

Contributors

Maurice Adams is Professor of General Jurisprudence at Tilburg Law School (the Netherlands). Since 2012 he has also been Professor of Democratic Governance and Rule of Law ('v-fonds' chair) at Tilburg Law School. In his research he has a particular interest in the rule of law (rechtsstaat), in the relation between (constitutional) law and politics, as well as comparative law. Maurice Adams is an elected member of the Académie Internationale de droit comparé.

Koen van Aeken is trained in social and political sciences and international relations and obtained a PhD (University of Antwerp 2002) with a socio-legal dissertation on the reasoning and method of evaluation of legislation. Based at Tilburg Law School and Antwerp University, he is committed to empirical research and teaching on the intersections of law and society. Domains of interests include regulation and governance, participatory governance, empirical research methods for lawyers and a global sociology of law.

Arpan Banerjee is Assistant Professor, Assistant Dean and Executive Director of the Centre for Intellectual Property and Technology Law at Jindal Global Law School, India. His main areas of interest are intellectual property law, media law and entertainment law. He is currently based at Bucerius Law School, Germany, as a recipient of the German Chancellor's Fellowship from the Alexander von Humboldt Foundation.

Emre Bayamloğlu is a researcher at the Tilburg Institute for Law, Technology and Society at Tilburg University. Before joining TILT in 2015, he worked in several universities in Istanbul lecturing and publishing mainly on IP and IT law issues.

Cheryl L Blake is an Attorney Advisor at the Administrative Conference of the United States and served as the 2013–2015 e-Government Fellow with CeRI (Cornell e-Rulemaking Initiative) at Cornell Law School. Prior to joining ACUS, she was a fellow at the Commonwealth Human Rights Initiative in New Delhi, India.

Jaimie Cudmore is a doctoral candidate at McGill University's School of Architecture and a Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada Doctoral Fellow, working under the supervision of Dr Nik Luka, with research interests in service learning, equitable city-making practices as design and spatial justice in Canada and Australia.

Colette Cuijpers is Associate Professor of Law & Technology at the Tilburg Institute for Law, Technology and Society at Tilburg University, and she is Professor of Applied Sciences at the University of Applied Sciences Avans-Fontys faculty of law. She is Program Director of the international Master's program in Law and Technology at Tilburg Law School. Her main areas of research are privacy and data protection, on which she has published widely.

Andrea Dumas obtained her Master of Urban Planning degree at McGill University. She is currently a Project Analyst at Live, Work, Learn, Play, a real estate development firm dedicated to creating iconic and thriving mixed-use neighbourhoods. Driven by her passion for all things urban, as well as her strong desire to positively impact communities by instilling a resilient and inclusive sense of place for citizens, she strives to create places that are for people and by people.

Cynthia R Farina is the McRoberts Research Professor in Administration of the Law at the Cornell Law School and principal researcher in CeRI (Cornell e-Rulemaking Initiative). Her scholarship and teaching focus on administrative law and electronic government, the presidency and separation of powers. She is a Senior Fellow of the Administrative Conference of the United States.

Marie-José Garot is Faculty Vice-Dean and Professor at IE Law School (Madrid, Spain) where she teaches European Union Law. Her main areas of research concern the institutional architecture of the European Union as well as European Citizenship and free movement of persons.

Thorvaldur Gylfason is Professor of Economics at the University of Iceland. He has published some 200 scholarly articles and 20 books as well as 800 shorter articles. Also, he has composed some 90 songs for voice and piano as well as mixed choir. He was one of 25 representatives in Iceland's Constitutional Council in session from 1 April to 29 July 2011, elected by the nation and appointed by Parliament to revise Iceland's Constitution.

Hoi L Kong is Associate Professor at McGill University's Faculty of Law. He researches and teaches broadly in areas of administrative and constitutional law and public law theory, and has worked on various interdisciplinary research projects. He is co-director of the Australian National University–McGill University Program on Deliberative Governance and Law.

Eduardo Alves Lazzari holds a Bachelor's degree in international relations and social sciences and a Master's degree in political science from the University of São Paulo (USP). He is currently a doctoral candidate in political science at USP.

Peter L Lindseth is the Olimpiad S Ioffe Professor of International and Comparative Law at the University of Connecticut School of Law (USA), where he is also Director of International Programs. He was previously KNAW Visiting Professor at the University of Tilburg and is currently Visiting Professor in the School of Law at Queen Mary University of London as well as Research Associate in the Centre for International Studies at the University of Oxford.

Nik Luka is Associate Professor in the Schools of Architecture and Urban Planning at McGill University. His work explores reurbanism – an umbrella term for the critical study of (re)urban(izing) landscapes as well as practical work done at the nexus of urban design and civil society.

Anne Meuwese is Professor of European and Comparative Public Law at Tilburg Law School. Her research focuses on transnational cooperation and public law and European administrative law. She holds a M. Jur. Degree from the University of Oxford and a PhD from Leiden University.

Luiz Fernando Marrey Moncau is the head of the Center for Technology and Society at Fundação Getulio Vargas Law School in Rio de Janeiro.

Chaebong Nam is a postdoctoral fellow at the Department of Government at Harvard University. Previously she worked for CeRI (Cornell e-Rulemaking Initiative). Her research interests revolve around youth civic engagement, digital media and learning, youth participatory research, online public discussion and community informatics. She received a BA and MA in education from Seoul National University in Korea and a PhD in education from the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign.

Mary Newhart is an adjunct professor of law in the Cornell Law School and the Executive Director of CeRI (Cornell e-Rulemaking Initiative). Her research focuses on discovering how information and communication technologies can be used most effectively to engender broader, better participation in complex public policymaking. This research utilizes her conflict resolution background, through the application of traditional group facilitation techniques to the online environment and the use of technology to support asynchronous consensus building.

Ugo Pagallo is a former lawyer and current Professor of Jurisprudence at the Department of Law, University of Turin (Italy); Faculty Fellow at the Center for Transnational Legal Studies in London, UK and Vice-President of the Italian Association of Legal Informatics. Author of 11 monographs and numerous essays in scholarly journals and book chapters, his main interests are AI & law, network and legal theory, robotics, and information technology law (specially data protection law and copyright).

Ingolf Pernice was Professor for Public, European and Public International Law at the Humboldt-University of Berlin until 2015. Since 2011 he has been director of the Alexander von Humboldt Institute for Internet and Society (HIIG), responsible for the sector 'Global Constitutionalism and the Internet'. His main areas of research are European and global constitutional law, internet and data protection law, and questions of digital public administration.

Corien Prins is full Professor of Law and Informatisation at the Tilburg Institute for Law, Technology and Society. She combines this position with chairing the Netherlands Scientific Council for Government Policy, the strategic advisory board of the Dutch cabinet. She was among others responsible for the Council's report 'iGovernment' on digitalization in the public sector. In her research Corien focuses on privacy, data protection, electronic government and the use of big data in the judiciary.

Roxana Radu is Internet Governance Associate at DiploFoundation. She currently serves as chair of Internet Society – Switzerland Chapter and is a non-resident fellow at the Center for Media, Data and Society, Central European University. She received her PhD from the Graduate Institute of International and Development Studies in Geneva. Her research and publications explore international governance and global internet policy-making.

Mônica Rosina is a full professor at Fundação Getúlio Vargas Law School in São Paulo, where she coordinates the Law and Innovation Research Center. Her main areas of expertise include intellectual property, new technologies and law, internet regulation and digital democracy.

Rivka Weill is a professor of law at the Radzyner Law School. She received her JSD and LLM from Yale Law School. She holds Bachelor's degrees in both law and accounting. She clerked for President Aharon Barak of the Israeli Supreme Court. Her areas of expertise are constitutional law and administrative law, with a focus on both theoretical and comparative aspects of the fields. Professor Weill's articles have been published in leading law journals in the US, the UK and Israel.

Nicolo Zingales is Lecturer in Competition and Information Law at Sussex Law School, a research associate at the Tilburg Institute for Law,

Technology and Society, an extramural fellow at the Tilburg Law and Economics Center, and an affiliate scholar at the Center for Internet and Society at Stanford Law School. He researches on various aspects of internet governance and regulation, including multistakeholder processes, data-driven innovation and the roles and responsibilities of online intermediaries.

Bo Zhao is a Chinese legal philosopher trained at the Faculty of Law, University of Groningen (LLM and PhD). Having lived and worked in the Netherlands since 2003, his comparative research covers data and data privacy protection, privacy law and defamation law, and Chinese law development.