

Contributors

EDITORS

Frank Fagan is Associate Professor of Law at EDHEC Business School in France. He has written extensively on the timing of lawmaking. His work focuses on law and economics, public choice, intellectual property, contracts, and torts. His previous book, Law and the Limits of Government, examines the choice between temporary versus permanent lawmaking.

Saul Levmore is the William B. Graham Distinguished Service Professor of Law at the University of Chicago Law School. He is a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. His writing cuts across many fields including torts, corporations, comparative law, corporate tax, and commercial law. His recent work focuses on public choice, criminal law, copyright, inequality, and retirement policy.

CONTRIBUTORS

Eric Alston is a Research Associate with the Comparative Constitutions Project. His scholarship focuses on constitutional drafting and implementation, law and economics, and 19th-century American legal and economic history.

Daniel A. Farber is the Sho Sato Professor of Law and Co-Director of the Center for Law, Energy, and the Environment at the University of California, Berkeley. He is a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. Professor Farber has written across many fields including cost-benefit analysis, climate change, constitutional law, environmental law and public choice.

Jacob E. Gersen is Professor of Law at Harvard Law School, Affiliate Professor in the Department of Government, and the Founder and Director of the Food Law Lab at Harvard Law School.

Tom Ginsburg is the Leo Spitz Professor of International Law and Professor of Political Science at the University of Chicago and a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

David Kamin is Associate Professor at New York University School of Law. His scholarship focuses on tax, budget policy, and law and economics. Prior to joining NYU Law, Professor Kamin worked in President Obama's administration.

Anthony Niblett is Assistant Professor at the University of Toronto Faculty of Law and the Canada Research Chair in Law, Economics, and Innovation. He researches in the fields of law and economics, contracts, and judicial behavior. Before joining the University of Toronto, Professor Niblett was a Bigelow Fellow and Lecturer-in-Law at the University of Chicago Law School.

Martha C. Nussbaum is Ernst Freund Distinguished Service Professor of Law and Ethics at the University of Chicago, a chair that includes appointments in the law school and the philosophy department. Her most recent book is Anger and Forgiveness: Resentment, Generosity, Justice (2016).

Eric A. Posner is Kirkland and Ellis Distinguished Service Professor of Law and Arthur and Esther Kane Research Chair. His current research interests are international law and constitutional law. He is a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and a member of the American Law Institute.

J. Mark Ramseyer is Mitsubishi Professor of Japanese Legal Studies at Harvard Law School. He has written extensively on topics in Japanese law, primarily from a law and economics perspective.

Adam M. Samaha is Professor of Law at New York University School of Law. His work focuses on constitutional law, constitutional theory, and the role of courts in society.

Daniel Shaviro is Wayne Perry Professor of Taxation at New York University School of Law. His scholarship examines tax policy, budget policy, and entitlements issues. He has published books on tax law and social security reform, as well as a novel and an ongoing blog.

Jeannie Suk is the John H. Watson, Jr. Professor of Law at Harvard Law School and a Contributing Writer for New Yorker.com. She is a Guggenheim Fellow. She writes in the areas of criminal law, family law, intellectual property, sexual assault, and Title IX.