Contributors

Jonathan V. Beaverstock is Professor of International Management at the University of Bristol, England. Trained as an economic-urban geographer, he has published widely across the social sciences, including world city network studies, and his latest books include The Edward Elgar Handbook on Wealth and the Super-Rich (2016) and The Globalization of Executive Search (2015). He jointly founded the Globalization and World Cities (GaWC) research group and network, and continues to investigate the competitiveness of cities’ knowledge-intensive labour markets and global firms.

Lisa Benton-Short is Chair of the Department of Geography at George Washington (GW) University and a Senior Fellow at the GW Sustainability Collaborative. She is an urban geographer with a general interest in the dynamics of the urban environment with a focus on planning and public space, urban sustainability, globalization and immigration. Recent books include Cities of North America: Contemporary Challenges in U.S. and Canadian Cities (2014) and The National Mall: No Ordinary Public Space (2016).

Gavin Brown is Associate Professor in Human Geography at the University of Leicester, UK. He co-edited The Routledge Research Companion to Geographies of Sex and Sexualities (with Kath Browne, 2016) and is an editor of the journal Social and Cultural Geography. He is currently developing new research on the geopolitics of sexual orientation and gender identity.

James Farrer is Professor of Sociology and Global Studies at Sophia University in Tokyo, Japan specializing in urban sociology in East Asia, with publications focusing on sexuality, nightlife, expatriate communities and urban foodways. These include Opening Up: Youth Sex Culture and Market Reform in Shanghai (2002), Shanghai Nightscapes: A Nocturnal Biography of a Global City (with Andrew Field, 2015) and Globalization and Asian Cuisines: Transnational Networks and Contact Zones (2015).

Oleg Golubchikov is Senior Lecturer in Human Geography at Cardiff University, Wales. His research interests and publications focus on urban political geography, critical and post-socialist studies, energy geography and sustainable cities. His current research and collaborations are in the post-Soviet and BRIC countries, the United Kingdom and Europe. He has advised the United Nations on aspects of urban development and sustainable housing. He has held a number of visiting positions, including currently at the National Research University Higher School of Economics in Moscow.

Andrew Gorman-Murray is a Senior Lecturer in Social Sciences and Leader of the Urban Research Program at Western Sydney University. His research interests include sexual minorities’ experiences of belonging and exclusion in everyday spaces. His work analyses the intersections between queer politics, everyday experience, and urban and regional geographies. His books include Material Geographies of Household Sustainability (with Ruth Lane, 2011), Sexuality, Rurality, and Geography (with Barbara Pini and Lia Bryant, 2013) and Masculinities and Place (with Peter Hopkins, 2014).

Phil Hubbard is Professor of Urban Studies in the Department of Geography at Kings College, London, UK. He writes on the intersections of society, law, culture and aesthetics in the contemporary city, with a particular focus on gentrification and sexualities. His recent books include The Battle for The High Street: Retail Gentrification, Class and Disgust (2016) and Cities and Sexualities (2012).

Tom Hutton is Professor of Urban Studies and City Planning in the Centre for Human Settlements, School of Community and Regional Planning, University of British Columbia. Recent publications include Cities and the Cultural Economy (2015) and Cities and Economic Change (co-edited with Ronan Paddison, 2015).

Ahmed Kanna is Associate Professor of Anthropology and International Studies at University of the Pacific, USA. His books include Dubai, The City as Corporation (2011), Rethinking Global Urbanism (co-edited with Xiangming Chen, 2012) and The Superlative City (2013). His articles and essays have appeared in City, Cultural Anthropology, Journal of Urban Affairs, Jadaliyya and many other publications. He is currently working on the rise of anti-capitalist, in particular Marxist, movements in US urban contexts.
Melissa Keeley is Assistant Professor of Geography and Public Policy at George Washington University. Her research focus is urban sustainability, particularly related to green infrastructure, stormwater management and green buildings. She is the author of numerous peer-reviewed articles on these topics.

Yeong-Hyun Kim is Associate Professor in Geography at Ohio University, USA. Her research interests include globalization, global cities, mega events and international labour migration. She is currently working on a comparative study of the lasting legacies of global sports events in Johannesburg and Seoul.

Lily Kong is Lee Kong Chian Professor of Social Sciences at the Singapore Management University, where she is also Provost. She is a social and cultural geographer, and her recent publications include Religion and Space: Competition, Conflict and Violence in the Contemporary World (with Orlando Woods, 2016), Arts, Culture and the Making of Global Cities: Creating New Urban Landscapes in Asia (with Ching C.-H. and Chou T.-L., 2015) and Food, Foodways and Foodscapes: Culture, Community and Consumption in Post-Colonial Singapore (with Vineeta Sinha, 2016).

Lina Martínez is an Assistant Professor of Public Policy and Director of POLIS (Observatory of Public Policies) Universidad Icesi, Colombia, with a specialization in educational and social policy. Current research focuses on informal workers in Colombia, urban policies and provision of public goods, social mobility and life satisfaction.

David Murakami Wood is Canada Research Chair (Tier II) in Surveillance Studies at Queen’s University in Canada. He is a widely published specialist on the sociology and geography of global surveillance, and security and surveillance in cities from a comparative perspective, with a particular focus on Japan. He is Editor-in-Chief of the international, open-access, peer-reviewed journal Surveillance & Society and a co-founder of the Surveillance Studies Network. His main work, which started in 2014 and runs through to 2019, is a major grant-funded critical study of ‘smart city’ initiatives in Canada, the United States and the United Kingdom.

Catherine J. Nash is a Professor in the Department of Geography and Tourism Studies at Brock University, Canada. Her current research interests include changing urban sexual and gendered landscapes in Toronto; a focus on digital technologies and sexuality in everyday life; new LGBT mobilities; and a consideration of international resistances to LGBT equalities in Canada, Great Britain and Australia. Her books include Queer Methods and Methodologies (with K. Browne, 2010) and An Introduction to Human Geography (with E. Fouberg, A. Murphy and H. de Blij, 2015).

Linda Peake is Professor in the Urban Studies program in the Department of Social Science, York University, Toronto, Canada. Her most recent edited books include Rethinking Feminist Interventions into the Urban (with Martina Reiker, 2013) and Urbanization in a Global Context (with Alison Bain, 2017). She has published in a wide range of academic journals and is a previous editor of Gender, Place and Culture: A Journal of Feminist Geography.

Edgar Pieterse is founding director of the African Centre for Cities (ACC) at the University of Cape Town and holder of the NRF South African Research Chair in Urban Policy. His most recent co-edited books are African Cities Reader III: Land, Property and Value (with Ntone Edjabe, 2015), Africa's Urban Revolution (with Susan Parnell, 2014) and Rogue Urbanism: Emergent African Cities (with AbdouMaliq Simone, 2013).

Bill Randolph is Professor and Director of the City Futures Research Centre at UNSW Sydney. He has 35 years' experience as a researcher on housing and urban policy issues in the academic, government, non-government and private sectors, and holds a PhD from the London School of Economics.

Xuefei Ren is Associate Professor of Sociology and Global Urban Studies at Michigan State University, USA. She is the author of two award-winning books: Building Globalization: Transnational Architecture Production in Urban China (2011) and Urban China (2013). She is completing a new book comparing urban governance and citizenship rights in China and India.

John Rennie Short is Professor in the School of Public Policy at University of Maryland, Baltimore County, USA. Recent books include Urban Theory: A Critical Assessment (2015, 2nd ed.), Human Geography (2014), Cities and Nature (with Lisa Benton-Short, 2013, 2nd ed.), Stress Testing the USA (2013), Globalization, Modernity and the City (2012) and Cities and Suburbs, (with Bernadette Hanlon and Thomas J. Vicino, 2010). He publishes in a wide range of academic journals and is a frequent contributor to The Conversation.

Thomas J. Vicino is Associate Professor in the Department of Political Science and School of Public Policy and Urban Affairs at Northeastern University, USA. A former Fulbright Scholar in Brazil, he conducts research on the political economy of metropolitan development. His recent books include Global Migration (2014), Suburban Crossroads (2012) and Cities and Suburbs (with Bernadette Hanlon and John Rennie Short, 2010).

Andrew Wheeler is a Senior Policy Analyst (Healthy Built Environments) in the New South Wales Ministry of Health. He has served as a Director of the Planning Institute of Australia and was Australian Planner of the Year for 2016.

Orlando Woods is an independent scholar, based in London. He is the co-author of Religion and Space: Competition, Conflict and Violence in the Contemporary World (with Lily Kong, 2016) and the author of numerous journal articles and book chapters on the socio-cultural politics of South and Southeast Asia.
Elvin Wyly is Professor of Geography and Chair of the Urban Studies Coordinating Committee at the University of British Columbia, Vancouver, Canada, and a past Editor of the journal Urban Geography. Recent papers include ‘Gentrification on the Planetary Urban Frontier: The Evolution of Turner’s Noösphere’ (Urban Studies), ‘Where is an Author?’ (City), ‘The New Quantitative Revolution’ (Dialogues in Human Geography) and ‘Please Do Not Cite This Article’ (Urban Geography).