Contributors

Davide Torsello, anthropologist, is Professor of Anthropology and Director of the Center for Integrity in Business and Government, CEU Business School, Hungary. He has extensive experience of ethnographic field research in Japan, Italy and Eastern Europe. He has been studying political and business corruption, focusing in particular on the social and cultural as well as the organizational cultural aspects of the phenomenon including gift-exchange, morality, informality, organizational change and culture. He has published ten books, two of which focus on corruption: The New Environmentalism? Civil Society and Corruption in the Enlarged EU (Ashgate) and Debates on Corruption and Integrity: Perspectives from Europe and the US (Palgrave, co-edited with P. Heywood and P. Hardi). He is the leader of the research grant ANTICORRP EU FP7, Working Package 4 “The Ethnographic Study of Corruption Ideas and Practices”. Email address: torsellod@business.ceu.edu

Muhittin Acar is Professor of Public Administration in the Department of Political Science and Public Administration at Hacettepe University in Ankara, Turkey. He holds a BA from Ankara University, an MPM from Carnegie Mellon University and a PhD from the University of Southern California. His main research interests include transparency, accountability and integrity in governance; collaboration, partnerships and networks; and public policy and management. He has been frequently consulted on these subjects by various national and international organizations, and his work on those themes has appeared in such journals as Nonprofit and Voluntary Sector Quarterly, International Review of Administrative Sciences, American Review of Public Administration, and Crime, Law and Social Change. Email address: acar42@yahoo.com

Claudia Baez Camargo is Head of Governance Research at the Basel Institute on Governance where she is responsible for the development, oversight and management of the Institute’s research activities in the areas of public and global governance. She also works with a broad range of interested stakeholders on consultancy projects aimed at developing context-sensitive strategies to prevent corruption in the public sector. Her current research focuses on East Africa, especially regarding the impact of Corruption in public administration social norms and values on attitudes toward petty corruption and on the role played by informal practices on accentuating corruption risks. Email address: claudia.baez-camargo@baselgovernance.org

Elena Denisova-Schmidt, MBA, is a lecturer at the University of St. Gallen (HSG) in Switzerland. Previously, she has taught and conducted research at the Humboldt University of Berlin, the Kennan Institute of the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars, the German Institute for International and Security Affairs, the UCL School of Slavonic and East European Studies, the Edmond J. Safra Center for Ethics at Harvard University and the Aleksanteri Institute of the University of Helsinki. Before moving into academia, she worked for the VSMPO-AVISMA Corporation in Russia. In her current studies on higher education she has been measuring the effectiveness of anti-corruption campaigns among students through experiments and examining the extent of corruption at BRIC universities. Email address: elena.denisova-schmidt@unisg.ch

Zaira Tiziana Lofranco is Lecturer of Cultural Anthropology at the University of Bergamo (Italy). She was also a research fellow at the same university for five years, during which time she was involved in several projects. Among them was the EU-funded project ANTICORRP EU FP7, Working Package 4 “The Ethnographic Study of Corruption Ideas and Practices”, on which she was in charge of the Bosnian case study and focused her attention on corruption in the public employment system. She also participated in the EastBordNet project, an international network exploring social, moral and material relocations of Europe’s eastern peripheries. Her research interests and work contribute to the analysis of the cultural and social dynamics of Bosnia and Herzegovina as a country involved in post-socialist transformation and post-war globalization. Email address: zaira.lofranco@unibg.it

Nita Luci holds a PhD in Anthropology from the University of Michigan – Ann Arbor. Her PhD thesis is titled “Seeking Independence: Making Nation, Memory and Manhood in Kosovo”. She teaches at the Rochester Institute of Technology and the American University in Kosovo. Her research has focused on topics of gender and manhood, state, post-socialism, nationalism, contemporary art, body, memory and violence. Email address: nluci@aukonline.org

Maria Giulia Pezzi, social anthropologist, is Post-Doctoral Research Fellow at Gran Sasso Science Institute (GSSI) as a member of the social sciences research unit. Her current research focuses on the use of tourism strategies and heritage-making policies as development tools for rural areas in Italy. Before joining GSSI she was a research fellow at Università degli Studi di Bergamo, carrying on field research on anti-corruption practices in Northern Italy as a part of the large-scale EU-funded project ANTICORRP EU FP7, Working Package 4 “The Ethnographic Study of Corruption Ideas and Practices”. Her research interests include economics anthropology with an accent on trust studies, legal anthropology, tourism and urban studies. Email address: giulia.pezzi@gssi.infn.it

Rodrigo Megchún Rivera is Professor at the National School of Anthropology and History (Escuela Nccional de Antropología e Historia) in Mexico City and holds a PhD in Social Sciences with a specialty in Anthropology. He has worked extensively in the Selva Lacandona region of the Mexican state of Chiapas, where he has focused on the relationship of the local communities and the Mexican state as shaped by colonization, development, environmental and land distribution policies. His research interests generally emphasize the configuration of identities and subjectivities with respect to specific governance regimes. Email address: conikle-coy@hotmail.com

Richard Faustine Sambaiga is a social anthropologist lecturing in the Department of Sociology and Anthropology at the University of Dar es Salaam. His major areas of research interest include: social transformation; collective/social action, environmental and natural resource use and management; and sexual and reproductive health, religion and social theory. He serves as the coordinator of research and knowledge exchange for the College of Social Sciences, and is also the coordinator of the Society and Religion Research Centre (SORRECE). He is also a co-director of Integrity Watch, a non-governmental organization dealing with the promotion of accountable governance and the fight against corruption in Tanzania. Email address: rsambaiga@udsm.ac.tz