Contributors

Erik Baekkeskov is Lecturer of Public Policy and Political Science at The University of Melbourne’s School of Social and Political Sciences. He has previously held research and teaching positions in the United States and Denmark. His work investigates factors that shape public decision- and policy-making. His empirical interests include public health events and public sector reforms. His work has appeared in various edited volumes and in journals including Administration & Society, Disaster Prevention & Management, Governance, Journal of European Public Policy, Policy Sciences and Public Administration.

Geert Bouckaert is full Professor at the KU Leuven Public Governance Institute. He is currently President of the International Institute of Administrative Sciences (IIAS), and is former President of the European Group for Public Administration (EGPA). His main fields of research are (comparative) public management reform, performance management and financial management in public administration.

Betsy Carter is Assistant Professor of Political Science at the University of New Hampshire. She recently spent two years as a researcher at the Max Planck Institute for the Study of Societies in Cologne, Germany, and one year as a lecturer in comparative politics at the University of California Irvine. She earned her PhD in political science at the University of California Berkeley and her MPA from the University of Washington. Her research combines politics with sociology, economics and history to explore the dynamics between politics, producer organization, the construction of taste, and market prices in high value-added sectors. Her current research investigates the political construction of taste and value in the fashion, food, and music sectors, building on her past research on wine markets. Carter’s past professional experience includes consulting for the World Bank and researching as a Visiting Scholar at Collegio Carlo Alberto (University of Turin).

Russell W. Mills is Associate Professor in the Department of Political Science at Bowling Green State University. His research is focused on improving governance, accountability and performance in regulation and crisis management networks. He has received two grants from the IBM Center for the Business of Government to explore the use of voluntary reporting programs by the Federal Aviation Administration. His work has appeared in outlets including Regulation and Governance, The Journal of Public Policy, The Journal of Benefit–Cost Analysis, and Public Administration Review, where his 2012 article on the response to Hurricane Katrina won the Marshall Dimock Award for best lead article in the journal.

Lovisa Näslund is Assistant Professor at Stockholm Business School at Stockholm University and researcher at the Stockholm Centre for Organizational Research (Score). She received her PhD in business administration in 2012 from Stockholm School of Economics. In her research, she has studied the creation of trust in systems and interpersonal relations on markets and across organizational boundaries in professional services and in the agri-food sector. Her research interests also include organizational storytelling, and its impact on organizational change and sensemaking. Her research has been published in journals such as Human Relations, and has been highlighted in The Economist.

Peter Oomsels is Researcher at the KU Leuven Public Governance Institute. He obtained his PhD in Social Sciences with a dissertation on interorganizational trust in the Flemish administration. His fields of research are interorganizational trust, public administration and public management reform. He holds master’s degrees in Public Management and in Policy Economics.

Dorit Rubinstein Reiss is Professor of law at UC Hastings College of the Law. She has researched and published in the areas of comparative and domestic administrative law and regulation, with a focus on agency accountability, and teaches administrative law.

Frédérique Six is Associate Professor of Public Governance at the Vrije Universiteit Amsterdam. Her research focuses on public governance issues and in particular the relation between trust and control. She applies this to regulation and to how (public) professionals are governed. She has published in journals such as Public Management Review, Journal of Management Studies, International Review of Administrative Sciences and Journal of Comparative Policy Analysis, and co-edited The Trust Process (with Bart Nooteboom, Edward Elgar, 2003) and Local Integrity Systems (with Leo Huberts and Frank Anheiraco, Boom, 2008). She is associate editor of the Journal of Trust Research and member of the strategic advisory board of the Netherlands Food and Consumer Product Safety Authority.
Contributors

Kristina Tamm Hallström is Associate Professor in Management at the Stockholm School of Economics and Director of Research at the Stockholm Centre for Organizational Research (Score). She has conducted research on the construction of legitimacy and authority within transnational standard setting and certification and accreditation as auditing practices. Tamm Hallström is the author of Organizing International Standardization (2004, Edward Elgar) and has published articles in journals such as Organization, Global Environmental Politics and Nature+Culture.

Haiko Van der Voort is Assistant Professor at Delft University of Technology, Faculty of Technology, Policy, and Management. His research focuses on regulation and governance in varying institutional environments, such as organizations, markets, nations, and supranational communities. For this he uses theory of both organizations and regulation. He earned his PhD with an extensive study on co-regulation, focusing on operational interaction between public and private regulators. Other topics of study include supranational co-regulation and risk management dialogue between organizations and regulators. He teaches public administration, organization theory, and institutional design for undergraduate students, graduate students and professionals.

Hans Van Ees is founding dean of the University College Groningen and Professor of corporate governance and institutions at the Faculty of Economics and Business of the University of Groningen (the Netherlands). His research deals with corporate governance, theory of business groups, board of directors and sustainable corporate performance. He is associate editor of Corporate Governance: An International Review, and as director of the Corporate Governance Insights Centre of the University of Groningen, involved in executive teaching, consultancy and research for private companies and the Dutch government on the principles of good governance.

Koen Verhoest is Research Professor (BOF/ZAP Hoogleraar) at the Research Group on Public Administration and Management, Department of Political Science at the University of Antwerp, Belgium. His main research interest is on the organizational aspects of public tasks and their (regulatory) governance in multi-level and multi-actor contexts, including the autonomy, control and coordination of (regulatory and other) agencies, the governance of liberalized markets, and the governance of public private partnerships. He has published in journals like Governance, Organization Studies, Review of Public Personnel Administration, Public Management Review, International Public Management Journal, International Review of Administrative Sciences, Public Performance and Management Review,
Trust in regulatory regimes

International Public Management Journal and Transport Reviews. Recent international books include Multi-level regulation in the telecommunications sector; Autonomy and control of state agencies – comparing states and agencies; The coordination of public sector organizations; as well as Government Agencies: Practices and lessons from 30 countries (with others). Since July 2012 he has been co-chair of the ECPR Standing Group on Regulatory Governance together with assoc. Prof. Anne Meuwese (University of Tilburg).