migration trajectories of young graduates, as well as ‘everyday practices’ and spatial capital. He is also an expert for several institutions in planning and a member of the Council for the Organisation of the Territory, a Swiss extra-parliamentary committee.

Clara Rivas-Alonso is a PhD student in Geography at the University of Leicester, UK. Her PhD is an investigation into everyday practices and perceptions of resistance in a neighbourhood in Istanbul under threat from state-led gentrification – Okmeydani. With a masters degree in postcolonial theory she is interested in the more invisible solidarities that escape institutional attempts at rent extraction. She argues that the current global urban condition calls for more innovative methods of resistance.

Bahar Sakızlıoğlu completed her PhD in 2014 at the Urban and Regional Research Center, University of Utrecht, the Netherlands. Her PhD was about the displacement experiences of disadvantaged groups in gentrifying neighbourhoods in Amsterdam and Istanbul. Among her main research interests are displacement, gentrification, accumulation by dispossession, and gendered geographies of gentrification. She has written papers on the politics of displacement and the experiences of disadvantaged people living in gentrifying neighbourhoods. Bahar currently holds an H2020 Marie Curie Research Fellowship in the School of Geography, Geology and the Environment at the University of Leicester, UK, and is researching the mutual construction of gender and space in gentrifying neighbourhoods in Istanbul and Amsterdam.

Hyun Bang Shin is Associate Professor of Geography and Urban Studies at the London School of Economics and Political Science, UK. His research centres on critical analysis of the political economic dynamics of urbanisation, the politics of redevelopment and displacement, gentrification, housing, the right to the city, and mega-events as urban spectacles, with particular attention to Asian cities. He has recently co-edited Global...
Tom Slater is a Reader in Urban Geography at the University of Edinburgh, UK. He has research interests in the institutional arrangements producing and reinforcing urban inequalities, and in the ways in which marginalised urban dwellers organise against injustices visited upon them. He has written extensively on gentrification (notably the co-authored/edited books, Gentrification [2008, Routledge] and The Gentrification Reader [2010, Routledge]), displacement from urban space, territorial stigmatisation, welfare reform, and social movements. Since 2010 he has delivered lectures in 18 different countries on these issues, and his work has been translated into 10 different languages and circulates widely to inform struggles for urban social justice.

Darren Smith is Professor of Human Geography and Associate Dean of Enterprise at Loughborough University, UK. His research interests include rural gentrification, studentification, regeneration, and population change and sub-national family migration. He is Co-editor of Population, Space and Place, and Associate Editor of Journal of Rural Studies. He is Chair of the Organising Committee of the International Conference on Population Geographies (ICPG), Steering Group Member of the IGU Population Commission, and was formerly Chair of the Population Geography Research Group of RGS-IBG (2006–2013).

Jess Steele (OBE) has 25 years’ experience as a local community activist and entrepreneur in Deptford, London and Hastings in the UK, and at national level as Deputy Chief Executive of the British Urban Regeneration Association and Director of Innovation at DTA/Locality, including leading the development and delivery of the Meanwhile Project, the Campaign Against Delinquent Ownership, and the national Community Organisers Programme. She is a part-time PhD student in the School of Geography, Geology and the Environment, University of Leicester, UK, working with Loretta Lees. As Director of Jericho Road Solutions, she provides coaching to neighbourhood groups and community businesses, as well as working with government, funders, corporates and academics on national initiatives to make neighbourhood work easier.

Zhao Zhang is currently an independent scholar based in Mainland China. He received his PhD from University College Dublin, Ireland. He has worked for University College Dublin, The University of Hong Kong and The University of Hong Kong-Shenzhen Institute of Research and Innovation. His research interests lie in scrutinising housing inequalities, urban redevelopment and grassroots resistance to urban social injustice in Mainland China and beyond from the perspective of cultural and political economy. He is also dedicated to examining the impacts of urban housing, fiscal and financial policies on urban residents.